To grasp intelligently the conditions which have brought the most extensive, the most devastating, the most costly war that human history has had to record, the shock of which has shaken the economic fabric of the world, it is necessary at the very outset to discriminate carefully between those events which became the direct provocative cause of the conflict, which merely served to precipitate it, and those more fundamental, basic conditions which for a long time have been smoldering ominously, latent with potential action, in the depths of the volcano which has now burst into eruption.

The immediate or precipitating cause of the embroilment of the great Powers of Europe may be stated briefly as follows:-

A Servian, who doubtless regarded himself as a patriotic regicide, assassinated the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, and the Archduke's consort, the Duchess of Hohenburg, while the royal pair were driving through the streets of Sarajevo, the capital city of Bosnia, a province which some years ago had been annexed to the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

The Austro-Hungarian Government held that the assassination was the direct result of a hostile propaganda born and nurtured by the members of Servian secret societies—a propaganda which the Servian Government tolerated, even if it did not connive at its machinations. Austria charged that the very conspiracy which had resulted in the death of the heir apparent had been organized and effected by accredited chiefs of the Servian frontier service.

These charges and sundry demands of a drastic nature were embodied in an ultimatum which the Austro-Hungarian Government sent to Servia. The assassination occurred on June 28, 1914. The ultimatum was delivered three weeks later, on July 23, 1914.

Commenting upon this State document on the day following, Sir Edward Grey, Foreign Secretary for Great Britain, said:- "The murder of the Archduke and some of the circumstances respecting Servia quoted in the note aroused sympathy with Austria, as was but natural, but at the same time I had never before seen one State address to another independent State a document of so formidable a character. Demand No. 5 would be hardly consistent with the maintenance of Servia's independent sovereignty if it were to mean, as it seemed that it might, that Austria-Hungary was to be invested with a right to appoint officials who would have authority within the frontiers of Servia."

Demand No. 5, to which Sir Edward specifically referred, called upon Servia—"To accept the collaboration in Servia of representatives of the Austro-Hungarian Government in the suppression of the subversive movement directed against the territorial integrity of the Monarchy."

Austria's ultimatum provided that Servia must yield upon all points specified within a period of forty-eight hours. Servia replied, agreeing substantially to nearly all the terms of the ultimatum, but demurring to others, including the demand contained in Article 5. These she offered to submit to the arbitrament of the Hague Peace Tribunal. Servia at the same time appealed for protection and support to the Russian Government, which for racial reasons, as well as for weighty considerations of self interest, had long stood as a guardian Power against aggressions threatening the autonomy of the Balkan States.

Austria-Hungary's answer at the expiration of the time limit was a declaration of war against Serbia, and Austria's forces speedily began a bombardment of Belgrade, the Servian capital. Russia thereupon began the mobilization of her vast army. The German Emperor called upon the Czar to discontinue his warlike preparations and made official inquiries of the French Republic as to what would be the attitude of France, an ally of Russia under the bond of the Triple Entente, in the event of war between Germany and Russia.

GERMANY'S WAR DECLARATIONS.

The responses of France not being satisfactory to the Kaiser, Germany, on August-1, declared war upon both Russia and France. The next day the troops of the Kaiser were overrunning the independent principality of Luxemburg, lying between the German and French frontiers and thus affording a gateway into France. German Armies also speedily invaded Belgium as a highway across to the French border, the German Emperor offering to King Albert, of Belgium, certain guarantees on condition that Belgium would permit without opposition the free passage of the German Armies through his territory.

Belgium's neutrality had been guaranteed for years by treaty compact, to which Germany, France and Great Britain alike were signatory. Belgium, in her hour of need, appealed to Great Britain for protection against invasion, citing the terms of the treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of her domains, and scorning the proffered guarantees of the Kaiser offered as the price of her acquiescence in his plans for penetrating France by the speediest route. Two days later Belgium arrayed itself, with France and Russia, against Germany, and Belgian troops were fighting the advance of the German Armies toward the French borders.

Great Britain did not hesitate long, though German statecraft exhausted every diplomatic expedient to persuade England to hold aloof from the impending conflict. The British Government took the position that England was bound to stand beside Russia and France, her allies in the Triple Entente, but that she was especially bound by solemn treaty obligation to defend the neutrality and inviolability of Belgium against hostile invasion. British statesmen asserted that to hold aloof in such conditions would be not alone to jeopardize England's most vital interests, but would be to place an everlasting stigma upon her fair name.

The German Chancellor frankly admitted that in passing her troops through Belgian territory on their way to French soil, Germany was acting in violation of the treaty guaranteeing Belgian neutrality. The German contention was epitomized in the saying that "necessity knows no law," and in that other axiomatic proverb that "self preservation is the first law of nature"—and also of nations. The German Government held that Russia had been the aggressor, that France was only too willing, with the aid of such a powerful ally, to seize the occasion to attempt to retrieve her ill fortunes of 1870 and to regain the lost provinces of Alsace and Lorraine.

Germany's contention has been that she did not desire war with any Power, that for thirty years the Kaiser has been the foremost conservator of the peace of Europe and that Germany's chief aim has been the peaceful development of the arts and sciences, in which she excels, and the expansion of her splendid resources in industry and commerce; that Germany found herself assailed upon both her eastern and western borders by powerful enemies and that, in that emergency, she was compelled to take such steps as were most expedient for the defence of her own national life.

Among those who excuse the German advance through Belgium it is also a popular declaration that "if Germany had hesitated to utilize that avenue, the French would not have refrained from doing so." This, being a purely hypothetical assumption, may be accepted or dismissed at its precise value in the estimation and judgment of the individual reader.

Whatever may be the merit of these disputations, the British Government refused to assume a neutral attitude. Three days after Germany's declaration of war, Britain cast in her lot with France, Russia and little Belgium against Germany. Later, through England's alliance with Japan, under the terms of which the Mikado was pledged to the defence of Britain's possessions in the Far East, the Japanese Empire also declared war against Germany and began military operations against German interests in China. Within more recent months hostilities have developed between the British and the German colonists in South Africa, some of the Boers, who had been conquered by England, revolting against their new allegiance.

Little Montenegro, small geographically, but with a seasoned army of fighting mountaineers, actuated by motives of mutual self interest, declared for her neighbor and former ally, Serbia, thus tossing into the scale one more fighting factor against the German military establishment.

Here, then, was presented the astounding spectacle of a world plunged into sudden warfare upon no less than three continents, of Europe's greatest nations pitting against each other millions of trained soldiers armed with the most deadly of modern weapons for the annihilation of human life and the wholesale destruction of property. And to the eye of the superficial student of events it might appear that all this cataclysm of horror piled upon horror had come about through the mad act of an irresponsible assassin.

SOME UNDERLYING CAUSES.

Such a conclusion would be unwarranted. Europe had not gone to war to avenge a murdered Archduke. The assassination of the heir to the throne of the Dual Monarchy was merely the spark which lighted the fuse to the mine already heavily charged. Nor is it a fair assumption that the millions of men now arrayed against each other in deadly combat had been simply herded together into the strife, "like dumb, driven cattle," at the mandate of their kings, cabinets or emperors. The spontaneity with which France rushed to arms, abandoning the pursuits of peace to her women, her old men and her boys; the enthusiasm with which the German hosts rallied around their Kaiser at the first call to arms, with the battle cry on their lips, "Deutschland uber Alles!"; the slower, but grim and steady, massing of Britain's strength—all these phenomena disprove the theory that this is merely a war of rival rulers arbitrarily driving their hapless and helpless subjects to the cannon's mouth.

This war is not, in the opinion of well informed students of history, the product of any one man, however highly born under the aegis of the "divine rights of kings." Is it not the making of any group of men, however potential they may have been in imperialistic counsels. It is not primarily a war of cabinets, nor of chancelleries; of hostile dynasties, nor of rival aspirants for military glory. It is a war of the peoples, a war the tap root of which will be found, if the seeker go deep enough, in broadly conflicting policies and antagonistic national interests. The unanimity with which the rank and file of the common people in the countries most directly involved have rushed to the colors is the best proof that they understand, in some measure, at least, that this is a war fraught with issues in the outcome of which they are vitally interested.

For years a cardinal doctrine of socialism has been the denunciation of warfare. Its advocates have preached the doctrines of internationalism and of world peace. In the German Empire the socialists had grown so powerful that their representation is today the strongest single partisan factor numerically in the Imperial Reichstag. Yet, despite their professed abhorrence of war and all its innumerable train of evils, the German socialists to a man had flocked to the colors and are fighting, as they believe, for the preservation and the expansion of the greatness of the Fatherland. And the same may be said essentially of the socialists of France, Austria, Italy and England.

However glibly statesmen and diplomatists may disavow ambition for territorial aggrandizement, this is a war, at bottom, for territorial, commercial, industrial expansion; for the winning and development of colonies into which the overpopulated countries of Europe may divert their surplus population; colonies whereby these peoples may expand their domestic and foreign markets, to which they may ship their products and manufactures and from which, in turn, they may draw added resources for the support of an ever increasing population at home.

So far as concerns Germany and Austria, at least, thoughtful men are disposed to concede that this is a fight not only for the preservation of the majesty of Imperial Germany, but for what the German Emperor himself has called "a place in the sun."

A WAR OF ALLIANCES.

But this is also a war of alliances. In Europe, Germany and Austria-Hungary stood confronting Russia, France and England. The alignment of these two great alliances is a perfectly natural one, though that of Liberal England and Republican France with Autocratic Russia is thought frequently to be an unnatural bond. By references to historical facts it will be the task of the writer further on to sketch in greater detail just what have been the controlling influences, political, commercial and military, which have determined the partnerships of these two great rival alignments of Powers. The seemingly incongruous alliance between Russia, England and France, however, is not so surprising as it might appear, for reasons which may be stated broadly thus:-

The present European war, unlike smaller wars and diplomatic struggles that have preceded it, is not primarily a conflict between political ideals, between democracy and feudalism, or, as Napoleon expressed it, "Republican against Cossack." It is rather a conflict waged by those peoples who are increasing so rapidly that they must have greater territory against those who possess already such territory as they need.

Of the three Powers constituting the Triple Entente, Russia is probably the only one which covets additional territory. And in the case of Russia this is not so much because she requires additional expansion to accommodate her surplus population, nor because she desires better foreign markets, as because she needs an unhampered outlet into warm seas, good harbors wherein her carrying trade will not be blocked by ice six or seven months of the year.

Her allies, England and France, on the other hand, already enjoy that free access to the ocean which Russia desires. Both England and France achieved their national unity at the dawn of modern history, while central Europe—Germany, Austria and Italy—were yet a conglomeration of petty states and principalities. Thus England and France were enabled to explore, to colonize, to reach out and appropriate to themselves the choice spots of the colonial world. They possess already enough room for their increasing population and for their expanding commerce. In the main, therefore, it may be said that France and Great Britain are fighting to retain their grasp upon what they have.

With the Powers of the Triple Alliance—Germany, Austria and Italy—the situation is different. These are the nations which have achieved their national unity only within the memories of men yet living; since the time of Bismarck and Victor Emmanuel. These are the newer Powers, who found when they came to look about for fertile fields of colonial expansion that those parts of the earth most suitable as habitations for white men and most productive as markets for industrial and commercial expansion had been already occupied by their older rivals.

With this primary line of cleavage made clear between the two great alignments now in hostile array, it becomes necessary to study in somewhat more detail the status of each of the several Powers composing the Triple Entente and the Triple Alliance up to the period when those great international bonds between them were cemented. Though the Triple Alliance in its formation antedated the Triple Entente, it appears expedient to consider first the Powers composing the Triple Entente.

POWERS OF THE TRIPLE ENTENTE

Whatever may be said of the fighting qualities of France's reorganized army, or of the crushing effect of the millions of men whom the Czar of Russia can command, the most formidable foe which Germany and Austria have to face is the British Empire.

Within the last three hundred years the English have built up by exploration, colonization and conquest the largest empire in the history of the world. In turn they have defeated Spain, Holland and France, the only Powers which have dared to dispute with them the supremacy of the seas. In the eighteenth century they won from France her colony of Canada, in North America, and the undisputed right to extend their rule over India. During the Napoleonic wars they conquered the Cape of Good Hope from the Dutch and made good their claims to Australia and New Zealand.

Since then they have pushed westward across upper North America to the Pacific, have subdued Hindustan and ringed it about with buffer states and have established in the Union of South Africa one of the most flourishing communities in the world.

England's empire is not only the largest, but is also perhaps the most economically self-sufficient empire on earth today. The British Isles, the source of the race and still the home of a thriving and rapidly increasing population, constitute the industrial, commercial and economic centre of the Empire. The self-governing dominions over seas—Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, all of them located in the temperate zones—afford almost unlimited fields for the expansion of the surplus population, and furnish the wheat, the wool, the gold and other raw materials which go to feed the English at home and to keep their mill wheels turning. They, moreover, together with India, Egypt and other outlying possessions, furnish the mother country with a constant market for her industrial products.

It is obvious, and to no one more than to the English themselves, that this economic self-sufficiency of their Empire is absolutely dependent upon their potential control of the high seas. With that fact ever in mind, they have built not only the greatest merchant marine in the world and the most powerful fleet of war ships with which to protect and defend it, but they have knit their far-flung Empire together by seizing and in most cases fortifying the strategic points along every trade route and waterway.

If, as Napoleon said, "Antwerp is a pistol pointed at the heart of England," it is equally true that the British Isles command the mouth of the Scheldt, and with it that of the Rhine, the Elbe and the Danish Sund itself. Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, Egypt, which commands the Suez Canal; Aden at the other end of the Red Sea, India and Ceylon, the settlements on the Strait of Malacca, Australia and British New Guinea, on either side of Torres Strait; the Fiji and other islands in the South Pacific, and the Falkland Islands commanding the Strait of Magellan—these form that vaunted "thin red line which girdles the globe."

THE FRENCH DOMAINS.

France, England's principal ally in the western theatre of war, has had to bear the brunt of the land fighting, numerically speaking, in that quarter down to the present time. The empire of France is the third which her people have constructed. After having lost all of their North American and East Indian possessions to the English and the whole of the European empire which the first Napoleon had won for them, they have conquered and developed in northern Africa, since 1830, an empire which in extent, at least, is second only to those of England and Russia.

Few persons in this country realize the vast size of this comparatively new French domain. From Cape Verde eastward to the Anglo-Egyptian Soudan is as far as from Salt Lake City to New York, and from the Algerian seaboard to the Belgian Kongo is further than from San Francisco to Chicago. This vast territory, together with the island of Madagascar in the Indian Ocean, which is larger than France itself, and possessions in Indo-China, afford the people ample room for the expansion of a population which, compared with that of Germany, is increasing, but at a much slower rate.

France covets only the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, wrested from her in 1871, and these not so much to accommodate an increasing population, or even because a considerable proportion of their inhabitants remain essentially French, but rather to wipe out the ranking stigma of defeat.

RUSSIA'S BALKED AMBITIONS.

The only Power of the three, comprising the Triple Entente, then, which has a constructive program, is Russia. When Peter the Great ascended the throne of Russia, in 1696, that country had only one outlet to the sea, the port of Archangel, on the White Sea, which was frozen in during most of the year. Gustavus Adolphus and his successors had made of the Baltic a Swedish lake. Poland, then the great Slav Power of central Europe, barred the way to the west, while the Turks and Tartars occupied all the country north of the Black Sea and the Caucasus. Since then Russia's foreign policy has been dominated by the desire for an outlet to the sea.

Peter beat back the Swedes to their own peninsula and founded St. Petersburg, on the Gulf of Finland, only to find, to his chagrin, that he had not yet won for Russia the access to warm waters which he desired she should have. By a succession of wars during the eighteenth century, his successors subdued and assimilated the Tartars and, bit by bit, reduced the Turkish power until, in 1809, after Russia had received the lion's share of Poland, partitioned among Austria, Prussia and herself, she had attained substantially the boundaries she has today.

With the close of the Napoleonic wars, in 1815, two new motives began to act and interact with this dominant desire for a seaport. The Czar is not only the Emperor of all the Russias, but he is at the same time the head of the Greek Orthodox Church, in which capacity he bears a similar relation to the Greek Christians in the Balkans and elsewhere outside his own territorial domains to that which the Sultan, at Constantinople, bears to the Mohammedans outside of Turkey. The French Revolution, moreover, had propagated to the most remote corners of the continent the doctrine of nationality, which taught that the peoples of one race should be under one government. Most of the peoples living in the Balkans, then subject to Turkey, who since then have formed the Balkan States, are Greek Christians and of the Slav race. In accord with these close ties of race and religion, therefore, and actuated by a desire to push still further south-westward, Russia for the last hundred years has insisted upon her right to act as the guardian for these peoples.

When, however, in 1853, Russia renewed her hostilities against the Turks, she found herself confronted by an alliance between England and France, who feared her approach to the Mediterranean and therefore came to the Sultan's support. In the Crimean War, which ensued, Russia was defeated and was obliged to dismantle her fortresses and her fleet upon the Black Sea. By the Peace of Paris, England, France and Austria joined in guaranteeing the integrity of the Ottoman Empire.

But, in 1877, after France had been beaten by Germany, public opinion in England was so shocked by the atrocity with which the Porte had attempted to suppress insurrection in Bosnia, Herzegovina and Bulgaria that these Powers held aloof while a Russian Army marched to within sight of the minarets of Constantinople. By the terms of the treaty of San Stefano, which closed the war, Turkey recognized the independence of Roumania, Servia and Montenegro. Bulgaria was made a self-governing State tributary to the Sultan, with almost as extensive a territory as it has today.

CONGRESS OF BERLIN.

Then the western Powers saw fit again to interfere. At the Congress of Berlin, in 1878, the treaty was revised. The greater Bulgaria was shorn of much of its territory and Macedonia was restored to the Turk. What is now Bulgaria was divided into two autonomous States, Eastern Roumelia and Bulgaria proper, on either side of the Balkan Mountains, both to remain nominally Turkish. The independence of Roumania, Servia and Montenegro was reaffirmed, but Roumania was forced to cede to Russia, Bessarabia, a district inhabited by her own people, and to take the Dobrudscha, south of the Danube, as compensation.

The stipulation of this treaty which was fraught with the most momentous consequences was that one which provided that Austria should thenceforth administer the revolted provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and should occupy with military forces the Sanjak of Novibazar, a narrow strip of the Sultan's territory lying between the two new Slav States of Servia and Montenegro. Thenceforth Austria-Hungary became the rival of Russia for influence in the Balkans.

Convinced by this latest reverse that the other European Powers would not consent to a further extension of her own territory toward the Bosphorus, Russia since 1878 has contented herself with strengthening the power of the smaller States of her race in the Balkans.

She has made, however, one more attempt to acquire her much coveted open port. After building the Trans-Siberian Railroad across the vast breadth of her Asiatic empire, she occupied Manchuria and for a time it seemed that in Port Arthur she had realized her hopes. How Japan, feeling her national existence to be at stake, challenged the Russian advance; how, in 1904, she finally resorted to war, destroyed Russia's fleet, captured Port Arthur and defeated the Czar's Army at Mukden are recent history, well within the memories of most readers.

Flung back upon her steppes and extensive plains, which still lack an outlet to the ocean, Russia stands substantially in the position she occupied before the Crimean War. She has remained the protector of the new Slav States in the Balkans and has fondly kept alive the dream that some day she may absorb them, and so, finally reach the warm waters of the Adriatic and the Aegean.

POWERS IN TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

Having thus broadly sketched the history and ambitions of the Powers of the Triple Entente, let us consider their opponents of the other combination—the Triple Alliance. After the European Powers finally had disposed of Napoleon, in 1815, and had rearranged the map of Europe to suit themselves, the territory of central Europe which is now held by the German and Austro-Hungarian Empires and also that which now constitutes the Kingdom of Italy was divided among no less than forty-six independent States.

Germany, as we now have it, included at that time five kingdoms and a collection of lesser States of various sizes and denominations, free cities, duchies, grand duchies, margravates and electorates—a heterogeneous hotch-potch relic of feudal times.

Italy was divided among seven independent States and was, as the diplomatists of that day said, "merely a geographical expression." The strongest individual State was Austria which, from her position in the centre of the group, controlled the destinies of the South-German States; held the Magyars of Hungary and the Bohemians and other Slavic races in subjection and also controlled Lombardy and Venetia, in north Italy. Austria's own interests were against the unification of either Germany or Italy, the consummation of which she succeeded in frustrating until after the middle of the nineteenth century.

It was this influence of Austria and the deterrent effect it had had upon every attempt to achieve German unity down to this time which led Bismarck, the great Chancellor of Prussia, to exclaim:—"Not by speeches and majority votes are the questions of the day decided, but by blood and iron," a phrase which has become famous as a supposed embodiment of the Bismarck military policy.

In pursuance of that policy, in 1866, the great Prussian Chancellor brought about a war between Prussia and Austria. After the complete prostration of her military power at Koniggratz, Austria was forced to withdraw from Germany. Thus freed of the hampering influence of the Hapsburg monarchy, Bismarck formed a confederation of the South-German States, whose entire strength, combined with that of Prussia and the North-German States, he was able four years later to hurl against France. On January 18, 1871 he had the satisfaction of seeing his sovereign, William I, grandfather of the present Kaiser, proclaimed German Emperor, in the palace of Louis XIV, at Versailles.

GROWTH OF GERMANY.

The forty-four years since 1871 have been for Germany a period of industrial and commercial expansion almost unparalleled in the history of any people. Under the protective tariff system, to which she has adhered since 1879, her industries have gained such impetus that she had become the third greatest manufacturing country in the world.

When the present war broke out more than a million of her people were employed in the textile industries alone. Another million were employed in the production of iron ware, machinery and scientific instruments. More than half a million were engaged in the manufacture of wooden ware, while hundreds of thousands of others were occupied in the production of glass, porcelain, earthenware, silk and in the beet sugar industry.

German commerce likewise had grown apace. In 1908 the iron and finished iron goods exported were valued at more than $18,000,000. Without the exclusive markets enjoyed by his French and English competitors, the German merchant, by that same thoroughgoing efficiency which characterizes every aspect of the national life, has succeeded in more than holding his own in South America and in some cases, beating them in their own markets. To accommodate this growing foreign trade Germany had built up a merchant marine which ranked second only to that of England. Before the war more than five thousand ships were flying the German flag, which could be seen in practically every port.

On an area no larger than that of France, Germany is today supporting a population of nearly 65,000,000, as against the 39,000,000 of her neighbor. This population has been increasing at a rate of more than half a million every year. To support these increasing numbers of people Germany must have colonies into which they may expand, or else she must have enlarged markets, so that all may have employment at home. To allow their surplus population to emigrate is, so Germans think, only to strengthen their rivals. Therefore, as Roland G. Usher, in his "Pan-Germanism" points out: "To ask a German whether the expansion of Germany is desirable is merely to ask him whether he believes it desirable from any point of view for the nation to survive."

With this crucial thought of Germany's imperative necessity for expansion fixed carefully in mind, let us consider the status of Italy and Austria-Hungary, her partners in the Triple Alliance.

UNIFICATION OF ITALY.

While Bismarck, William I and Von Moltke were expelling the Austrians from Germany, Cavour and his king, Victor Emmanuel, of Sardinia and Piedmont, together with the patriot Garibaldi, were busy achieving a similar result in Italy. Unlike Bismarck, however, Cavour by wily diplomacy persuaded the French Emperor, Napoleon III, to help him, and it was largely owing to the French victories at Solferino and Magenta that the Austrians were finally expelled from the peninsula.

This circumstance, together with the racial tie of Latin blood which binds her to France and the gratitude of the Italian people and of the House of Savoy toward England for the moral support that country gave to Italy's struggle for national unity, explain in some measure Italy's reluctance to enter the present conflict arrayed against her one-time friends, France and Britain.

Unlike Germany and Italy, Austria-Hungary has not achieved real national unity even yet. Nor is she likely to achieve it for generations to come, for, containing a mixed population of Germans, Italians, Hungarians, Roumanian and Slavic races, Austria-Hungary is, as she has been aptly termed, "The Whirlpool of Europe."

The two principal divisions of the Empire are Austria and Hungary; and, as its name implies, the Austrians, of Teutonic blood, who live in that part of the Empire adjacent to Germany, and the Hungarian Magyars, a race of Asiatic origin who occupy its centre, are the ruling elements in its government. But neither the Germans in Austria nor the Magyars in Hungary form a majority of the population. Around them on the borders of the Empire are the other races, each of them racially affiliated with peoples on the other side of the political boundaries, each of them discontented and ambitious either of gaining for themselves greater power in the central government by creating a multiplicity of capitals, like Vienna and Budapest, or of uniting with their foreign brethren.

Thus, the Italians in Trent and Trieste yearn for union with Italy, the Serbs in Bosnia and Herzegovina for union with Serbia and Montenegro, and the Roumanians of eastern Hungary for union with the independent kingdom of their kinsfolk.

Because of her grave race problem at home, Austria-Hungary has not been able, even during the last fifty years, to devote any of her energies to colonial expansion. She alone of all the great Powers of Europe is without possessions abroad. Crowded out of Germany and Italy by defeat in war, the Hapsburg monarchy has turned since toward the south-east; and when, in 1878, at the Congress of Berlin, the Powers "invited" her to occupy Bosnia and Herzegovina and the Sanjak of Novibazar, she conceived the idea of eventually extending that narrow strip of territory between Serbia and Montenegro until she reached Saloniki on the Aegean.

GENESIS OF THE ALLIANCES.

The reason for the division of Europe into two great armed camps, aligned as they now stand and as they have stood for years before the present war, may be found to a large extent in the peace pacts which Bismarck made with Austria and France respectively. In 1866, although the more militant party opposed him, Bismarck refused to annex any portion of Austria proper. Five years later, however, he made what thoughtful men have considered, in the light of intervening events, a diplomatic blunder by taking Alsace-Lorraine from France. Having done so, he was compelled thereafter to adopt the policy of isolating France, to accomplish which he made proffers of friendship to his old enemy, Austria.

Bismarck's original plan was to form a triple alliance, or Dreikaiserbund, between Germany, Austria-Hungary and Russia and for a time following the Franco-Prussian War it seemed that he was about to succeed. In 1875, however, he threatened France with another war and invasion. This so alarmed Russia that from that time onward she began to incline toward France. The clash between the interests of Russia and Austria in the Balkans finally undid Bismarck's plan. At the Congress of Berlin he was forced to make a choice between those two Powers and finally he cast into the Austrian side of the scale the mighty weight of German favor.

Realizing that this decision had mortally offended Russia, Bismarck, in 1879, arrived at a closer understanding with Austria. The treaty signed October 7, 1879, provided that if either Germany or Austria were attacked by Russia, the two should be bound "to lend each other reciprocal aid with the whole of their military power and, subsequently, to conclude no peace except conjointly and in agreement."

Italy's motives for joining the Triple Alliance were intimately associated with her colonial ambitions in northern Africa. Directly across the Mediterranean, only a hundred miles from Sicily, is Tunis, a country whose European population was in 1881, and still is, largely Italian. This country Italy had marked for her own. She was gravely offended when, in that year, the French, having thoroughly conquered Algeria and its hinterland, suddenly seized Tunis. Aggrieved at France and with an eye on Tripoli, as a possible compensation for the loss of Tunis, Italy, in 1882, joined Germany and Austria, thus forming the Triple Alliance.

The text of the treaty of alliance has never been published, but it is generally understood to have been a purely defensive compact modeled after that between Germany and Austria, which it superseded. Italy, at least, has so averred in refraining from joining her treaty allies in active hostilities of the present war.

FRENCH ISOLATION ENDED.

Having sketched those influences which brought into harmony the Powers constituting the Triple Alliance, let us now note the evolution of the Triple Entente, that other great combination brought into being as a countercheck upon the first.

For twenty years after her crushing defeat by Germany, France remained, as Bismarck intended she should remain, almost diplomatically isolated. From the year 1871 onward, however, Russia, chagrined at the check which Germany and Austria had placed upon her ambitions to acquire better harbors, and France fearful of further aggressions at the hands of Germany, began to support each other. In 1891 considerations of mutual protection against the then powerful Triple Alliance, led France and Russia to forget their past wars, ignore their divergent political ideals, and form a counterbalancing Dual Alliance.

Perhaps an equally potent factor in the consummation of this alliance may be found in the economic tie which had been formed between the two countries, for during the last quarter of a century French bankers and capitalists have invested millions of francs in the development of Russia's natural resources, in addition to financing the administration of her government and the prosecution of her wars.

It is clear therefore, that, despite the widely divergent political ideals between republican France and autocratic Russia, there were strong reasons of mutual interest for bringing them into the same camp.

From the Peace of Paris, which closed the Crimean war in 1858 until after the close of the century England maintained in European politics a position of "splendid isolation." For years she pursued a policy of supporting now one of the continental combinations and then the other and she did so usually with decisive effect. England's colonial interests in Asia and Africa conflicted with those of Russia and France. She had feared the encroachment of Russia upon India for generations of time and had fortified the passes of the Hindu Kush against her. Her statesmen had bolstered up the tottering fabric of the Turkish Empire as a buffer between Russia and the Mediterranean, because they feared Russia's approach toward Constantinople would threaten their cherished route to the East.

Furthermore, Britain's interests in Egypt and the Soudan, during the last two decades of the nineteenth century, so conflicted with those of France that no statesmen of that period could have predicted the formation of a Triple Entente between these three Powers which should effectively counterbalance and eventually outlast the integrity of the Triple Alliance.

The Entente Cordiale between England and France dates from 1898. In that year the French outposts, pushing eastward into the Soudan, came face to face one day with Kitchen-er's men. The situation was delicate, and for a time the two nations were on the verge of war. But they did not go to war, because each had a wholesome fear of the formidable and growing military and naval prowess of Germany.

The situation was as it has been felicitously described by William M. Fullerton, in his "Problems of Power." England and France were in the position of two men who, having rolled up their sleeves, are about to fight, but who, hearing a suppressed chuckle behind them, turn around to see the sardonic grin of their neighbor and so forget their own grievances.

So England and France, although hereditary enemies and rivals in colonial expansion, recognizing that their most vital interests were one and the same, arrived at an understanding respecting their spheres of influence in Africa. Through the tactful offices of M. Delcasse and the late King Edward VII, of England, the bond was strengthened until, in 1904, the two nations signed a treaty agreeing to submit to arbitration all future differences which might arise between them.

Since then, although the integrity of the compact binding England, France and Russia has been menaced at times, as in 1905, when the Russian fleet fired on the British trawlers in the North Sea, the bond has grown steadily firmer. Since 1911, when England openly supported France in the Morocco controversy, while never a written pact, the Entente Cordiale, as it is called, has amounted practically to an alliance between the two.

Just how the Anglo-Russian entente was brought about finally is a secret which diplomacy has not yet revealed to history. Russia's defeat in the Far East probably did much to alleviate the fear of Englishmen for the integrity of their Asiatic holdings. This and their common bonds with France, together with the general fear of Germany's growing power on land and sea, brought England and Russia together. The resultant Triple Entente, unlike the Triple Alliance, was not a formal pact, but was somewhat of the nature of "a gentlemen's agreement," the purport or scope of which was not definitely known until Sir Edward Grey defined England's position just before the outbreak of war.

ALLIANCE WITH JAPAN.

In the present war Japan is fighting the battles of the Triple Entente in the Far East. The explanation of her position is to be found in the intervention of three of the European Powers—France, Russia and Germany—who, in 1895 dispossessed Japan of Port Arthur, an important part of the spoils of a successful war which the Mikado's Armies had waged against China. When, within two years thereafter Germany seized Kiauchau and Russia herself occupied Port Arthur, Japan felt that the solicitude which these Powers had manifested for the integrity of China and Korea had not been devoid of ulterior motives.

Japan, therefore, in 1902, formed a defensive alliance with England, whereby the two Powers agreed to support one another in the event that either should be attacked by more than one other Power. Having satisfactorily settled her old score with Russia as a result of the Russo-Japanese war in 1904, Japan, under the terms of her friendly treaty with England, has now entered into the present war against Germany.

STAKES IN THE WAR GAME.

Before taking up the story of the commercial and diplomatic struggles between the component parts of these opposing alliances and of the smaller wars which preceded the present conflict, we must sketch briefly the status and ambitions of those peoples who, by reason of their geographical position or their inferior strength, seem destined to become inevitably the stakes in this gigantic and desperate war game for world supremacy. Such countries include four small States—Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark and Portugal, together with their colonial possessions, the whole of the Mohammedan world and the Balkans.

Belgium, the Netherlands and Denmark occupy strategic positions in northern Europe. Belgium is the natural gateway between Germany and France; the Netherlands controls the mouths of the Scheldt and the Rhine and Denmark holds the same position with relation to the Baltic that Turkey does to the Black Sea. Fully aware of the value of their relatively small territory in Europe, these peoples, despite treaties guaranteeing their neutrality, have looked with apprehension upon what they have regarded as the aggressiveness and increasing power of Germany. Their attitude, however, has been purely a defensive one, for, with the possible exception of the Danes, who lost the Duchies of Schleswig-Holstein to Prussia and Austria, in 1864, these peoples are not ambitious to obtain greater territory.

Each of them already holds colonial possessions. The Dutch East Indies, including Sumatra, Java, Celebes, most of Borneo and many smaller islands of the archipelago, form the second largest colonial empire in that quarter of the globe. The Belgian Kongo, in Africa, embraces the whole of the territory drained by that river, an area of more than 900,000 square miles. Denmark, not being so densely populated as the other States, has no immediate need of greater foreign possessions. She owns, however, in addition to Iceland and Greenland, three islands in the West Indies.

Portugal has little to fear, so far as concerns the integrity of her territory in Europe, but is interested solely with respect to her colonial possessions. The most important of these are Angola on the west coast and Mozambique on the east coast of Africa. If Portugal should take an active part in the war, as she may do under a long standing treaty of alliance with England, Mozambique, which abuts on German East Africa may become the seat of important operations.

The head of the Mohammedan world, as has been said, is the Sultan of Turkey. Although his territorial domains have been in process of dismemberment for more than a century, the Sultan in his religious capacity has retained an influence over the millions of devotees of the Mohammedan faith, who inhabit northern Africa, Arabia, Persia, part of India and islands of the sea beyond. These are the regions in which the French and English have imposed their rule upon subject peoples. In Algeria and Egypt, therefore, these Powers have really given hostages to the Sultan. And it is as much owing to their fear of his power to proclaim a "holy war" of all Islam against the invader as to international jealousy over the domination of the Dardanelles, which he possesses, that Turkey owes her independence today.

THE BALKAN PEOPLES.

With respect to the Balkans, we have sketched already the attempts of Russia to push her way further toward the Aegean and have referred to the more recent designs of Austria-Hungary to extend her territory in the same direction. It remains for us to consider the origin and to some extent, the history and national ambitions of those new States erected on the ruins of the Turkish Power in Europe.

It was the heroic struggle of the Greeks for independence which first awakened the interest of the western Powers in the subject peoples of the Balkan Peninsula. In 1827, when it seemed that the Greeks were about to be exterminated altogether, the combined fleets of England, Russia and France destroyed the Turkish squadron at Navarino. Two years later Greece won her freedom.

In no other section of Europe has the tendency toward race unity been stronger than among the Balkan peoples since they achieved their independence. The modern Greeks are the descendants of the Hellenes, a people who before the Christian era established one of the most brilliant and far-reaching civilizations which history records. They inhabit not only the peninsula south of Macedonia, but also the coast line of Thrace as far eastward as the Dardanelles, and Crete and most of the other islands in the Aegean Sea. Between 1909 and 1912 the Greeks had several additions made to their territories by reason of "advices" which the Powers made to the Sultan. At present they dream of uniting all the peoples of their race under one flag and of reestablishing the Roman Empire of the East, with its capital at Constantinople.

The Bulgarians are not a purely Slavic race. Toward the close of the seventh century the Bulgars, a Turanian race akin to the Huns and Finns, conquered Thrace, a large part of Macedonia and what is now Bulgaria proper, and brought under subjection the Slavs, who had preceded them. But, like so many of the invaders of those times, the Bulgars ultimately were assimilated by the subject race.

As we have told already, the Powers, at the Congress of Berlin, in 1878, erected two autonomous States out of Bulgaria, north and south of the Balkan Mountains respectively. In 1885 the peoples of the two sections, who were of one race, took matters into their own hands and declared themselves united. Since then Bulgaria has been practically independent, although she did not formally declare herself so until 1908. Since 1878 there has been a revulsion of feeling against Russian influence, which most of the people of Bulgaria regard as contrary to their best interests. Like the other Balkan peoples, the Bulgarians are ambitious to unite all the branches of their race under the one flag.

The Roumanians, contrary to popular opinion, are not a Slav race. They hold themselves to be descended from Roman colonists of the Dacia of antiquity. The provinces of Moldavia and Wallacia, which constitute the present kingdom, were made autonomous at the close of the Crimean war. In 1878 they were made entirely independent of Turkey, and three years later Charles I, a Hohenzollern prince, was crowned King of Roumania. The people of the Kingdom look forward to the recovery of Besarabia, which was taken from them and annexed to Russia in 1878, and also to a union with the Roumanians in eastern Hungary.

The only Balkan States actively engaged in the present war at the time of this writing are Serbia and Montenegro. Their inhabitants are Slavs and are, in national interests and aspirations, one people. During the middle of the fourteenth century, the Serbs, as they call themselves, ruled over an empire which embraced most of the northern Balkans, so that since then they have formed a large proportion of the population in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Macedonia and Albania.

Servia is the only one of the Balkan States without a seaport. Hence her people must sell their surplus goods to their surrounding neighbors at the price those particular neighbors may be willing to pay. This by no means ideal economic condition has led the Servians to seek an outlet to the Adriatic or the Aegean.

Throughout the centuries during which they were held in subjection by the Turks the Serbs kept alive the national traditions of their one-time greatness. Imbued with a desire to achieve the unity of their race and impelled by economic motives to seek a sea port, they have cherished since the day of their independence the hope of creating eventually a Greater Servia by the absorption of the present territories of Bosnia, Herzegovina and northern Albania.

Because of this ambition they were bitterly disappointed in 1878, when the Powers "invited" Austria-Hungary to administer Bosnia and Herzegovina and permitted her to occupy the Sanjak of Novibazar. Intrenched in the Sanjak, which separated Servia from Montenegro, the superior military power of the Dual Monarchy seemed to have shattered for all time the Pan-Servian dream.

STRUGGLE FOR SUPREMACY.

Having outlined the national ambitions and vital interests of the several peoples now engaged in this world-wide war, as well as those of the smaller States which may become involved in it directly and which will be almost inevitably affected by its outcome; having seen how Europe came to be divided into two great armed camps; we are now ready to take up the narrative of those events which have brought the hostile camps into direct collision. It is the story, not less world-wide, of a gigantic political, diplomatic and commercial struggle, of which this final war grapple is only the climax. Mr. Usher, in his exhaustive study of "Pan-Germanism" says: "The Boer War, Morocco, the strangling of Persia, the war in Tripoli, the Balkan crisis are only incidents in this gigantic struggle in which the very pawns are kingdoms and the control of the entire globe the stake."

In our discussion of Germany and her ally, Austria-Hungary, we dwell chiefly upon the imperative need for colonial expansion in the case of the former and the harassing race problem which prevented the realization of such expansion for the latter. We have deferred deliberately the narrative of their more recent efforts to obtain for themselves new possessions and broader markets, because these very efforts constitute one of the most vital factors which have determined the course of world politics for the last quarter of a century and which have culminated in the present appeal to arms.

Fifty years ago Africa was known as "The Dark Continent." For three hundred years the nations of western Europe had been so busily engaged in the search for a route to India and in the resultant colonization of the Americas that they had neglected this vast territory lying almost at their very doors. Between 1874 and 1878 the explorations of Livingstone and Stanley through the heart of the African continent focussed upon it the attention of the entire civilized world.

The interest thus aroused resulted during the next decade in the appropriation of Africa by Europe. Both Italy and Germany participated in the general scramble. But after the final treaties defining the new boundaries had been signed, each of them found that their portion of the spoils was unsuited to colonization by white men. In 1898 the Italians tried to extend the boundaries of their colonies in Somaliland at the expense of Abyssinia, but the Italian Army met with such overwhelming defeat that Italy did not embark upon any further colonial adventures for more than twenty years.

In that same year, 1898, Germany, who had found her possessions in the South Seas equally valueless, saw the United States supplant the decadent power of Spain in the last fragments of her colonial empire in the West Indies and the Orient. Four years later, in 1902, Germany attempted by "peaceful penetration"—the same method by which England had acquired Egypt—to secure a foothold in Venezuela. But the United States, whose navy had emerged with added prestige from the war with Spain, enunciated a new interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine, which effectively balked Germany's plans in South America. The conquest and absorption of the Boer Republics in South Africa by the British Empire blasted the hopes of further expansion in that direction.

THE PAN-GERMAN SCHEME.

Thus, thwarted at every turn, German statesmen gave up—or postponed—their attempts to obtain colonial possessions over seas and conceived and adopted a new plan whereby to attain their end. Although England was mistress of the seas, Germany for thirty years had been concededly the strongest military Power in Europe. Obviously, her prospects of constructing a land empire were vastly better than the chance of ever displacing her rivals in their own element.

With this in mind, her leaders conceived the idea of building up a mighty confederation of confederations to control all the territory between the North Sea and the Indian Ocean. Austrians for a long time had talked of the "Drang nach Osten"—the March to the East, and from 1904, or thereabouts, onward, they cooperated with their allies to accomplish that purpose.

The main features of this stupendous scheme, briefly stated, were these: Austria, backed by the military power of the Triple Alliance, was to supplant Russia in her influence in the Balkan States, which were to be formed into a confederation. Turkey was to be freed from English influence and a railroad stretching from Constantinople to Bagdad was to bring all the country between the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf under German domination. Once in possession of this much, Germany and her allies could break Britain's hold on the eastern end of the Mediterranean and, by means of their shorter land route, could wrest from England her overlordship in Egypt and India.

The Germans, who thoroughly believe in the feasibility of this ambitious enterprise, have never expected to realize it except with the co-operation of their allies and that of the other peoples who inhabit this immense extent of territory. Each of these would have to be compensated. Although few men know all the ramifications of the plan, we may surmise with comparative certainty the contemplated division of the spoils which would follow inevitably so far-reaching a conquest.

Austria would acquire her much desired outlet to Saloniki, together with Palestine and Egypt. Italy would receive Tripoli and the neighboring French colonies. The Balkan States, Turkey and Persia would be vouchsafed a guarantee of their future independence and control over their own affairs. Germany, finally, would be in a fair way toward the assimilation of the rest of Africa and the whole of England's Empire in India.

Just who is the author of this Pan-German scheme we do not know. Undoubtedly it has been the product of more than one man's mind. Certain it is, however, that few men have done more to further it than the present German Emperor and that coterie of imperialistic and military counsellors who immediately surround him.

CONCILIATING THE TURK.

In the light of what we have said concerning the influence which the Sultan of Turkey holds over the whole of the Mohammedan world, the reader will readily appreciate how vitally important the control of the Turkish Empire was to the success of German plans.

As long ago as 1898 William II had made a tour through Syria, during the course of which he had taken occasion to proclaim himself the protector of all Mohammedans. Later, when the rest of the world was shocked to indignation by the atrocities of the Kurds in Armenia, the Kaiser's Government alone of all the European Powers had given a fair hearing to the Turkish case.

During the next few years German merchants had secured for themselves the major part of the trade of Asia Minor and other parts of the Levant. The German Government had loaned to the Porte, military officers, with a view to effecting a reorganization of the Turkish Army. The Kaiser had made another visit to Constantinople and so, by gradually insinuating himself into the favor of the Sultan, had displaced the British influence on the Bosphorus.

As a result, German capitalists had obtained a concession to extend the Anatolian railroad system in Asia Minor from Skutari, on the Bosphorus, eastward through Syria and Mesopotamia to Bagdad. They had sought the cooperation of English capitalists to finance this project. But the English, although they probably did not suspect the true purpose of this railroad at that time, had been so offended by the openly displayed German sympathy with the Boer cause, that they refused flatly to assist in its construction. From these two incidents began the more acute phase of the estrangement between the British and German Empires.

After protracted negotiations between the German Government and those of the other Powers, the Bagdad Railroad was underwritten in Berlin and the construction work was begun in sections.

THE MOROCCO INCIDENT.

The next scene of operations was at the western extremity of the Mohammedan world, in Morocco. In that country, France, Spain and Germany had large commercial interests. The raids of the tribesmen of the interior into French territory had led the French to give military aid to the Sultan at Fez to suppress them.

Europe was startled, in 1905, to hear that William II had landed at Tangier and had announced that the Sultan was free and independent. Russia's prestige had been damaged by defeat in Manchuria. But by the next year, when the Powers held a conference in Algeiras to discuss the Morocco question, Russia had made peace with Japan and was thus in a position to support France and England. The Powers finally recognized the predominant interests of France and Spain.

A revolution broke out in Turkey in 1908. The Young Turks, a party which had long favored constitutionalism and reform, gained control of the army, captured the capital and compelled the Sultan to restore the constitution which he had established in 1876. After the attempt at a counter-revolution had failed, they forced him to abdicate and then set up another Sultan in his stead. But German influence at Constantinople was not modified by these events, because astute German diplomacy had taken the precaution to ingratiate itself with the Young Turks, as well as with the older regime. Mr. Usher even goes so far as to intimate that the change was effected with the connivance of Abdul Hamid himself.

No sooner had the Young Turks established their power and begun to carry out their program of reform than Bulgaria threw off the suzerainty of Turkey, and Austria-Hungary annexed Bosnia and Herzegovina. Serbia began to prepare for war with Austria-Hungary and called upon Russia to support her. Russia began to mobilize her army and Europe seemed to be on the brink of a general war.

After an exchange of diplomatic notes, the German Kaiser cut short the negotiations by massing three army corps on this eastern frontier and giving Russia to understand that Germany would support Austria in the event that Russia should attack that Power. Russia, not yet having recovered from her defeat by Japan, was obliged to recede from her position. Bulgaria and Austria indemnified Turkey for her losses by cash payments. Serbia, unable to face the superior military power of Austria-Hungary alone, was forced to swallow her chagrin as best she might. Although Austria evacuated the Sanjak of Novibazar, from this time forward the hostility between Austria and Serbia became more and more irreconcilable.

Germany, in 1911, suddenly reopened the Morocco question by despatching the cruiser Panther to Agadir. But this time economic forces, more powerful than fleets and armies, defeated the German plans. British and French bankers, frightened at the prospect of war, withdrew their gold from Berlin, so that when the Kaiser attempted to raise the necessary funds for a mobilization against France, he found it impossible to do so. As a result of negotiations, Germany was obliged to recognize France's rights in Morocco and to take, by way of consolation, some additions to her territory in the Kongo. Since then both Germany and France have been hoarding gold for the present conflict, which to those of the innermost counsels of both Powers appeared inevitable.

BRITISH INFLUENCE IN PERSIA.

Encouraged by Germany's discomfiture, the Powers of the Triple Entente, who now began to divine the true magnitude of the Pan-Germanic enterprise, took counter-steps to thwart it. Recent discontent in Egypt and India, together with the feverish activity with which the Bagdad Railway was being pushed toward the Persian Gulf, attracted attention to their threatened interests in those regions.

For years England had opposed inflexibly Russia's advance through Persia, as being a direct challenge to her own possessions in India. But, so imminent had the new danger appeared that, in 1907, the two nations had composed their differences and had divided the country into three zones, a Russian sphere of influence in the north, an English one along the Gulf and a neutral one between these, in which the Shah was still to govern. To outflank the Bagdad Railroad and to facilitate the throwing of Russian and British troops into the country, they now began to build a railroad of their own.

Persia had been a hotbed of revolution and intrigue for five years. One shah after another had plunged the nation deeper and deeper into debt until Russia, who willingly had loaned the money, practically held a mortgage on the country. A constitutionalist party, bent on retrenchment and reform as the only means of saving their country from the grasp of the foreigners, had arisen and after several setbacks had gained control of the government.

The virtual partition of the country by Britain and Russia resulted in an outburst of the national feeling, upon which neither of those Powers had counted. To assist them in carrying out their program of retrenchment, the Persian reformers called in a number of young American financiers. Under the able leadership of one of these men, Morgan W. Shuster, the deficit was turned into a surplus, and for a few months it seemed that Persia, like the newly created Republic of China, was about to take her place among the nations.

But early in 1912 England and Russia intervened, obliged Mr. Shuster and his associates to resign and restored the reactionary regime. Since then Persia has been virtually a vassal State.

Emboldened by their success, the Powers of the Triple Entente already had struck another blow at the Pan-German enterprise, this time at the very instrument by which it was to be made effective. The weak link in the Triple Alliance was that one which bound Italy to her hereditary enemy, Austria. In addition to cherishing fond hopes of ultimately annexing Trent and Trieste—"Italia Irredenta" (Italy Unredeemed) as they call those localities—the Italians of recent years had become commercial rivals of their Austrian allies in Skutari, Albania and Epirus.

By 1911, moreover, Italy had recovered from her defeat in Abyssinia and was ready to resume her imperialistic career by achieving her "manifest destiny" in Tripoli. But Tripoli at that time was a Turkish province, so that to seize it while the Young Turks were still smarting under the loss of Bosnia and Herzegovina, would be to alienate them from the Triple Alliance and so to wreck the entire fabric of the Pan-German scheme.

With all of these factors in mind, England and France made overtures to Italy to withdraw from the Triple Alliance. The treaty of alliance would expire in 1913, when Italy could refuse to renew it without actually breaking faith. If she would engage herself to do so, the three Powers, England, France and Italy, could thenceforth dominate the Mediterranean. Italy could blockade the Tripolitan coast while England prevented the Turks from sending reinforcements through Egypt. If the tribesmen of the interior offered too stubborn resistance, France could lend a hand from her position in Tunis. Thus, after a brief war, Italy could acquire Tripoli for nothing.

ITALY BLOCKADES TRIPOLI.

To the Italians, who had never expected to receive much more than Tripoli as the price of their cooperation in the German scheme, the bait was too alluring to refuse. In October, 1911, they suddenly blockaded Tripoli and began war against Turkey. Germany and Austria saw their two allies, on whose assistance they had based their hopes, at each others' throats, and the rest of Europe confidently looked forward to the speedy dissolution of the Triple Alliance.

But England and France had reckoned without their host. The Sultan threatened to proclaim a holy war. For weeks northern Africa was seething with threatened revolt. The English did prevent the passage of troops through Egypt, but did not dare to do more. Italy was left with the prospect of a protracted and expensive war.

The German Kaiser at once took advantage of Italy's predicament to win back her allegiance. If Italy would renew the Triple Alliance in 1913, her navy could seize the Aegean Islands at once; then, after a time, by bringing pressure to bear at Constantinople, he could cajole the Turk into parting with Tripoli in exchange for the restoration of the islands. The bargain was struck, the islands were seized and the fortunes of the Central Powers of Europe seemed to be once more in the ascendant.

The English had been so confident that they had permanently detached Italy from the Triple Alliance that they had withdrawn their naval forces from the Mediterranean and had concentrated practically their entire fleet in home waters. A few months later, Premier Borden, of Canada, in his appeal to the Parliament of the Dominion to contribute three dreadnoughts to the fleet, said: "Twelve years ago the British Navy and the British flag were predominant in every ocean of the world and along the coasts of every continent. Today they are predominant nowhere except in the North Sea."

The present German Kaiser has made it his purpose to do for the German Navy what his grandfather did for the German Navy. The preface to the Germany Navy bill of 1900 contained an enunciation of German naval policy in these words: "But, even if the strongest naval Power should succeed in meeting us with a fleet of superior strength, the defeat of a strong German fleet would so greatly weaken its own power, that, notwithstanding its victory, its own position on the seas would be no longer secure."

During the period of "splendid isolation" England had adhered to the policy of maintaining a navy equal in strength to those of the two next sea Powers combined. When in 1904, the Kaiser had said, "Our future lies on the sea," and again, "The trident should be in our hand," the English had regarded these utterances as mere outbursts of rhetoric, but when Germany passed first France and then the United States in the race for predominant sea power, England began to fear her designs.

By 1912 the financial burden of unabated naval rivalry had become so onerous that Winston Churchill, Britain's First Lord of the Admiralty, openly promised to decrease the English naval program in proportion to any curtailment in Germany's plans. But, since the Germans did not see fit to alter their program, the race for naval superiority continued.

The scene of the titanic struggle for world power, in 1912, suddenly shifted back to the Balkans. Bulgaria, Serbia, Montenegro and Greece mobilized their combined armies on the Turkish frontier and began war. Whether this Balkan alliance was the instrument with which the Kaiser purposed to extort Tripoli from the Turk, whether it was the result of an attempt by the Triple Entente to create a barrier in the path of Pan-Germanism, or whether the Balkan States formed it on their own initiative is largely matter for conjecture.

RESULTS OF THE BALKAN WARS.

At the outbreak of hostilities the Balkan allies disavowed any intention of territorial aggrandizement, but the lack of concerted action among their military forces soon revealed a pre-arranged division of European Turkey among them. The Montenegrins at once invested Skutari; the Servians overran the Sanjak and northern Albania and pushed on to Durazzo, their coveted port on the Adriatic; the Greeks invaded Epirus and Macedonia and laid siege to Janina and Saloniki. In the eastern theatre of war the Bulgarians besieged Adrianople and drove the main Turkish Army back to Tchatalja, just outside Constantinople. By April, 1913, the Turks, who had already ceded Tripoli to Italy, were ready for peace.

As soon as the peace delegates had assembled at London, Austria-Hungary and Italy demanded that Albania, including Skutari and Durazzo, should be made an independent State. Since this arrangement deprived Montenegro, Serbia and Greece of the greater part of their conquests, they insisted on a revision of the original allotment of territory. When Bulgaria, who considered that her army had borne the brunt of the fighting, was disposed to disregard their interests, they combined against her and began a second war.

Roumania joined the allies and marched an army against Sofia from the north, while the Turks took advantage of the quarrel among their recent enemies to recover Adrianople. Within a month Bulgaria was forced to accept the terms dictated by the Balkan allies at Bucharest. Roumania took Silistria, south of the Danube, and Serbia and Greece divided most of Macedonia between themselves. Serbia compensated Montenegro with half of Novibazar. By a separate treaty at Constantinople, Bulgaria re-ceded Adrianople to Turkey.

When the Balkan allies had first mobilized against Turkey, Austria-Hungary had moved troops toward the Sanjak of Novibazar with the evident intention of reoccupying that territory, which she had abandoned in 1908. Russia had begun a counter-mobilization which threatened to precipitate the long dreaded European war. But France persuaded the other great Powers to hold aloof from the Balkan conflict.

Moreover, Germany and Austria-Hungary were playing for a stake even greater than an unobstructed path to Saloniki. The formation of the Balkan alliance seemed to foreshadow the consummation of that very Balkan Confederation which was to make practicable their "March to the East." The Balkan States themselves seemingly were forging the last link in the chain assuring to Germany the realization of this cherished project.

But after Austria and Italy had insisted on the erection of Albania into an independent State, the whole situation was reversed as in the twinkling of an eye. The Balkan alliance dissolved into its constituent elements, and left Bulgaria and Turkey—the defeated nations—the only possible partners of the Triple Alliance in the peninsula.

Servia and Montenegro had been allowed to conquer the Sanjak and thus block the way to Saloniki. At the same time, Austria's action in preventing Servia from attaining her coveted port on the Adriatic had served only to add fuel to the growing flame of hostility between Austrians and Servians. The acquisition of the new territory undoubtedly gave the Pan-Servian propaganda a tremendous impetus, so that, instead of having smoothed for herself and the German Kaiser their "path to the East," Austria-Hungary found a ferment of discontent seething within her own borders. Pan-Slavism and Pan-Germanism had come face to face at last on the banks of the Save itself, for the Sanjak of Novibazar, formerly erected as a buffer State, had been absorbed by Servia and Montenegro and now a continuous Slavonic barrier had been interposed against the progress eastward of the Germanic Powers.

Then followed the pernicious agitation of the Servian secret societies. Conspiracy culminated in plot and counterplot and, finally, in the assassination of the Austrian heir apparent. If the reader has followed carefully the sequence of events down to this point, the complicated interlocking of antagonistic national ambitions, which has been sketched in the foregoing pages, he will understand why, as was said at the outset, the murder of the Austrian Archduke in Sarajevo was only the lighting of the fuse to the mine, the firing of which has set all Europe aflame.

WHITE, ORANGE AND GRAY PAPERS.

Since the outbreak of war each of the governments of Great Britain, Russia, Germany and Belgium has published, by way of justifying its own course, the official communications which passed between the several governments involved from July 23, when Austria-Hungary sent its ultimatum to Servia, to August 4, when the British Ambassador in Berlin asked for his pas-ports. An impartial review of these documents—the White Papers of England and of Germany, the Orange Papers of Russia and the Gray Paper of Belgium—will enable the reader to gain an idea of why and when the several Powers entered the conflict.

After having tried Gavrilo Princip, the assassin of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, and several of his accomplices, the Austro-Hungarian Government, on July 23, 1914, sent an ultimatum to Servia. Austria-Hungary demanded that Servia should suppress publications which excited hatred against the Monarchy, should dissolve the "Narodna Odbrana," a Pan-Servian secret society; eliminate without delay all anti-Austrian sentiments from the course of public instruction in Servia; remove from office all civil and military officers engaged in anti-Austrian propaganda and "accept the collaboration in Servia of the agents of the Imperial and Royal Government in the suppression of the subversive movement directed against the territorial integrity of the Monarchy."

The ultimatum further demanded that Servia open a judicial inquiry against participants in the plot of June 28 within her jurisdiction; arrest certain officers compromised by the outcome of the trial at Sarajevo; stop the smuggling of arms across the border into Bosnia and explain the expressions of hostility of certain Servian officials immediately after the assassination. The note closed thus: "The Imperial and Royal Government awaits the reply of the Royal Government at the latest up to Saturday, the 25th of this month, at six o'clock in the evening."

On the same day Herr Von Bethman Hollweg, Chancellor of the German Empire, communicated to the British, French and Russian Governments his view that, as the controversy was one which concerned only Austria-Hungary and Servia, other Powers should hold aloof.

On July 24 Servia officially informed Russia of Austria's demands and appealed to the Russian Government for support. Mr. Sazonof, Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, conferred with the French and British Ambassadors in St. Petersburg. He and the French Ambassador pressed their English colleague to urge his Government to openly support their own Governments, in case an international crisis should arise.

Sir Edward Grey, British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, made every effort through Vienna and Berlin to induce the Austro-Hungarian Government to extend the time limit of its ultimatum to Servia. He also proposed to France, Italy and Germany that the four Powers whose interests were not immediately involved should cooperate in an effort to preserve peace, or, at least, to restrict the sphere of prospective hostilities. Germany's attitude remained substantially what it had been from the start—that other Powers should not interfere in what was essentially Austria's and Serbia's affair.

During the morning of July 25 England and Russia continued to work for an extension of the time limit to Austria's ultimatum. Russia proposed to Austria that the two Governments undertake conversations relative to the Servian matter, but Austria denied the proposal.

That evening Serbia replied to the Austrian note. The Servian Government accepted without reserve all of the conditions imposed excepting that one which specified that Serbia should accept the collaboration of Austrian officials within her own territory. The Servian Government said, respecting this demand, that it was impossible to comply with it, because to do so would be to violate the Servian constitution, but it offered to submit this matter to the arbitration of the Hague Tribunal.

Sir Edward Grey, who foresaw mobilization in Austria and Russia, continued to urge Germany to cooperate with France, Italy and Great Britain to preserve peace.

EFFORTS TO MAINTAIN PEACE.

The next day, July 26, the German Emperor, who had been absent on a yachting cruise in the Baltic, suddenly returned to Berlin. Sir M. de Bunsen, British Ambassador at Vienna, informed Sir Edward Grey that, according to the belief of the German Ambassador there, Russia would "keep quiet during the chastisement of Serbia." The Imperial German Chancellor telegraphed to the German Ambassador at St. Petersburg as follows: "After Austria formally declared that she was not interested in acquiring territory, the responsibility for a possible disturbance of the peace in Europe through Russian intervention lies with Russia alone. We still trust that Russia will take no steps that may seriously endanger European peace." He telegraphed to the German Ambassador at Paris to the same effect and urged the French Government to use its influence at St. Petersburg for peace.

That afternoon Russia received news that Austria-Hungary had decreed mobilization. German consuls and envoys in Russia and France informed their Government that mobilization had been ordered in Kief and Odessa in Russia, and that the Fourteenth Corps of the French Army had discontinued its manoeuvres. Sir Edward Grey, through the English Ambassadors at Rome, Paris and Berlin, proposed an immediate conference between representatives of Italy, France, Germany and Great Britain, in London.

In communicating Germany's reply to this proposal the next day, Sir E. Goschen, British Ambassador at Berlin, telegraphed to Sir Edward Grey as follows: "Secretary of State says that conference you suggest would practically amount to a court of arbitration and could not, in his opinion, be called together except at the request of Austria and Russia. He could not, therefore, fall in with your suggestion, desirous though he was to cooperate for the maintenance of peace."

He added that the German Secretary of State had assured him that, as yet, Austria was only partially mobilizing and that Germany would not mobilize unless Russia mobilized her forces in the north as well as in the south. Sir Edward Grey replied that he thought the Servian answer should, at least, be treated as the basis for discussion and urged Germany to work for mediation at Vienna. To this the German Imperial Chancellor responded that his Government had started the efforts toward mediation at Vienna and had communicated to Count Berchtold, Austrian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Sazanof's desire for a direct talk with Vienna.

Mr. Sazanof said to the German Military Attache at Petrograd that if Austria should cross the Servian frontier, the military districts in the direction of Austria—Kief, Odessa, Moscow, Kasan—would be mobilized; that those on the German front—Warsaw, Vilna, Petrograd—would not be, under any circumstances. He said that peace with Germany was earnestly desired. Mr. Sazanof added that he was willing to fall in with Sir Edward Grey's plan for a conference of the Powers, or, failing that, to open direct conversations with Vienna.

Count Mensdorff, Austrian Ambassador at London, in an interview with Sir Edward Grey, informed the latter of Austria's dissatisfaction with Serbia's reply. According to Sir Edward, he admitted that, on paper, the Servian reply might seem to be satisfactory; but the Servians had refused the one thing—the cooperation of Austrian officers and police—which would be a real guarantee that in practice the Servians would not carry on their subversive campaign against Austria.

On July 28 Austria-Hungary declared war against Serbia and began military operations directed toward the Servian capital, Belgrade. The Austro-Hungarian Government declined to open direct negotiations between Vienna and St. Petersburg, and Count Berchtold replied to Sir Edward Grey's proposals that he appreciated the good offices of England, but that they had arrived too late.

The Russian Ambassador at Vienna warned the Austrian Government that if actual war broke out with Serbia, it would be impossible to localize it, as Russia was not prepared to give way again, as she had done in 1909. Germany continued her efforts to prevent a rupture between Austria and Russia. The Imperial Chancellor telegraphed the German Ambassador at St. Petersburg: "We are endeavoring continually to cause Vienna to make clear in St. Petersburg the purpose and scope of the Austrian action regarding Serbia in an indisputable, and, it is to be hoped, satisfying manner to Russia. The declaration of war made in the meantime makes no difference in this connection."

THE KAISER TO THE CZAR.

The German Emperor supplemented this with a personal message to the Czar, in which he said that he deplored the disquieting impression which Austria's action was making in Russia and assured the Czar that he, William, was exerting all his influence to bring about an understanding between the two Powers.

On July 29, after Austria-Hungary finally had given the other Powers to understand that she would not accept any further discussion on the basis of Serbia's note, Russia decreed a partial mobilization, "only directed against Austria."

The Czar replied to the Kaiser's message, protesting against Austria's aggression and imploring his cousin, the Kaiser, to do all in his power to prevent Austria from going too far. William II replied, asserting that Austria did not intend to annex any territory, that he was doing his best to bring about an understanding between Austria and Russia, but that he feared lest military measures on Russia's part might nullify his efforts.

At the same time, the Imperial Chancellor of Germany informed the French Government that French preparations for war, reports of which were becoming more numerous from hour to hour, would compel Germany to proclaim "Kriegsgefahr" (danger of war) as a precautionary measure.

Under date of July 29, Sir E. Goschen, British Ambassador at Berlin, telegraphed to Sir Edward Grey as follows: "I was asked to call upon the Chancellor tonight. His Excellency had just returned from Potsdam.

"He said that should Austria be attacked by Russia, a European conflagration might, he feared, become inevitable, owing to Germany's obligations as Austria's ally, in spite of his continued efforts to maintain peace. He then proceeded to make the following strong bid for British neutrality. He said that it was clear, so far as he was able to judge the main principle which governed British policy, that Great Britain would never stand by and allow France to be crushed in any conflict there might be. That, however, was not the object at which Germany aimed. Provided that neutrality of Great Britain were certain, every assurance would be given to the British Government that the Imperial Government aimed at no territorial acquisitions at the expense of France should they prove victorious in any war that might ensue.

"I questioned His Excellency about the French colonies, and he said that he was unable to give a similar undertaking in that respect. As regards Holland, however, his Excellency said that so long as Germany's adversaries respected the integrity and neutrality of the Netherlands, Germany was ready to give his Majesty's Government an assurance that she would do likewise. It depended upon the action of France what operations Germany might be forced to enter upon in Belgium, but when the war was over Belgian integrity would be respected if she had not sided against Germany."

Sir Edward Grey at once informed the French Government that public opinion in England did not warrant England giving France such support as she had given during the crisis over Morocco, when France primarily was involved and threatened. But he also warned the German Ambassador that the German Government should not be misled by the friendly tone of his conversation into thinking that England would stand aside.

On July 30 Sir Edward Grey couched England's reply to Germany's proposal in these words: "His Majesty's Government cannot for a moment entertain the Chancellor's proposal that they bind themselves to neutrality on such terms."

The Kaiser and the Czar continued to exchange personal telegrams, the one pointing out the danger which Russia's mobilization threatened and the other protesting that the mobilization was not directed against Germany, but only against Austria. The British Ambassador at Vienna informed Sir Edward Grey that unless Russia desisted from her military preparations, the temper of the people there would lead the Austrian Government to take counter steps.

RUSSIA'S EFFORT FOR PEACE.

Russia made a last attempt at reconciliation with Austria by making, through the German Ambassador at St. Petersburg, this proposition: "If Austria, recognizing that her conflict with Serbia has assumed character of question of European interest, declares herself willing to eliminate from her ultimatum points which violate principle of sovereignty of Serbia, Russia engages to stop all military preparations." But Austria did not see fit to assent to this proposition.

The next day, July 31, Russia and Austria-Hungary mobilized their fleets and armies and Germany declared Kriegsgefahr (danger of war). Sir Edward Grey told the German Ambassador at London that if Germany and Austria could get any reasonable proposal put forward, which would make it clear that they were striving for peace, that if Russia and France then rejected such proposal, England would consent to hold aloof; but that otherwise, if France became involved, England would be drawn in.

Later in the day Sir Edward sent notes to the French and German Governments, asking them whether, in consideration of the possibility of war, each was prepared to respect the neutrality of Belgium, provided it should not be violated by another Power. He informed the Belgian Government of his action and said he assumed that it would maintain to the utmost of its ability its neutrality.

That night Germany sent ultimatums to both Russia and France. The note to Russia explained that Germany, being menaced by Russia's mobilization, had been obliged to proclaim "danger of war," but that German mobilization must follow unless Russia ceased all warlike measures within twelve hours. The note to France was a peremptory demand for information as to what course France would take in the event of war between Germany and Russia.

The next morning, that of August 1, the French Government replied that it would do "as the best interests of the Republic dictated" and ordered general mobilization simultaneously with the reply. As Russia failed to answer within the time specified, the German Ambassador at St. Petersburg, at ten minutes past seven o'clock in the evening, handed to the Russian Government a declaration of war in these words: "His Majesty, the Emperor, My August Sovereign, in the name of the Empire, taking up the challenge, considers himself in a state of war with Russia."

To Sir Edward Grey's question as to whether they were prepared to respect the neutrality of Belgium, France replied in the affirmative, but the German Government declared that it could not reply to the question categorically.

In a personal telegram to King George of England, the German Emperor engaged himself to refrain from attacking France if Great Britain would guarantee French neutrality. But the next day German troops invaded France and Luxemburg. Germany already had offered Belgium full indemnification for losses sustained and a guarantee of territorial integrity, if Belgium would not oppose the passage of German troops to the French frontiers. On August 3 Germany couched its demands of the Belgian Government in the terms of an ultimatum, at the expiration of which she declared war.

On August 4, King Albert, of Belgium, addressed a personal appeal to King George for England's diplomatic intervention in behalf of the integrity of his country. The British Government at once sent an ultimatum to Germany, saying that unless by midnight Germany should give a satisfactory reply to the question asked on July 31, "His Majesty's Government feel bound to take all steps in their power to uphold the neutrality of Belgium and the observance of a treaty to which Germany is as much a party as ourselves."

That afternoon the German Secretary of State told the British Ambassador that Germany's reply must be an unqualified "No." He explained that "the safety of the Empire rendered it absolutely necessary that the Imperial troops should advance through Belgium." At the expiration of the time named in the ultimatum the British Ambassador in Berlin requested his passports and Great Britain declared war.

THE FIRST YEAR OF THE WAR.

THE DECLARATIONS OF WAR.

Austria declared war on Servia July 28, 1914, lighting the fuse that exploded the European powder magazine. Four days later, on August 1, Germany was at war with Russia, and the next day, without formal declaration, with France, Russia's ally. On August 5, the ninth day, Great Britain became a participant in the struggle, because of the violation of Belgium's neutrality, which had brought that country, also without formal declaration, into the field. On the same day Montenegro, the smallest of kingdoms, cast her lot with the Entente Allies. On August 23, Japan declared war on Germany in consequence of Germany's refusal to give up her Chinese possession of Kiau Chau, and three days later, August 26, Austria formally declared war against Japan. On October 29, Turkish warships bombarded several Russian ports on the Black Sea; Russia naturally accepted this as a declaration of war and the following day declared a state of hostilities to exist between herself and Turkey; on November 5, England and France were formally arrayed against the same power. On May 22, 1915, Italy declared war on Austria.

THE FIGHTING BEGINS.

On July 30, the world was shocked to read of the bombardment of Belgrade, the Servian capital on the Danube, by Austrian river monitors. On August 2, German troops seized the narrow territory of the independent Grand Duchy of Luxemburg. France was already moving her field army toward the frontier, and Britain was straining every nerve to take her part. Such British troops as were available were mobilized as an expeditionary force.

THE FIRST FIGHTING IN THE WEST.

It was an essential part of the German plan of campaign to secure at the earliest possible moment an open way for an advance through Belgium into Northern France. To have delayed the first movements until the mobilization was complete would have risked the success of the operations, for the French would then be ready to come at once to the help of the Belgians.

THE BELGIUM PHASE.

The invasion of Belgium was begun on August 4, when a German column seized the crossing of the Meuse at Visé, where the first fighting on this frontier took place. A Belgian detachment defended the river crossing but was driven across the Meuse and during the fighting the town was set on fire. The main German advance was through Verviers towards the southern front of Liège. The German artillery opened fire on the outer forts of Liège after dark in the evening, and during the night made repeated attacks on the Belgian trenches between the forts. These attacks were repelled and for a week the Belgians held one or two of the forts west of the Meuse but these were destroyed (August 13-15) by the first shots of the giant Krupp howitzers.

While the reduction of the Liège defences was being completed the German mobilization and concentration was taking place and, on August 15, the German forces were setting out on their dash to Paris. Masses of cavalry supported by infantry detachments conveyed on motor cars moved forward on a broad front, driving in the advanced Belgian troops. Here and there skirmishes took place, some of which were at the time exaggerated in the newspaper reports into serious engagements. Local Belgian successes against isolated detachments were represented as great victories. The only serious fight in those early days was the action at the village of Haelen, at the crossing of the river Gethe to the east of Louvain. On August 12, a Belgian division, about 10,000 strong, held the bridges over the little river, and was somewhat rashly attacked by a German cavalry force supported by an infantry brigade and some machine guns. The Germans tried to rush the bridges, but were beaten off with heavy loss.

Despite minor successes, it was, however, impossible for the Belgians to hold back the advancing tide of invasion, which swept irresistibly on. One force under von Kluck moved straight on Brussels; a second, under von Buelow, crossed the Meuse at Huy and advanced upon Namur, and a third came through the Ardennes and struck at the line of the Meuse above Namur. Brussels fell on August 20, the Belgian army fled to Antwerp and the German army, having passed the capital, started south for Paris. The Belgian phase ended on August 22, with the abrupt fall of Namur and the opening battles between the German armies and the Anglo-French forces of the north.

FRENCH DISASTERS.

The mobilization of the French army was begun on July 31, when the news of the German mobilization reached Paris. On Friday August 7, a French column from Belfort marched across the border, drove a German detachment out of Altkirch, and next day pushed on to and occupied Mülhausen, an important railway junction and a great industrial center. But the whole movement was premature, and the success was short-lived. Strong German forces were concentrated near Mülhausen, and on the 10th the French were forced to retire across the frontier.

After this check nothing serious was attempted until the mobilization had made further progress. By the end of the second week of August five French armies had been formed, and were massing on a long line extending from the Swiss frontier on the right to that of Belgium on the left.

Meantime the British troops had arrived on the extreme left, and were concentrated in the vicinity of Cambrai. When the general advance of the French left began the British moved forward to a position inside the Belgian border, with its center at Mons.

This forward movement was part of a general advance of all the French armies. On August 15, a French column had pushed forward into the Ardennes and driven a German detachment out of Dinant on the Meuse, a few miles south of Namur. In the second week of August a general advance of the French center and left was ordered and Lorraine was invaded. But the Germans were everywhere advancing. A series of great battles took place on a front of about two hundred miles and, on August 24, the French armies from Switzerland to the Belgian frontier were retiring.

After the fall of Namur the British about Mons were struck in front and flank by overwhelming forces and retreated southward protecting the left of the broken French line.

On August 26 the Germans were in full pursuit of the Allies. All along the line west of Verdun the Allies were retreating and the Germans were scoring a series of successes. Still further to the west large masses of German cavalry, supported by infantry detachments conveyed on motor-cars, were moving into the north of France between the British left and the Channel forts. The Germans occupied Lille and Amiens, cutting the railway to Calais and Boulogne.

An important step was taken on September 5, when Great Britain, France, and Russia signed a treaty which pledged the three governments "not to conclude peace separately during the present war" and "when the terms of peace come to be discussed no one of the allies will demand conditions of peace without the previous agreement of each of the other allies."

A number of important political moves were made by the French about this time. On August 26, the French government, principally Socialist, which had wavered in the crisis and had even discussed giving up Paris without a struggle, was reorganized and the strongest men of France were included in the cabinet, ex-Premier Millerand being made minister of war.

Somewhat later, Gen. Joffre, the French Commander in Chief, dismissed scores of general officers from commands in which they had failed to distinguish themselves.

On September 3, the French government decided to remove from Paris to Bordeaux and the German advance guards reached a point fifteen miles from the outskirts of Paris; but when General von Kluck, commanding the German right wing, attempted to change his course and march his columns across the front held by the British army, so as to strike between the British army and the French army next in line, he was attacked in flank by a new French army, specially formed for this purpose, while, at the same time, the British moved against his front and a second French army sought to separate his own left wing from connection with the German army next in line to the northeast. With great skill General von Kluck succeeded in extricating himself from this dangerous position, and fell back behind the Aisne.

BATTLE OF THE MARNE.

When the Germans halted their retreat on the lines of the Aisne, the French held a line from Paris to Verdun, cut deeply to the south. On this line General Joffre had been concentrating his forces since the opening defeats. Now the Germans were in turn threatened with envelopment.

The decisive point in the Battle of the Marne was about La Fère Champenoise, and the first heavy blow was struck here by General Foch. On September 9 the French defeated the Germans in a number of terrific engagements and drove all the German armies from Lorraine to Lagny back in a complete defeat which amounted to a rout at certain points. In this battle more than 3,000,000 were engaged, the losses were not less than 500,000 and the battle front was nearly two hundred miles long.

ON THE AISNE.

Between the Marne and the Aisne the Germans rallied and the position behind that river where they made their stand was admirably chosen. The fall of Maubeuge freed a German army which came south and reinforced von Kluck. In the next few days the Germans established a line from the Oise at Noyon to the Argonne. Every effort of the allies to drive them failed.

The French made a desperate effort to turn the Germans out by attacking their right flank and turning it, coming in about St. Quentin. But this failed, and in a few more days the line had begun to mount toward Belgium, each side meeting the other's efforts with new battalions. Meantime the Germans directed their attention toward making their position in Belgium secure by besieging Antwerp, which fell after a ten days' siege on October ninth.

Just before this surrender the British had been taken out of their trenches along the Aisne and sent north to fill the gap between the French battle line and the sea. Their objective was Antwerp, but the fall of this town ruined their plans and they were again left to face an overwhelming attack by new German armies.

BATTLES OF FLANDERS.

Following the final "consolidation" of the allied line came a series of desperate battles in an attempt of the Germans to reach the ports of Calais and Boulogne, from which they could hope to control the English channel. Dixmude was taken and Dunkirk almost fell, the British were driven almost to Ypres, and the French were forced back near Arras; but the attacks ended November 15 when, under the eyes of the kaiser, the famous Prussian guard tried to take Ypres and failed with huge losses. The British held Ypres despite a 50 per cent loss and against very superior forces, by some estimated at three or four times their number.

At the end of this period the Germans were in possession of a large part of Belgium and had won a few thousand square miles of territory in France; but they had failed to take Paris or the Channel ports and they could no longer afford to neglect the Russian menace.

From November 15 to the end of the first year of the war, the western campaign from the German side was defensive, save for local offensive moves. The Allies repeatedly attempted to break this defensive; but on the whole no changes of strategic importance took place up to the close of the first year of the war.

ON THE EASTERN FRONT.

Wholly unlike the stubborn trench warfare that has marked all but the first phase of the western fighting has been the conduct of the war on the eastern front. Here campaign after campaign has been fought, with maneuvering of gigantic armies on a vast stage. Smashing blows have been delivered by both sides, but mainly by the Germans.

In the beginning the Austro-German military staffs erred in their estimate of the time needed for the concentration of Russia's army. Six weeks was the shortest period they gave.

RUSSIAN INVASION OF EAST PRUSSIA.

To the surprise even of the allies, the Russians moved within three weeks. As the German "fan" was opening through Belgium, the Russians pushed large forces into the Mazurian lakes district in East Prussia, while more than 300 miles away, on an air line, their forces were driving into eastern Galicia, and the advance guard of a huge army was engaging the Austrians at Krasnik, south of Lublin. Fugitives were coming into Berlin and Vienna telling of the terrors of Cossack raids.

The Germans had to weaken the force of their blow against France by diverting large forces into East Prussia, while the Austrians had to guard Lemberg instead of driving home their advance against Warsaw.

Their very swiftness, however, brought upon the Russians one of the great disasters of the war. After other commanders had vainly striven to stop the czar's forces in East Prussia, the kaiser called from his retirement General von Hindenburg, a veteran officer on the retired list, and gave him command of an army which was concentrating about Posen for its liberation from the invaders. General von Hindenburg had during his active service commanded the German forces in East Prussia, and had an intimate knowledge of the country.

Gathering reserves, the garrisons of forts and what first line troops he could, von Hindenburg on August 27 struck the Russians at Tannenberg, south of Allenstein, and in three days practically annihilated an army of more than 250,000 men, capturing over 100,000 prisoners and killing and drowning tens of thousands more. Other swift blows that followed sent the forces under the Russian Gen. Rennenkampf back behind the line of the Kovno-Grodno forts.

RUSSIAN INVASION OF GALICIA.

Yet this disaster did not stop the advance of the Russians. They had defeated the Austrians at Rawaruska September 3, and taken Lemberg, they had won a battle near Lublin September 5, and on the twenty-second they took Jaroslav and invested the great fortress of Przemyśl. By October 22 they were conquering the Carpathian passes leading into Hungary, and their Cossacks were raiding well into the plains.

THE FIRST WARSAW DRIVE.

The German attempt to help Austria in this crisis took the shape of a sudden drive at Warsaw, through central Poland. Russia had made two great efforts, the chief endeavor directed against Austria, which had succeeded, the second against East Prussia, which had failed. But in doing this she had left central Poland bare of troops, and Germany now struck straight through the unguarded center at Warsaw in an attempt to seize this great fortress town. Hastily the Russians were forced to draw back from Hungary and the Carpathians and retire so far in Galicia as to raise the siege of Przemyśl (Peremyśl).

For ten days, October 14-24, a fierce struggle went on and the Germans won their way to within seven miles of Warsaw and five of Ivan-gorod, and forced a passage across the Vistula midway between these strongholds. But out from Novo Georgievsk fortress northwest of Warsaw the Russians suddenly launched 100,000 cavalry, which bent back the German left flank and compelled a retreat to the frontier.

GALICIAN CAMPAIGNS.

In consequence of the German reverse the Austrians suffered a succession of severe defeats. Their armies were broken in a big Russian victory at Jaroslav on November 5, and part were crowded back on Krakow and part into the Carpathian passes, already partly choked with snow. So severely shaken were the Austrians that the Russians reached the outer lines of the Krakow defenses, penetrating to Wieliczka, only seven miles from the city, on November seventh.

At this time Gen. von Mackensen came into public notice. General von Hindenburg had been placed in general charge of the eastern campaign, and to von Mackensen was intrusted another swift blow that would engage the Russians until the Austrians had time to recover.

THE SECOND WARSAW CAMPAIGN.

At the moment that the Russian armies were pushing toward Posen and their advance on November 7 had even captured Pleschen, on German soil southeast of that city, von Mackensen was gathering a large army based on the fortress of Thorn. He suddenly advanced, and on November 13-16 smashed Russian guarding corps on both sides of the Vistula and pushed on toward Lodz and Warsaw.

So rapid was the march in the difficult country that by November 22, von Mackensen's strong advance forces had penetrated to Brzeziny, about twelve miles east of Lodz. This rapidity, however, almost cost a great disaster, for a large part of this army, perhaps 110,000 men, was surrounded by the Russians, who hurried from south and north. The Germans cut their way out to a line west of Lodz after three days of most remarkable fighting.

Fresh forces were rushed up by the Germans, their lines were reformed, and on December 6 they took Lodz. Berlin then announced that the Russian army was broken and could not make a stand before Warsaw, but on the line of the Bzura and Rawka rivers the czar's forces stood, and six days of most determined attacks failed to dislodge them. Russians made heavy attacks early in January, and Germans again launched assaults early in February, but the lines here remained substantially the same up to July first.

GERMAN VICTORY IN MAZURIAN LAKES REGION.

While the chief armies had been engaged in the battles west of Warsaw the Russians had been slowly invading East Prussia again, and late in January had turned the head of the Mazurian lakes near Gumbinnen and were once more threatening Koenigsberg. Snow was deep on the ground and they took security in this fact.

Suddenly on February 28 a big German force that had plowed through the snow descended on their right wing to the north of Gumbinnen and sent it flying in rout. Another force struck the left wing at Lyck, and then the two German columns converged upon the disorganized center. The Russians strove heroically to extricate themselves in a series of battles in the snow, but they lost more than 100,000 prisoners and most of their equipment.

It was this victory that paved the way for the German advance on Mitau and Riga, and its effect was felt along the whole Russian line. The Germans drove well into northern Poland, threatening the fortress of Osovietz and taking Pryzasnyz in the direction of Novo Georgievsk, while in Bukowina the Austrians retook Czernewitz and raided into Bessarabia.

AUSTRIAN REVERSES.

Von Mackensen's drive for a time relieved the pressure on the Austrians, and by mid-December their armies had been reformed with a leavening of German troops, and they undertook an offensive against the weakened Russian lines in Galicia, advancing from Krakow and the Carpathians. The Przemyśl garrison of more than 100,000 men also made a sortie to break through and join the armies coming through the passes. The Austrian movements were slow and ill timed, however, and the Russians were able to concentrate against the three armies in turn, smashing the Krakow forces near Tarnow on December 25 and the others within a week.

So severely were the Austrians defeated that the czar's forces were able to establish themselves firmly on the Tarnow line—so as to threaten an advance on Krakow—to overrun Bukowina, and to drive ahead into the Carpathian passes, not to be dislodged again on this line until von Mackensen's drive in the spring.

With the surrender of the Austrians at Przemyśl on March 22, after a five months' siege, the tide again turned for the Russians. Some 250,000 men and many guns thus released were hurried into the Carpathians, and in a campaign extending to April 14 they broke through Dukla, Lupkow, Rostok, and other passes and established themselves at Sztropko, twenty miles inside Hungary. They also steadily hammered the enemy before Uzsok pass and beat back all attempts of the Austrians to turn their left wing in Bukowina.

RUSSIAN REVERSES.

In the latter part of April, however, warning began to come from Petrograd of a great concentration by the Germans east of Krakow intended to strike at the point where the Russian line bent into the Carpathians.

The blow fell late in April, and after a great bombardment by such masses of artillery as had never before been used by a field army, Gen. von Mackensen broke through the Russian position at Gorlice and Tarnow. He then began the smashing drive that retook Przemyśl on June 3 and Lemberg on June 24, cleared the czar's troops out of most of Galicia, and led to a renewed advance toward Brest-Litovsk and the rear of Warsaw.

As von Mackensen drove eastward he compelled the Russians to give up all their hard won positions in the Carpathians and retire before the revived and more confident Austrians.

THE SUCCESSFUL WARSAW DRIVE.

Once Galicia was cleared the Germans inaugurated a smashing and successful drive on Warsaw from north, west, and south, the whole movement being under the general direction of Field Marshal von Hindenburg.

Early in the spring the Germans under General von Bülow had invaded northern Russia. This force worked its way southward and effected a junction with von Hindenburg's army.

From the south von Mackensen resumed his advance, his German forces working with the Austrians to inflict smashing blows upon the Russians from this direction. Step by step the Austro-German armies pounded their way toward the city from north and south, while on the west activities along the line of intrenchments that had so long held off the Germans in that section were resumed.

Great masses of German troops were now flung across the East Prussian frontier and before the apparently irresistible power of the Teutons engaged in this wide encircling movement, the armies of the Russian Grand Duke Nicholas began to fall back. Przasnysz, to the north of Warsaw, was occupied, and the German armies swept on, until by July 19 they had forced the Russians back to the line of the Narew River and were within twenty miles of their goal. The fortress of Ostrolenka was taken and the key to Warsaw on the north, the Novo Georgievsk fortifications, was approached. To the south Radom was occupied and the Russian lines of communication in the Lublin region threatened.

Then began a tightening of the German lines around the capital. The Teutons forced their way past the Blonie line southwest of the city, pushed their way across the Narew River, below Ostrolenka, and the battering at the fortified gates of the city was begun in earnest on August 3 by Bavarian troops under command of Prince Leopold of Bavaria.

SERVIA'S PART IN THE WAR.

Of the belligerent nations, none, save Belgium, has been tried more sternly than Serbia, on whose behalf the great Powers went to war. Her efforts contributed substantially to the crippling of Austrian military efficiency. Three times during the first year of the war huge Austrian armies invaded Serbia, and each time they were hurled back, crippled and defeated. On December 2, 1914, the Austrians captured Belgrade and occupied a large portion of the country. But a week later the Serbian army, commanded in person by King Peter I, turned upon the invaders, pierced the Austrian lines and pursued their foes beyond the frontier. More than one-third of the Austrian army was lost, and Serbia was not again invaded during the first year of the war.

ENTRANCE OF TURKEY.

Two events at the outset of the war paved the way for Turkey's participation. Nearing completion in British shipyards were two dreadnoughts with which Turkey intended to overcome the naval superiority of Greece and win back Aegean islands taken from her in the Balkan war. These the British seized. While Turkey was still fuming over the incident the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau slipped away from the British fleet in the Mediterranean and took refuge in the Dardanelles. Germany promptly turned over these vessels to Turkey under the guise of a sale.

The allies demanded that all the Germans on the cruisers should promptly be sent out of Turkey; Turkey demanded her dreadnoughts. While the dispute was going on several other troubles came up. Then on October 29 Turkish warships, including the Goeben and Breslau—commanded by German officers—made attacks on Odessa and other Russian ports in the Black Sea and on Russian shipping.

The Turkish government tried to smooth over this incident, but would not give in to demands of the allies that all German officers be dismissed from the navy. Consequently on November 5, Great Britain and France formally declared war.

In an effort to stir up the Mohammedans of Egypt, India, Persia, Algeria, and Morocco against the allies, the Shiekh-ul-Islam at Constantinople on November 16 proclaimed a holy war. Its only important effect was to lead to the repudiation of the sultan as head of the faithful by Mohammedan chiefs in those regions.

First hostilities consisted of naval raids by both sides in the Black Sea. Then Russia hurried an expedition toward Erzerum, in the Caucasus, in the hope of catching the Turks unprepared and of stirring up a general revolt of the Armenians. After heavy losses they were driven back to their own territory late in November, and in December the Turks sent a strong expedition against Tiflis. This came to disaster January 3-4, when the Russians annihilated an army corps near Ardahan and put two others to rout later. Since then the fighting in that region has been in the nature of a series of detached campaigns that have spread below Tabriz in Persia and have yielded no large results to either side.

Meanwhile a British expedition from India seized the mouth of the Euphrates river and made its way up the valley to the mouth of the Tigris. Thus the British got control of a rich region and closed to European powers the last outlet to the Indian ocean, the Persian, control of which Germany has long sought with her Bagdad railway and other plans. Russia also has coveted this prize. Fighting occasionally took place in this valley, but the number of men engaged was small.

Great Britain also seized this opportunity to make secure her hold on Egypt, which she had long held as a nominal dependency of Turkey. A protectorate over Egypt was proclaimed on December 17, Khedive Abbas Hilmi was deposed and Prince Hameil Kemal was made sultan. The island of Cyprus, important in the command of the eastern Mediterranean, was formally annexed.

An ambitious attempt was made by the Turks, led by German officers, to raid the Suez canal and so cut the communications of Great Britain with the far east. During the winter large forces were gathered in Palestine, and late in January and early in February they advanced across the desert. Forces of Turks crossed the canal on February 4, but they were met by the native and Australian troops and severely defeated.

CAMPAIGN AT THE DARDANELLES.

From February 21 to March 18, a British and French fleet—composed of at least thirty-two powerful vessels, mostly of battleships of the predreadnought era, but including the superdreadnought Queen Elizabeth—hammered at the forts at the entrance to the straits. They silenced and practically destroyed the outer ones and on March 18 attempted to overwhelm those at the narrows. This latter attempt resulted in the loss to the British of the battleships Irresistible and Ocean and to the French of the battleships Bouvet and Gaulois, and in serious injuries to other big ships.

Under a rain of shells from the warships the first troops made landings at five places on the western end of the Gallipoli peninsula and on the south shore of the straits on April 25. It was one of the most difficult undertakings in the history of war, for the Turks had prepared elaborate entanglements even in the water, and 50,000 men, with large forces of artillery, put the invaders under a deadly fire. Nevertheless, within four days an army of some 80,000 had been securely landed and a system of supply had been arranged.

Then followed most desperate and continuous fighting. The Turks bravely attacked again and again in attempts to drive the invaders into the sea and the allies launched a series of general assaults that gradually won them a way through the maze of defenses and brought them close to the tops of the hills overlooking the forts of the narrows. The British battleship Goliath was sunk in these operations on May 11.

In the middle of May the allies seemed to be in a serious plight because the fleet was compelled to cease its active support of the army in order to avoid a German submarine that had made its way through the Mediterranean. This undersea boat sunk the battleship Triumph on May 25 and the Majestic and Agamemnon on May 27. But in the attacks made by the army throughout June and July the allied fleet again took part.

ENTRANCE OF ITALY.

A substantial accession to the cause of the Allies was gained when Italy at last declared war on Austria on May 22. Soon after that date Italian troops began operations along the Austrian frontier, but up to the close of the first year of the war had been unable to break through the Austrian lines.

THE WAR AT SEA.

One of the most important aspects of the war has been the triumph of British sea-power, which has never been seriously menaced, even by Germany's clever use of submarines. It would have been impossible for German men-of-war to survive on the surface of the waters. The several German commerce-destroyers which were at large when the war opened were run down and sunk. One great achievement of note stands to the credit of the German navy—the action between the squadrons of Admiral Count von Spee and Rear-Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock off Coronel, Chili, which was fought in heavy weather, November 1, 1914.

Von Spee made skillful use of his superior batteries, and with small loss to himself sunk Cradock's flagship, the cruiser Good Hope, and the cruiser Monmouth. None of the crews of the ships that went down was saved. The cruiser Glasgow, the other fighting unit in Cradock's fleet, was damaged but not destroyed.

Strong British squadrons were sent to hunt down the Germans, and the one commanded by Admiral Sturdee met von Spee at the Falkland Islands December 8. The Germans had been driven from the Pacific by Japanese and other warships and undertook a raid on the Falkland naval station. As the ships steamed toward the harbor mouth they were attacked by the battleship Canopus, the battle cruisers Invincible and Inflexible and four smaller cruisers. All the German vessels but the Dresden were sunken, and this met its doom March 22, when the cruisers Glasgow and Kent found it in the neutral waters of Juan Fernandez Island. On account of the violation of her waters in this last engagement Chile made a strong protest to Great Britain and received a full apology.

In the North Sea only two real engagements took place in the first year of the war, the waters having been so thickly strewn with mines by both sides that it was dangerous for the fleets to attempt any ambitious maneuvers.

Early in the war, August 28, a British squadron under Admiral Beatty made a daring raid on the German vessels sheltered under the guns of the Helgoland forts. At least six battle cruisers and many light cruisers and torpedo boats engaged in this venture. The British asserted that they sunk at least two destroyers, but the Germans admitted only the loss of the cruiser Ariadne and a destroyer.

Following raids by German battle and armored cruisers on the east coast of England in November and December, a German squadron was intercepted on such an errand January 24 and engaged by British battle cruisers. The armored cruiser Bluecher was sunken and others were badly damaged. The Germans asserted that the British battle cruiser Tiger was sunken, but the British official and unofficial reports agreed that the Tiger got to port badly damaged.

In the Baltic there have been several brushes of Germans and Russians. Although the great German fleet can easily control this sea, few chances have been taken by the largest ships because of the danger from mines and submarines. In a battle October 11 the large Russian cruiser Palada was sunken. In skirmishes in the Black Sea some small warships have been sunken.

Of even greater interest than these operations were the dramatic exploits of the German raiders that were loosed on allied commerce in the beginning of the war. It was eight months before they were all rounded up, and they did damage that ran well above $100,000,000.

Most famous of these raiders was the little Emden—of less than 14,000 tons but of twenty-six knots speed—which coursed the waters of the far east and did damage estimated at $20,000,000 up to November 10, when the Australian cruiser Sydney caught it at Cocos Island, in the Bay of Bengal, and drove it ashore.

This ship destroyed at least twenty-two vessels. It entered the Bay of Bengal September 10 and sunk six of them. It appeared off Calcutta September 27 and went to other harbors and spread terror among all the shipmasters in the east.

The most remarkable exploit was its invasion of the harbor of Penang. Flying a Japanese flag, and with a fourth false funnel rigged, it passed the forts. It went between a British destroyer and the Russian cruiser Jemstchug, apparently to come to anchor, and suddenly torpedoed both. Then it escaped.

A large fleet of fast cruisers was sent out to find it and finally it was rounded up as it tried to destroy the wireless station at Cocos Island. Some members of its crew, left behind as the Sydney approached, made their way to Arabia and finally arrived at Berlin.

Two of the raiders, unable to keep at sea longer, sought refuge at Newport News, Va.—the Prinz Eitel Friedrich and the Kronprinz Wilhelm.

SUBMARINE TRIUMPHS.

In submarine warfare the balance sways in Germany's favor. By long odds, the most notable submarine feat of the war was the sinking of the British armored cruisers Aboukir, Cressy, and Hogue by the German submarine U-9, commanded by Captain Otto Weddigen, on September 22, with a loss of more than 1,500 lives. But this disaster taught the British how to safeguard their ships against submarines, and in future it was much more difficult for the underwater raiders to get at them. Weddigen himself was lost with all his men on the giant new submarine U-29, when she was sunken by a British merchantman on March 25, 1915.

Among the other triumphs of German submarines was the destruction of the British dreadnought Audacious, off the Irish coast, October 27, 1914, by means not yet definitely known, and of the battleship Formidable, in the English Channel, on New Year's Day, 1915, with a loss of 700 lives. The British battleship Bulwark was blown up while at anchor off Sheerness on November 26, with all her crew, but it is supposed that this was due either to spontaneous combustion in her magazines or to an infernal machine. The Austrians have been busy with submarines since Italy entered the war. On July 7 they sunk the armored cruiser Amalfi, and on the 19th the Garibaldi, which latter, however, accounted for the submarine which struck her. An Austrian submarine was also credited with the sinking of the French armored cruiser Léon Gambetta in the Adriatic, with a loss of 600 lives, on April 27.

On their part, the British submarines have scored several brilliant feats, Commander Max Horton, in the submarine E-9, late in September sunk the German cruiser Hela in the Helgoland Bight, and on October 6 took his craft up the mouth of the Ems, where he attacked the biggest game in sight, which happened to be a mere destroyer. On July 2, while working in coöperation with the Russian Baltic fleet, he sunk the German battleship Pommern. Another British submarine dived under five rows of mines at the Dardanelles and sunk the Turkish battleship Masudieh on December 13. In May a sister craft of this vessel repeated the trick, and showed her periscope at the entrance to the Golden Horn, sinking every Turkish craft she met.

FIRST YEAR

- June 28.—Archduke Francis Ferdinand assassinated.
- July 23.—Presentation of Austro-Hungarian note to Serbia.
- July 28.—War declared on Serbia by Austria-Hungary.
- July 30.—Partial mobilization of Russian Army. Belgrade bombarded by Austria-Hungary.
- July 31.—General mobilization of Russian Army ordered. State of war declared in Germany.
- Aug. 1.—War declared on Russia by Germany. Luxemburg invaded by Germany. French cabinet orders general mobilization.
- Aug. 2.—German troops enter France. German ultimatum to Belgium demanding free passage for her troops. Russian troops enter Germany.
- Aug. 4.—Ultimatum sent by Great Britain to Germany demanding an assurance that the neutrality of Belgium shall be respected. Germans attack Liege. Mobilization of the British Army. Germany declared war on both Belgium and France. Great Britain declared war on Germany. Mobilization of Turkish Army. President Wilson issues proclamation of neutrality.
- Aug. 5.—Lord Kitchener appointed British minister of War. German mine-layer Koenigen Luise destroyed. First installment of British expeditionary force landed on French coast. President Wilson tenders his good offices to the warring nations.
- Aug. 6.—Austria-Hungary declared war on Russia.
- Aug. 7.—Mobile Belgian military force withdrew from Liege, leaving forts occupied by their permanent garrisons.
- Aug. 8.—French advance into Alsace, occupying Altkirch. Italy reaffirms neutrality.
- Aug. 9.—German warships Goeben and Breslau took refuge in the Bosphorus. French occupy Muelhausen.
- Aug. 10.—France declares war on Austria-Hungary.
- Aug. 12.—England declares war on Austria-Hungary. Sale of German warships Goeben and Breslau to Turkey announced.
- Aug. 14.—Mobilization of French Army completed and announced as being in touch with the Belgians. Allies protested to Turkey against purchasing and taking over the German warships Goeben and Breslau.
- Aug. 15.—Japanese issue ultimatum to Germany demanding evacuation of Kiauchau. Russia issues proclamation promising reconstitution and autonomy of the Kingdom of Poland.
- Aug. 16.—Landing of British expeditionary force on coast of France completed. Russian advance on Germany begun.
- Aug. 17.—Belgian Government removed from Brussels to Antwerp. Beginning of a five days' battle in Lorraine, ending in repulse of French across frontier with heavy loss. Beginning of five days' battle between Serbians and Austrians on the Jadar, ending in Austrian rout.
- Aug. 20.—Brussels occupied by Germans. Belgian Army retreats to Antwerp. French reverses in Alsace.
- Aug. 23.—Germans enter Namur and begin attack on Mons. Japan declares war on Germany, blockades and commences bombardment of Tsingtau. Germans destroy three of Namur forts.
- Aug. 24.—Fall of Namur announced.
- Aug. 25.—Louvain destroyed by Germans. German Zeppelin drops bombs on Antwerp. Muelhausen evacuated by French.
- Aug. 26.—Non-partisan French cabinet organized. Germans take Longwy.
- Aug. 28.—British fleet sinks five German warships off Helgoland.
- Sept. 2.—Russians defeat Austrians at Lemberg after seven days continuous fighting.
- Sept. 3.—French Government removed from Paris to Bordeaux.
- Sept. 5.—Great Britain, France and Russia agree not to treat for peace separately. Rheims taken by Germans.
- Sept. 7.—Germans reach extreme point of their advance in first invasion of France, and begin retreat.
- Sept. 12.—German retreat halts on Aisne.
- Sept. 14.—British auxiliary cruiser Carmania sinks German armed cargo ship Cap Trafalgar off east coast of South America.
- Sept. 16.—Russians retire from East Prussia.
- Sept. 20.—Bombardment of Rheims Cathedral by Germans. British cruiser Pegasus completely disabled while at anchor in Zanzibar Harbor by German cruiser Koenigsberg.

- Sept. 22.—British cruisers Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy sunk by German submarine in North Sea.
- Sept. 28.—Germans bombard Antwerp's first line of defence.
- Oct. 5.—Belgian Government removed from Antwerp to Ostend.
- Oct. 7.—Japanese seize Caroline Islands.
- Oct. 9.—Germans occupy Antwerp.
- Oct. 11.—German advance in Poland threatens Warsaw.
- Oct. 12.—Martial law declared throughout Union of South Africa on account of mutinies by Boer leaders.
- Oct. 13.—Belgian Government removed from Ostend to Havre.
- Oct. 15.—Ostend occupied by Germans.
- Oct. 16.—British cruiser Hawke sunk by German submarine.
- Oct. 17.—Japanese cruiser Takachiho sunk by torpedo in Kiauchau Bay.
- Oct. 18.—Belgian Army effects junction with allied left. Beginning of battle from Channel coast to Lisle.
- Oct. 24.—Ten days battle before Warsaw ends in German defeat.
- Oct. 27.—The "Audacious" one of the new British dreadnoughts, sunk by a mine off the Irish Coast.
- Oct. 29.—Turkey begins war on Russia by naval attacks on Black Sea ports.
- Nov. 1.—German squadron defeated British squadron off Coronel, Chile.
- Nov. 5.—England and France declare war on Turkey. Dardanelles forts bombarded.
- Nov. 6.—Kiauchau surrenders to Japanese.
- Nov. 11.—Germans cross Yser Canal and capture Dixmude.
- Nov. 13.—Russians seize Tarnow, Krosno, and Jaslo.
- Nov. 18.—Officially reported that a launch of U. S. S. Tennessee was fired on in harbor of Smyrna, Turkey.
- Nov. 21.—Russians capture Gumbinnen.
- Nov. 22.—Turks gain victory over British near Port Said, east of the Suez Canal.
- Nov. 23.—Beginning of second Battle of Ypres in the Argonne.
- Nov. 24.—Russian victory concludes ten-day battle in Poland.
- Nov. 25.—British steamer Malachite sunk near Havre by German submarine.
- Nov. 26.—British predreadnought Bulwark blown up in the Thames.
- Nov. 27.—French gain strongholds along line from the Channel to Muehlhausen. Bombardment of Rheims effected.
- Nov. 29.—Important positions captured by Allies near Ypres. Russians seize Czernowitz.
- Nov. 30.—Capture of Belgrade by Austrians ends 126-day siege.
- Dec. 3.—Germans take offensive position between Ypres and Dixmude.
- Dec. 5.—Allies successfully resist the German attack at Ypres.
- Dec. 6.—Germans capture Lodz and threaten Warsaw.
- Dec. 8.—British battleship squadron meets and destroys four German cruisers off Falkland Islands. Only one German cruiser escapes and this is pursued by the British fleet. British force captures Kurna in Turkey.
- Dec. 10.—Von Moltke is succeeded by von Falkenhayn as head of the German General Staff.
- Dec. 12.—Austrians repulsed by Serbians at Kosmai.

DESCRIPTIVE GAZETTEER OF THE PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

Abbreviations: Cap.=Capital; c.h.=County Seat.

Aachen, (Fr. Aix-la-Chapelle), Germany (Prussia), is an important industrial and commercial center, with iron and steel works and noted manufactories of woollen, cloth, chemicals, glass, and machinery. Large coal fields are in the neighborhood. It has several hot and cold mineral springs well-known since the time of Charlemagne. Aachen is rich in historical associations. It has a famous ancient cathedral, which contains the tomb of Charlemagne, who greatly favored the town, and who died here in 814. From 813 to 1531 the German emperors were crowned here, and the coronation hall, where the banquet after the coronation took place and which is located in the city hall, has been now restored according to its original form. Two celebrated treaties of peace were concluded here; one in 1668 between France and Spain, by which France secured a portion of Flanders; and one in 1748, which terminated the war of the Austrian Succession. A famous congress of the principal European Powers took place here in 1818, in order to settle the affairs of Europe after the final overthrow of Napoleon.

Aalborg, Denmark (Jutland), is a seaport with important fisheries and an active export in agricultural produce. It is the seat of a bishop.

Aarhuus, Denmark (Jutland), is a seaport with a large transit trade. It is a bishop's see, and contains a fine Gothic cathedral dating from the 13th century.

Abbeokuta, Southern Nigeria, Africa, is a town with an extensive trade, situated 60 miles from Lagos on the Guinea coast, with which it is connected by railroad.

Aberdare, Wales (Glamorgan), has extensive collieries, and iron and tin works.

Aberdeen, Scotland (Aberdeen), is a seaport and the chief city in the North of Scotland. It is a pretty city, built chiefly of granite and hence called "the Granite City." The principal industries are salmon and herring fisheries, fish-curing, engineering, granite-polishing, and the manufacture of paper, leather, combs, woollens, and cottons. It has a university.

Aberdeen, South Dakota (c. h. Brown Co.), is an important railroad and trade center in a prosperous agricultural section.

Abo, Russia (Finland), is a seaport and coaling station, and has large exports of timber and iron. It is the seat of an archbishop.

Accrington, England (Lancashire), has extensive cotton mills, calico-printing works, iron-foundries, and manufacture of chemicals. Coal-mines are nearby.

Acireale, Italy (Catania), is a seaside health resort located at the foot of Mt. Etna, and has several mineral springs. The famous cave of Polyphemus and the grotto of Galatea are in the neighborhood. It is the seat of a bishop.

Acton, England (Middlesex), is a suburb of London, situated 8 miles west of St. Paul's Cathedral.

Adams, Massachusetts (Berkshire Co.), contains manufactories of soap, cotton, warp, etc.

Adana, Turkey in Asia (cap. Adana), has a large trade in wool, wheat, and wine, and is connected by railroad with Mersina, a port on the Mediterranean.

Addis Abeba, cap. Abyssinia (Shoa), has an extensive trade. A treaty of peace was signed here in 1896 between Abyssinia and Italy, by which Italy renounced her claim of a protectorate over Abyssinia.

Adelaide, cap. South Australia. Australia, is spaciouly laid out on a large plain at the base of Mount Lofty range, and is about 7½ miles from its seaport. Port Adelaide. It has a university, a botanical and zoological garden, and chief among its public buildings are the parliament houses, government offices, city hall, museum, and library. It is the seat of an Anglican and of a Roman Catholic bishop. Adelaide is the great emporium of trade for South Australia, and exports large quantities of wool, wheat, flour, wine, and copper ore.

Aden, Arabia, is a strongly fortified seaport and coaling station belonging to England. It is of great strategic and commercial importance especially since the opening of the Suez Canal. The principal exports are coffee, gums, spices, pearls, ostrich feathers, and hides.

Adrian, Michigan (c. h. Lenawee Co.), is a trade center and manufacturing town, and has a college and a state industrial school for girls.

Adrianople, Turkey (cap. Adrianople), is one of the principal commercial cities of Turkey in Europe, with manufactures of silk and tobacco, and large trade in perfumes and wine. It was the capital of the Turkish Empire from 1366 to 1453, and contains a beautiful mosque and a palace. It was occupied by the Russians during the Russo-Turkish war of 1829, and the treaty of peace, which concluded that war, was signed here. It was again occupied by the Russians during the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-8.

Agra, India (United Provinces), is a fortified town, a great railroad center, and one of the leading commercial places in the northwestern part of India. The leading manufactures are gold lace and inlaid mosaic work, and the principal articles of trade are cotton, wheat, salt, tobacco, and sugar. Agra was the capital of the Mogul Empire from the beginning of the 16th century to 1658, and it has conserved from that period some magnificent buildings. Of these the Taj Mahal is famous as a gem of Indian architecture in a setting of beautiful gardens. It is a mosque-like mausoleum, built in the 17th century by the Emperor Shah Jehan, in commemoration of his favorite queen. It is of white marble with dome and minarets and is ornamented with the exquisite mosaics for which Agra is still famous. The Moti-Masjid, or "Pearl Mosque," closely rivals in beauty the Taj Mahal.

Agram, Hungary (cap. Croatia and Slavonia), is the chief city of Croatia, and an archiepiscopal see. It has manufactures of linen, tobacco, and hides. It has a university, a national museum, and a fine Gothic cathedral, dating partly from the 11th century.

Aguascalientes, Mexico (cap. Aguascalientes), is famous for the hot springs from which it derives its name. It has large smelters, railway shops, and an active trade.

Ahmadabad, India (Bombay), has manufactures of cotton, gold-brocaded silks, pottery, paper, and tin. It was founded in 1412, and was formerly a city of great splendor, but has now fallen into decay. Its architectural remains, however, are even now magnificent, and often exhibit striking combinations of Jain and Saracenic characteristics. The most important buildings are the Great Mosque, adorned with two superbly decorated minarets; and the Ivory Mosque, so called because, although built of marble, it is lined with ivory and inlaid with gems.

Aidin, Turkey in Asia (Aidin), has manufactures of morocco leather and considerable trade in figs, olives, and grapes.

Alx, France (Bouches-du-Rhône), is the seat of an archbishop and has a university, a large library, and an old cathedral. The town has grown up around a hot saline spring known before the Roman invasion. Produces olive-oil and wine, and manufactures hats.

Aix-les-Bains, France (Savoie), is a famous health resort, with numerous warm mineral springs.

Ajaccio, France (cap. Corsica), is famous as the birthplace of Napoleon. It is a seaport with a good harbor, and has a large trade in olive-oil and wine as well as important anchovy and pearl fisheries. It is a favorite winter health resort. It is the seat of a bishop.

Ajmere, India (Rajputana), is an ancient city and famous place of pilgrimage, containing the tomb of a Mahomedan saint of the 13th century. It exports large quantities of cotton.

Akerman, Russia (Bessarabia), is a fortified seaport with a good harbor. It has large fishing establishments, and exports a good wine produced in the neighborhood.

Akita, Japan (cap. Akita), is a seaport with large exports of rice and manufactures of cloth and silk.

Akron, Ohio (c. h. Summit Co.), has manufactures of cereals, woollens, agricultural implements, and automobile tires; has large printing works and a college.

Alameda, California (Alameda Co.), is a suburb of Oakland, with pleasant gardens and homes. There is some shipbuilding here.

Albany, cap. New York (c. h. Albany Co.), is a city expanded from one of the earliest foreign settlements in the United States, having been started in 1540 by the French and carried on by the Dutch, who erected Fort Orange. It was captured by the English in 1664, and then named in honor of the Duke of Albany. Situated near the head of navigation of the Hudson River, connected by canals with the Great Lakes and the Lake Champlain system, and being at the junction of several railroad lines, Albany has commercial importance. Its leading industries are printing, bookbinding, brewing, and the manufacture of stoves and other metal articles. Among its prominent buildings are the State Capitol, completed in 1898, which cost nearly $25,000,000; and the Education Building, which contains the offices of the State Department of Education, a valuable library of over 500,000 volumes, a library school, and a museum of natural history, all under State control. Other prominent buildings are the Cathedral of All Saints, Dudley Observatory, and the City Hall, designed by H. H. Richardson.

Albuquerque, New Mexico (c. h. Bernalillo Co.), is the largest city of New Mexico, and an important railroad and trade center. It is the seat of the University of New Mexico. Gold, silver, and copper mines are in the vicinity.

Alcamo, Italy (Trapani), is an ancient city of Sicily, built on the north slope of Mt. Bonifato, and contains many interesting ruins of mediæval buildings.

Alcoy, Spain (Alicante), is an important industrial town, with manufactures of cloth, linen, matches, and paper—especially cigarette-paper.

Aldershot, England (Hampshire), has nearby the largest military camp in England.

Aleppo, Turkey in Asia (cap. Aleppo), is an important and historic trade center of Northern Syria, and one of the prettiest cities of the East, with clean, well-paved streets, stately buildings and numerous mosques with their fine cupolas and minarets. Its Italianized name is reminiscent of the trade relations with Venice, active to the close of the 15th century, when the discovery of the Cape route to India deprived Aleppo of its position as the principal emporium of trade between Asia and Europe. Its trade is still very extensive, and it has, besides manufactures of silks, cottons, carpets, gold and silver threadstuffs, soap, and leather goods. Its port is Alexandretta, on the Mediterranean about 70 miles to the west.

Alessandria, Italy (cap. Alessandria), is the strongest fortified town in Northern Italy and an important railroad center. It has manufactures of silk, linen, hats, and macaroni, and carries on an active trade. It is the seat of a bishop. Near Alessandria took place in 1800 the famous battle of Marengo.

Alexandria, Egypt, is the principal port and coaling station of the country, and one of the chief commercial places on the Mediterranean, with large exports of cotton, cotton-seed, sugar, dates, tobacco, etc. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic archbishop. Alexandria was one of the most famous cities of antiquity. It was founded by Alexander the Great in 332 B. C., and soon became the center of the world's commerce. It reached its highest splendor under the Ptolemies, when it was second only to Rome, and was the principal seat of Greek culture, which spread from here to all parts of the world (3rd century B. C.—4th century A. D.). It contained the famous Alexandrian library, the largest of the ancient world. One of the so-called Cleopatra's Needles, two obelisks of the 16th century B. C. which stood at Alexandria, was presented in 1881 by the Khedive of Egypt to the United States, and was placed in Central Park in New York; the other stands on the Thames Embankment in London.

Alexandria, Virginia (Alexandria Co.), has numerous buildings of historical interest including Christ Church, with the pews in which George Washington and Robert E. Lee worshipped; the old Carlyle House, the headquarters of General Braddock in 1755; and the so-called Lord Fairfax House, a fine example of Colonial architecture. Nearby is Mt. Vernon, the home of George Washington.

Alexandropol, Russia (Erivan), is an important fortress and town of Russian Armenia.

Alexandrovsk, Russia (Ekaterinoslaf), has an extensive grain trade and three annual fairs.

Algiers, cap. Algeria (cap. Algiers), is a strongly fortified seaport and coaling station, which since the French occupation has been transformed from an oriental town to a place of even more modern aspect than many European cities. It has large open squares and gardens, and imposing public buildings, among which are the palaces of the government, the Roman Catholic Cathedral, the military academy, the astronomical observatory, etc. It has become lately a favorite winter resort for Europeans. Algiers is the chief commercial center of the country and its principal exports are flour, esparto, wine, olive-oil, and fruit.

Alicante, Spain (cap. Alicante), is a seaport with large exports of lead, copper, almonds, licorice, esparto, and wine.

Alligarh, India (United Provinces), is the seat of a Mohammedan college, and contains a historic fort. The native city is called Koil.

Allahabad, India (United Provinces), is a fortified town, an important railroad center, and being situated on the great waterway between Calcutta and the North of India, is also a very active commercial center, marketing the cotton, sugar, indigo, and other products of the district. The present city with its great citadel was founded by Akbar in 1575. Allahabad is a sacred city of the Hindus and a much-frequented place of pilgrimage. It has a university.

Allegheny, Pennsylvania. See Pittsburg.

Allenstein, Germany (Prussia), has important iron-foundries and machine-shops.

Allentown, Pennsylvania (c. h. Lehigh Co.), has manufactures of iron, steel, silk, clothing, etc. It is the seat of Muhlenburg College, and of a woman's college.

Almeria, Spain (cap. Almeria), is a fortified seaport. It exports grapes, almonds, and oranges.

Alost, Belgium (East Flanders), is a fortified town with manufactures of lace, linen, cottons, and leather.

Alpena, Michigan (c. h. Alpena Co.), is a summer resort and milling town on Thunder Bay. It has extensive shingle and flour mills, tanneries, and cement works.

Altenburg, Germany (cap. Saxe-Altenburg), has manufactures of brushes, woollen goods, gloves, and cigars. Near the town is a famous ducal castle, dating from the 14th century and restored in 1865-70.

Altendorf, Germany (Rhenish Prussia), is a suburb of Essen, and contains numerous industrial colonies.

Alton, Illinois (Madison Co.), has several collegiate institutions and produces building-stone, brick, coal, agricultural implements, etc.

Altona, Germany (Prussia), is a free port and coaling station adjoining Hamburg, and has varied industries, including extensive manufactures of tobacco and cigars.

Altoona, Pennsylvania (Blair Co.), is a mining, manufacturing, and farming trade center. Here the locomotive and car works on the Pennsylvania railroad employ about 12,000 men.

Alwar, India (Rajputana), is a trade center, and contains a notable palace of the Maharajah.

Amarillo, Texas (c. h. Potter Co.), is an important trade center in a rich agricultural section of the "pan-handle" of Texas. Dry farming is extensively carried on in the vicinity.

Ambala, India (Punjab), is a trade center and military station.

Amiens, France (cap. Somme), is a large manufacturing center, with extensive manufactories of cotton, velvet, plush, tapestry, linen fabrics, silk, beet sugar, and paper. It is the seat of a bishop and its cathedral, built in the 13th century, is a masterpiece of Gothic architecture. Other noteworthy buildings are the city hall (1600-1760), in which the Peace of Amiens was signed in 1802; the large museum in Renaissance style (1864); and the public library (1791).

Amoy, China (Fokien), is a treaty port and coaling station with a large, well-sheltered harbor for the largest vessels. Exports chiefly tea, sugar, and rice.

Amritsar, India (Punjab), is an important trade center and the religious metropolis of the Sikhs, a distinction which, along with its name (literally, "pool of immortality"), it owes to its sacred tank, in the midst of which stands the marble temple of the Sikh faith. There is also a remarkable moated fortress. It manufactures shawls, cotton and silks.

Amsterdam, Netherlands (North Holland), is a seaport and the largest and most important city of the country. It has an extensive harbor for the largest vessels, where the Amstel joins the "Y",—an enlarged arm of Zuider Zee—and is also connected with the North Sea by a large canal. Amsterdam is the headquarters of the shipping interests and of the financial institutions of the Netherlands. It exports butter, margarin, cheese, gin, linen, Westphalian coal, coke, and iron, and is the principal market for the produce of the Dutch colonies, namely, rice, coffee, sugar, spices, tin, petroleum, and timber. The chief industrial establishments are sugar-refineries, engineering-works, mills for polishing diamonds and other precious stones, breweries, distilleries, etc. Amsterdam is a picturesque city, somewhat semicircular in plan, composed chiefly of red brick houses erected on piles driven through loam and loose sand to a firmer sub-stratum. In the older houses goods were frequently stored in attics, and a characteristic feature is the great hooks and tackle projecting from the quaintly-fashioned gable ends. Many of the streets are threaded by canals, which carry much of the heavy traffic, and are crossed by about 300 bridges. A great palace and some famous old churches are of interest to travellers, but the superb art collections, comprising many paintings by renowned Dutch and Flemish masters, and particularly rich in Rembrandts are the pride of the city. Many of these are housed in the magnificent National Museum built 1877-85. It has a university, an academy of sciences, and botanical and zoological gardens, famous for the excellence and rarity of their exhibits, and the fine condition of the animals. The decline of Antwerp and the closing of the Schelde in the 16th and 17th centuries raised Amsterdam to the rank of the first commercial city in Europe at that time. Its present development dates from the opening of its North Sea Canal in 1876.

Amsterdam, New York (Montgomery Co.) is an industrial center, with extensive manufactories of carpets, knit-goods, silks, etc.

Ancona, Italy (cap. Ancona), is a fortified seaport and naval arsenal, and the most important Italian port on the Adriatic after Venice. It exports grain, fruit, hides, silks, asphalt, and sulphur. It is a bishop's see and has a cathedral dating from the 11th century.

Anderlecht, Belgium (Brabant), is a manufacturing suburb of Brussels with extensive textile works.

Anderson, Indiana (c. h. Madison Co.), has extensive manufactories of iron and steel, glass, brick, etc.

Andijan, Russia (Russian Turkestan), is a trade center situated in the midst of a fruit growing region.

Andria, Italy (Bari), is the seat of a bishop, and has a fine cathedral built in the 11th century. Manufactures majolica, and has large trade in almonds.

Angers, France (cap. Maine-et-Loire), has manufactures of silks, woollens, cottons, iron and copper wares, and a large trade in wine and agricultural produce. It is the seat of a bishop, and has a fine cathedral dating from the 13th century.

Angouleme, France (cap. Charente), has manufactures of paper and a large trade in cognac. It is the seat of a bishop, and has a fine cathedral in the Romanesque style dating from the 12th century. It is the birthplace of Marguerite of Navarre (1492), author of the "Heptameron."

Ann Arbor, Michigan (c. h. Washtenau Co.), has important manufactories of agricultural implements. It is the seat of the state University of Michigan, founded in 1837, and one of the most important educational institutions in the United States; it is attended by about 5,000 students, and is richly endowed.

Ansonia, Connecticut (New Haven Co.), has manufactures of clocks, brass and copper goods, woollens, etc.

Antequera, Spain (Malaga), has a large trade in olive-oil and fruit.

Antigua, Guatemala, was the ancient capital of the country. Its inhabitants are largely engaged in making carved cane heads and dolls, representing very accurately national costumes and customs.

Antofagasta, Chile (Antofagasta), is a seaport with a rough landing through surf. It exports saltpeter, borax, silver and copper ores, etc.

Antwerp, Belgium (cap. Antwerp), is a strongly fortified city, and has one of the finest harbors in the world, made by dredging out the river Schelde. Its quays extend for more than 3½ miles, and it is a coaling station and an important port for the interior, being the terminus of many steamship lines. Diamond-cutting is one of its important trades, and its manufactures include silks, velvets, laces, serges, and flannels; these, with grain, chemicals, coal, iron, glass, and various other manufactured articles are exported. There are also extensive shipbuilding yards and sugar-refineries. While possessing handsome modern residences and business sections, Antwerp is famous for its many ancient edifices; such as the city hall and the guild houses, partially enclosing the square upon which faces the famous cathedral, which was begun in 1352 and completed in 1592, and which is a masterpiece of Gothic architecture. The house and shop of Christopher Plantin, one of the earliest and most famous printers, stands now substantially as it did in the owner's time, having been transformed into a museum. Everywhere are ancient wood-carvings, iron-work, and other metal objects, which are of much interest to students of art and antiquities. There is an art school in Antwerp, and a fine art gallery containing many modern paintings, as well as old masters. The works of Rubens, Van Dyck, and other Flemish painters are treasured in the museums and churches. Rubens is buried in the Church of St. Jacques, but three of his most magnificent religious pictures, the Assumption, the Descent from the Cross, and the Elevation of the Cross, are hung in the cathedral. There is a famous zoological garden in Antwerp. Before its occupation by the Spaniards in the 16th century Antwerp was among the greatest commercial cities of the world. It soon sank into utter ruin, but began to prosper again during the French occupation at the beginning of the 19th century.

Aomori, Japan (cap. Aomori), has a fine natural harbor and considerable trade.

Apeldoorn, Netherlands (Gelderland), has paper-mills. Nearby is the castle of Het Loo, the summer residence of the royal family.

Appleton, Wisconsin (c. h. Outagamie Co.), has flour, paper, wood-pulp, and woollen mills. It is the seat of several collegiate institutions.

Aquila, Italy (cap. Aquila degli Abruzzi), has manufactures of paper and linen, and a large trade in saffron, which is cultivated in the neighborhood. It is the seat of a bishop, and has a fine cathedral dating from the 13th century, which has been lately restored.

Arad, Hungary, is a fortified town and an important railway center. It has large distilleries and flour-mills, and an active trade in agricultural produce and cattle. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop.

Arequipa, Peru (cap. Arequipa), is the second largest town in Peru, and has a large trade in wool, alpaca, gold and silver ores, and cattle. It is situated near the volcano El Misti, and has suffered severely from earthquakes. It is the seat of a Catholic bishop. Arequipa was founded by Francisco Pizarro in 1540.

Arezzo, Italy (cap. Arezzo), is an ancient Etruscan city, which abounds in architectural remains of the Middle Ages, including a 13th century cathedral. It is the seat of a bishop. The poet Petrarch was born here in 1304.

Argao, Philippine Islands (Cebu), is a seaport with a good harbor.

Arlès, France (Bouches-du-Rhône), is one of the oldest towns of southern France, with famous Roman ruins, the most extensive being the great amphitheatre, which is supposed to have surpassed that of Nîmes, but which has since been converted into a bullring. Among the more modern buildings of note are the mediæval cathedral and the Church of Notre Dame. It has shipbuilding yards and manufactures silk and hats.

Armentières, France (Nord), has extensive manufactures of linen and cotton.

Arnhem, Netherlands (cap. Gelderland), has interesting churches and public buildings, which contain valuable art collections. It manufactures furniture, glass, and paper.

Aschersleben, Germany (Prussia), has manufactures of machinery, linen, woollen goods, etc.

Ascoli, Italy (cap. Ascoli-Piceno), is an ancient city with many interesting remains including a very ancient cathedral. It is the seat of a bishop. Manufactures majolica, glass and paper.

Ascot, England (Berkshire), is a famous race-course situated 6 miles southwest of Windsor. The races, which are held in June and are attended by the royal family in semi-state, are one of the social events of the year.

Asheville, North Carolina (c. h. Buncombe Co.), is a widely-known health resort, frequented by southerners for its comparative coolness in summer (mean temp. 72°) and by northern folk for its mildness in winter (39°) and spring (53°). Its climate is dry and bracing, and is said to be pre-eminently suitable for checking the early stages of tuberculosis, while sufferers from asthma, hay fever, etc., derive benefit here. The surroundings are notably picturesque.

Ashkabad, Russia in Asia (Turkestan), has a large distributing trade.

Ashland, Wisconsin (c. h. Ashland Co.), is at the head of navigation of Lake Winnebago and Green Bay waterway, and is a shipping port for the hematite ore of the Gogebic Iron Range. It has enormous ore docks, large charcoal blast-furnaces, and lumber mills. It has several collegiate institutions.

Ashtabula, Ohio (Ashtabula Co.), is an important iron ore shipping point, and has large iron-works, tanneries, etc.

Ashton-under-Lyne, England (Lancashire), has extensive manufactures of cotton, and large dyeing establishments.

Asnières, France (Seine), is a residential suburb of Paris, on the Seine.

Asti, Italy (Alessandria), is the seat of a bishop and has a Gothic cathedral (13th century) with numerous fine paintings. Asti is famous for its wine.

Aston Manor, England (Warwick), has extensive machine-shops and manufactures of arms, toys, etc.

Astrakhan, Russia (cap. Astrakhan), is the chief port of the Caspian Sea, and is situated about 40 miles from the mouth of the Volga. It has a large distributing trade in cottons, fish, caviare, rice, wool, petroleum, timber, and fruit. One of the largest fairs in Russia is held here annually. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox and of an Armenian bishop.

Asuncion, cap. Paraguay, is at the head of navigation of the Parana River, and has an extensive trade in tobacco, hides, and Paraguay tea. It is one of the oldest towns in South America, having been founded on August 15, 1536. It is the seat of a Catholic bishop.

Atchison, Kansas (c. h. Atchison Co.), has a large trade in grain, flour, and live stock, and more than fifty important manufacturing establishments. It is the seat of the State Soldiers' Orphans' Home, an insane asylum, and several collegiate institutions.

Athens, Georgia (c. h. Clarke Co.), has a large trade in cotton, and numerous manufactories of cotton products. It is the seat of the University of Georgia and of the State College of Agriculture, and has a State Normal School and several other educational institutions.

Athens, cap. Greece (cap. Attica), was anciently the capital of the state of Attica, and the chief center of Greek literature, art, and culture. It is now the capital of the modern kingdom of Greece, and the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop. It is a well-built city with a fine royal palace, many handsome private residences, a university, and other educational institutions. It has an important trade, and manufactures of morocco leather, and silks. The city, which takes its name from Athena, "goddess of science, arts and arms," who was its own patron divinity, was originally built on the Acropolis,—a "conspicuous limestone rock rising 500 ft. above the Attic plain,—but ultimately extended to the plain itself; while the Acropolis became the citadel and subsequently the site of a group of beautiful temples at the time of Pericles (5th century B. C.). The ruins of the Parthenon, the Erechtheum, the temple of Nike Apteros ("Wingless Victory"), and the Propylæa, still remain to testify to the former glory of the Acropolis. Of the other ancient buildings the most notable are the Theseum (also of the Periclean period, and still almost perfect); the fragments of the vast temple of Zeus (begun in 530 B. C. and finished by the Roman Emperor Hadrian in the 2nd century A. D.); the theatre of Dionysus, etc. Not far from the Acropolis rose the hill Lycabettus (911 ft.), and the hillocks or ridges of the Pnyx and of the Areopagus, or Mars Hill. At a greater distance the plain is bounded by Hymettus (3,368 ft.), Pentelicus (3,641 ft.), and other ranges. According to tradition Athens was founded by the legendary hero Cecrops. The most brilliant period of the history of Athens was when, after the Persian wars (5th century B. C.), it took the lead amongst the Greek states, became powerful by land and sea, was adorned by Pericles with most glorious buildings, and brought Greek literature, philosophy, and art to their highest development. Its decline dates from the disastrous conclusion of the Peloponnesian war (403 B. C.). It was plundered and ruined by Sulla in 87 B. C., and neither under Byzantine nor Turkish rule ever attained any prosperity. Many of the buildings on the Acropolis have been destroyed since the 15th century, especially during the Venetian raids.

Atlanta, cap. Georgia (c. h. Fulton Co.), is a prosperous commercial and industrial city, an important railway center, and the largest wholesale distributing point of the southeastern states. It has extensive manufactures of cotton, fertilizers, patent medicines, car wheels, flour and iron, and is one of the chief distributing points in the South for northern and western manufactures. The great staples of its trade are tobacco and cotton. The chief point of interest in the history of Atlanta, which was founded in 1840, is its siege and capture (Sept. 2nd, 1864) by Gen. Sherman, who, after holding the city for two months, began here his famous "March to the Sea."

Atlantic City, New Jersey (Atlantic Co.), is the most frequented seaside resort of America, the population of which is increased about fivefold in August by visitors from all over the country. It is also frequented in winter and spring, the climate being comparatively mild and sunny and the air exceedingly bracing. The beach is one of the finest in America, and from 50,000 to 100,000 people often bathe here in one day. Constantinople), is a port, naval and coaling station, and the chief commercial center of the Levant, famous for its Oriental aspect, and for the beauty of its site, on a peninsula jutting into the Strait of Bosphorus, with the inlet called the Golden Horn on its north. The chief quarters of the city are Pera, Gaalata, Tophane, and Scutari. The old Seraglio occupies a large space at the outer tip of the peninsula. At one time it was entered from the quays, through a great gate—destroyed by fire in the sixties—the "Sublime Porte", from whence the cognomen of the Ottoman government is derived. The old Theragan Serai, the chief of the imperial palaces, was finished in 1857 by Abdil-Medjid in the style of the Turkish Renaissance. It is a marble building of great size, and its interior decorations and arrangements are of a luxury and magnificence which are unexcelled in Europe. Its chief facade, about 2,400 ft. long, is mirrored in the Bosphorus. Constantinople is the seat of the Sheik-ul-Islam, or the head of the Mohammedan religion, and of a Greek Orthodox archbishop. Of its numerous and beautiful mosques the principal is the great Byzantine mosque of Santa Sophia, originally a Greek church built by Justinian, famous for its interior decorations of colored marble and mosaics on a gold ground; it has forests of exquisite columns, and is lighted by many hanging lamps. Constantinople has a university founded in 1900, and numerous other educational institutions. It also possesses several libraries, museums, and scientific, and art institutions. Its great bazaars, and the varied and picturesque industries and merchandise of the East, are the liveliest part of the city. Ships of the large class find anchorage in the harbor, and there are large graving and dry docks. Exports grain, mohair, opium, silks, carpets, wool, drugs, dye-woods, and hides. The city was founded by Constantine the Great 330 A. D., was the capital of the Eastern Empire after 995; was unsuccessfully besieged by the Arabs, especially in 718; and was taken by the Latins in 1203-04, by Michael Palaeologus in 1261, and by the Turks, May 29, 1453.

Delft, Netherlands (South Holland), was famous in the 17th and 18th centuries for its porcelain, and of late years the industry has been revived. It also manufactures carpets, firearms, etc. The Oude Kerk contains monuments to Admiral Piet Hein and A. van Leeuwenhoek (born here in 1632), also the tomb of Admiral Maarten Tromp. In the Nieuwe Kerk (1384-96), is the grand monument which the United Provinces erected (1616-21) to William the Silent, who was assassinated (1584) in Delft. It was also for generations the burial-place of the princes of the House of Orange.

Delhi, cap. India (Punjab), contains a grand palace, and the Jama Masjid—the largest cathedral mosque in India—monuments of the Emperor Shah Jehan, who, in the 17th century, founded the present city. Beyond the walls can be traced the sites of ancient Delhi. Of these memorials the most striking are the deserted fortress of Taghlakabad, the mausoleum of the Emperor Humayun, and the Kutab Minar. Once the seat of Buddhist religious life and culture, Delhi became in the 12th century the splendid capital of the Mogul empire and the center of Mohammedan power. In 1857, it was the scene of a frightful massacre of Europeans, during the Sepoy Rebellion, but was subsequently captured after a long siege. On New Year's Day, 1903, Delhi furnished the setting of the pageant of the coronation durbar. The principal industries are ivory-carving, miniature-painting on ivory, and pottery.

Denison, Texas (Grayson Co.), is a cattle-shipping place and trade center. Has manufactories of cotton, iron, machinery, etc.

Denver, cap. Colorado (c. h. Denver Co.), is the metropolis of Colorado and the Rocky Mountain region, and is the principal smelting center of the world. It lies within sight of the mountains, at an altitude of one mile above the sea, and its climate is one of the most delightful and remarkable in the country. The mean annual temperature is 49°, and the annual rainfall about 15 inches. Its jobbing trade extends over a wide area of territory and is very extensive. The University of Denver, a coeducational institution, has departments here and in a suburb, University Park. Here are also located the College of the Sacred Heart, a Baptist woman's college, and numerous other educational institutions. Strafford Co.), has abundant water-power, and its industries include several large woollen-mills and extensive print-works, also the manufacture of boots and shoes, oilcloth, hats and caps, sand-paper and glue. It has also several tanneries, brass- and iron-foundries, and machine-shops. It is the oldest city in the state, having been settled in 1623.

Drammen, Norway (Buskerud), is a port and one of the oldest towns in Norway. It is a great timber emporium, and has iron-foundries, breweries, and knitting-works.

Dresden, Germany (cap. Kg. Saxony), was by reason of its situation and its art treasures called by Herder, the "German Florence." The handsomest part of the city is the portion on the south bank which faces the river, namely the Brühl Terrace and the square at its west end where are clustered together the Albertinum (1884-9), which contains a valuable archaeological museum; statues of Semper (1891), Ludwig, Richter (1898), and the Elector Maurice of Saxony (1895); the sumptuous Art Academy (1890-4); the court (Roman Catholic) church; the royal palace (first built in 1530-5, and rebuilt 1890-1902), with its "green vaults," which contain numerous gems of artistic work in enamel, crystal, gold, ivory, bronze, silver, wax, etc.; the handsome royal opera-house (1869-78); and the vast pile known as the Zwinger, in which is preserved a choice and very valuable gallery of old masters and other collections. Dresden also possesses the Johanneum museum, the national industrial art museum, a municipal museum, fine monuments of Carl Maria von Weber (who is buried in Dresden), Goethe and Schiller, Luther, King John, Körner, and other celebrities, by such artists as Rietchel, Hähnel, Schilling, and Kircheisen. Also, on the south side, but more distant from the river, are the law-courts, synagogue, Schilling museum, and the large royal garden, embracing within its confines two royal palaces, an exhibition hall, and zoological and botanical gardens. On the opposite bank—i. e. the right bank of the Elbe—there is another frontage of handsome edifices, including the Japanese Palace (1715), which shelters the royal library; the Körner museum, so named after Theodore Körner, who was born in Dresden; and the ministries of justice, war, and finance. Dresden's fame as a center of artistic and intellectual activity is supported by its conservatory of music and by the polytechnical high school. It has considerable industries, including tobacco, machinery, chemicals, paper, piano, and sugar works, etc.

Dublin, cap. Ireland (cap. Dublin), is a port and coaling-station, and the metropolis of Ireland. It is one of the handsomest capitals of Europe. The splendid Phoenix Park has an area of nearly 2,000 acres, and includes a well-known zoological garden. Among the institutions of note are Trinity College, founded in 1591, a Roman Catholic university, the Royal College of Surgeons, and the Royal University of Ireland. Leinster House, once the town mansion of the Dukes of Leinster, now the home of the Royal Dublin Society, has been enlarged by the erection of a national art gallery and a museum of natural history. New buildings for a science and art museum and a national library were opened in 1890. Among the other public edifices may be mentioned the Bank of Ireland (formerly the Houses of Parliament), the custom-house, and the Four Courts. The Castle (the Lord Lieutenant's official residence) has no pretensions to architectural beauty. The Chapel is interesting and contains some fine carved work of Grinling Gibbons. Dublin is remarkable in possessing two Protestant cathedrals. St. Patrick's, founded in 1190, was restored in 1865, and Christ Church, dating from 1038, but not raised to cathedral rank till 1541, is a smaller but more beautiful edifice. Everett, Washington (c. h. Snohomish Co.), is a port on Puget Sound with large manufactures of flour, paper, and lumber. It is the center of an extensive mining region producing gold, silver, lead, and copper.

Exeter, England (Devonshire), is one of the chief cities of western England which still retains to a great extent its antique appearance. Considerable portions of the ancient walls remain, but the principal object of interest is the cathedral, begun in 1112 and dedicated in 1351. The other ancient buildings are the bishop's palace (14th century), and the Hall of the College of Vicars, incorporated in 1401. The chief manufactures are paper, iron and brass, tanneries and breweries.

Fairbanks, Alaska, is the largest city of Alaska and an important mining center for a region vast in extent and rich in precious metals.

Faizabad, India (United Provinces), is an important railway center, and occupies the site of an ancient city, Ajodhya.

Falkirk, Scotland (Stirling), is famous for its cattle markets. In and near the town are several iron-works, and coal is mined extensively in the vicinity. Brewing, distilling, tanning, brick and tile making, and the manufacture of chemicals are among the other industries. It was the scene of the defeat of Wallace by Edward I. in 1298, and of the victory of Prince Charles Edward over General Hawley in 1746.

Fall River, Massachusetts (c. h. Bristol Co.), is a port of entry, and one of the chief cotton-manufacturing places in New England. It has large manufactures of cotton, thread, woollens, bobbins, shuttles, rubber, rope, wire, machinery, etc. The river, to which it owes its name, rises a little to the east, and falls about 140 feet within one-half mile, affording admirable water-power for the mills. Granite is quarried in the vicinity.

Fargo, North Dakota (c. h. Cass Co.), is the largest city in the state, and has a considerable jobbing trade. Has large railroad car-shops, flour- and planing-mills, grain elevators, and packing industries. It has an extensive trade in agricultural implements. The state agricultural and mechanical college, and a United States land-office are located here.

Farukhabad, India (United Provinces), has a government gun-carriage factory, and a large trade.

Feleghaza, Hungary, has fruit, wine, and tobacco industries.

Fernie, British Columbia, Canada, is an important trade and coal-mining center with extensive collieries and coke ovens. It is an outfitting point for hunters in the East Kootenai game reserve. It has large saw-mills, railway-shops, and other industries.

Ferrara, Italy (cap. Ferrara), as the capital of the powerful family of Este, was from the 14th to the 17th century a large and prosperous city. Now its wide deserted streets and decaying palaces give it an air of desolation. Nevertheless it possesses a fine Lombardesque cathedral (12th and 13th centuries), the castle, or old ducal palace, a good picture-gallery, a university (founded in 1391), a famous library, and the houses of the poets Ariosto and Guarini. The last named was born here, as was also Savonarola.

Ferrol, Spain (Coruna), is a fortified seaport and the chief naval arsenal of Spain, with extensive dockyards, and also a naval school. There are manufactures of leather, naval stores, and textiles. Ferrol was twice attacked by the English; unsuccessfully in 1799, and successfully in 1805. It fell before the French in 1809.

Fez, cap. Morocco, is a holy city, the chief commercial center of the country, and one of the capitals of the sultan. Situated on a plateau, the city is surrounded by walls. Old Fez contains mosques, bazaars, and caravanserais, while New Fez is the official district, containing the palace, and the "Mellah", or Jews' quarter. The most beautiful of the one hundred and thirty mosques is that of Bu Ainan; to the largest, which is also the largest in Africa, the Kairuin, is attached the Kairuin University. The Sanctuary of Mulai Idris, the most holy place in Morocco, contains the tomb of the founder of the city. The chief industries are leather work, and the manufacture of colored tiles, carpets, and saddlery. Raw silk, paper, weapons, drugs, and spices are also produced. In the 13th century Fez was the capital of an independent kingdom; three centuries later it was conquered and annexed by Morocco.

Findlay, Ohio (c. h. Hancock Co.), is in the heart of the oil- and gas-fields of Ohio, and is widely known on account of its yield of natural gas. In the vicinity are rich beds of clay. It has manufactures of glass, pressed brick, furniture, wooden implements, and nails, as well as oil-refineries, extensive potteries, and rolling-mills. Findlay College, a coeducational institution, is located here.

Firozpur, India (Punjab), contains the chief arsenal in the Punjab.

Fitchburg, Massachusetts (c. h. Worcester Co.), has manufactures of firearms, cotton and woollen goods, pianos, paper, electrical apparatus, tools, etc. Quarries of granite are extensively worked. A state normal school is located here. The Walker Free Library, with its art collection, is notable.

Fiume, Hungary, is a free city, and the chief seaport and coaling-station of Hungary. Paper, torpedoes, tobacco, and chemicals are manufactured. There are also rice-mills and petroleum refineries. The cathedral, the naval academy, and the governor's residence are the principal architectural features.

Flensburg, German (Prussia), is a seaport, and has a large trade in agricultural and forest products. It has shipyards, breweries, distilleries, iron-foundries, and various other manufacturing establishments.

Flint, Michigan (c. h. Genesee Co.), has a large number of sawmills, carriage and wagon factories, woollen-mills, bicycle works, etc. A state institution for the deaf and dumb is located here.

Florence, Italy (cap. Florence), ranks as the intellectual capital of Italy, a position which it owes not only to the natural gifts of its inhabitants, but also to the memory of its greatest citizen, Dante, and to the fact of its being the seat of the national Accademia della Crusca, and the vigorous Institute for Advanced Studies, which virtually fulfils the offices of a university. Florence contains a great number of magnificent edifices and squares, its principal architectural feature being the Duomo, a cathedral, one of the largest churches in Italy, erected mainly between 1296 and 1436. Its interior is adorned with several fine pieces of sculpture by Michael Angelo, Ghiberti, Sansovino, Della Robbia, and others, and it possesses two fine bronze doors. The trio of bronze doors closing the little octagonal Baptistery, near the cathedral, are however still more famous. The 13th century campanile is Giotto's masterpiece. Among the other famous churches should be named Santa Croce (1294-1442), the Pantheon of Florence, adorned with frescoes by Giotto, the Gaddis, and others; Santa Maria Novella (1278-1350), with frescoes by Ghirlandajo, and Orcagna; Santa Maria del Carmine, which contains frescoes by Filippino Lippi, Masolino, and others. San Lorenzo, originally founded at the end of the 4th century, shelters the Laurentian Library, which contains many very valuable classic MSS. These, and many other edifices, testify to the prominence of Florence in the world of art, a position which is still further enhanced by the glorious canvases and sculptures of the Academy of Fine Arts; by the treasures of the Uffizi Palace (1560), which holds one of the most valuable collections of paintings and sculptures in the world, as well as the national library with its rare printed books; and by the even more valuable collection of the Pitti Gallery (1440). Among the remaining treasures of the city are the castle-like Palace of the Priors (1298-1314), for ages the seat of the city's government; the cloistered hall of Dei Lanzi (1637), with Benvenuto Cellini's Perseus, and other masterpieces of sculpture (it was here that Savonarola was burned in 1498); the archaeological museum, exhibiting notable Etruscan collections; the national museum of the middle ages and the Renaissance, sheltered in the Bargello (13th century), the ancient chief law court of the republic; and a number of interesting palaces, including the Riccardi (1430), Strozzi (1489-1533), Rucellai (1450), and Corsini (with a good picture-gallery). Florence is an archiepiscopal see. The straw-plaiting industry of the vicinity is declining, but the manufacture of majolica flourishes. Otherwise Florence is a place of little industrial importance.

Foggia, Italy (cap. Foggia), is a bishop's see, and has a Norman cathedral; a famous fair takes place in May.

Folkestone, England (Kent), is a seaport and a fashionable resort. The parish church is an ancient cruciform structure, and the Leas is a beautiful promenade along the cliffs. In the 18th century and the early part of the 19th century, it suffered much from encroachments by the sea.

Fond du Lac, Wisconsin (c. h. Fond du Lac Co.), has railroad shops, manufactures of automobiles, gas-engines, wagons, furniture, and chemicals, and wood-working industries. A state insane asylum is located here. Steamboats ascend from Green Bay to this place, via the Fox River and Lake Winnebago.

Forlì, Italy (cap. Forlì), is a bishop's see, and has several imposing palaces. Its manufactures include silk, hats, and shoes.

Forst, Germany (Prussia), has extensive manufactures of woollen cloth, and tanning industries.

Fort-de-France, West Indies (cap. Martinique), is a fortified seaport, and has a naval arsenal. The governor-general of the French West Indies resides here.

Fort Dodge, Iowa (c. h. Webster Co.), is an important grain market and has quarries of building-stone and gypsum. Coal is also mined in the vicinity. It has railroad repair-shops, and manufactures of woodenware, cereals, etc.

Fort Scott, Kansas (c. h. Bourbon Co.), is one of the most prosperous towns in the southeastern part of Kansas and an important market. The mining and shipping of bituminous coal is the leading industry. It has paper- and flour-mills, brick-works, railroad-shops, etc. The Kansas Normal College is located here.

Fort Smith, Arkansas (c. h. Sebastian Co.), is the second city of the state, and has cotton and cottonseed-oil industries, manufactures of bricks, furniture, etc., as well as a considerable jobbing trade.

Fort Wayne, Indiana (c. h. Allen Co.), is a railroad center in a rich agricultural region. It has large manufactures of car-wheels, engines, boilers, machinery, iron and steel bars, railway-cars, locomotives, electrical machinery, automobiles, furniture, etc. Concordia College, founded in 1850, is maintained here under the auspices of the German Lutheran church, and there are numerous other educational institutions. It takes its name from the fort built on a part of the present site of the city by General Anthony Wayne in 1794.

Fort William, Ontario, Canada, is a port and railroad center on Thunder Bay, Lake Superior, with a large transhipment trade. Its industries include large elevators, flour mills, iron foundries. Nearby are large blast furnaces, and silver and copper mines.

Fort Worth, Texas (c. h. Tarrant Co.), is the second largest city of northern Texas and the center of the cattle trade of the state. It has extensive packing-houses, flour-mills, foundry and machine works, etc. Its stockyards at the suburb, North Fort Worth, are the largest in the United States south of Kansas City. Fort Worth University, with upwards of 1,000 students is located here.

Framingham, Massachusetts (Middlesex Co.), has extensive woollen goods interests, and manufactures of boots and shoes, rubber and straw goods, etc. A state normal school is located here.

Frankfort-on-Main, Germany (Prussia), is an important financial and commercial center. Among its most noteworthy edifices and institutions are the house in which Goethe was born, with a Goethe museum attached; the Römer, a group of ancient buildings that serve as town hall, and contain not only the hall in which the German emperors were formerly elected, but that in which they dined in state with the electors, as described in Goethe's "Wahrheit und Dichtung"; the cathedral, founded in 850, but mostly rebuilt at subsequent periods; the Saalhof, which stands on the site of the palace of the Carolingian emperors; the Academy of Social Sciences, opened in 1901, with a university character; the house in which Schopenhauer lived; the ancestral house of the Rothschilds; the old Main bridge; and the Justitia fountain (1543). The Senckenberg Foundation (1763); the Thurn and Taxis palace (1731) now used by the post-office, but down to 1866 the meeting-place of the German Imperial Diet; two conservatories of music; the commercial high school; and, in the suburb of Sachsenhausen, on the opposite bank of the Main, the Städelsche Institute (which embraces a picture gallery, art collection, and an art school) all figure prominently.

Frankfort-on-Oder, Germany (Prussia), has manufactures of machinery, iron and steel goods, chemicals, tobacco, etc. The town hall (1607-10), the church of St. Mary (13th century), and the government buildings (1900) are the most notable features. Frankfort was famous for its three fairs, and as a center of the trade with Poland. From 1506 to 1811 it was the seat of a university (now at Breslau).

Fredericton, cap. New Brunswick, Canada, is the seat of the University of New Brunswick, a normal school, an infantry school, and an Anglican cathedral. Its industries include lumber mills, boat factories, etc.

Frederiksberg, Denmark, is a residential suburb of Copenhagen. It has a military college housed in the old palace.

Freeport, Illinois (c. h. Stephenson Co.), is an important trade center in a rich agricultural section, and has railroad-shops, and manufactures of hardware, wind-mills, pumps, organs, wagons, leather, etc.

Freetown, cap. Sierra Leone, Africa, is a fortified seaport and a coaling-station of the British fleet, the largest town of the colony, and a Protestant missionary station. Furah Bay College is close by. India-rubber, palm-oil, and hides are exported.

Freiberg, Germany (Kg. of Saxony), is the center of the Saxon mining industry, and has a famous mining academy, founded in 1765. The cathedral (1484) contains the burial vaults of the electors of Saxony from 1541 to 1694. Gold, silver, bismuth, zinc, nickel, cobalt, sulphuric acid, and arsenic are produced.

Freiburg, Germany (Baden), is the seat of a university founded in 1460, and of a Roman Catholic archbishop. The cathedral is one of the most remarkable in Germany. The town is backed by the castle hill, formerly surmounted by two castles, which were destroyed by the French in 1744. It was besieged more than once in the 17th century, and passed to Baden in 1806. It has a trade in timber and wine, and produces silks, cottons, buttons, machinery, etc.

Fremantle, Western Australia, Australia, is a seaport and coaling-station. It is the first and last port of call in Australia for all European mail steamers. It has manufactures of soap, tin, leather, and tobacco, and boat-building yards. It exports gold, sandalwood, copper and lead ores, gum, wool, pearl-shell, manna, cattle, etc.

Fresno, California (c. h. Fresno Co.), is an important fruit-growing center, and has the largest raisin trade of any city in the United States. Other important industries are the cultivation and exporting of oranges, apples, and grapes, and wine-making. It also has a large live-stock trade, and there are petroleum interests near by.

Fuchau, China (cap. Fokien), is a treaty port, with a large export trade in tea. Timber and bamboos are also largely exported. Cotton goods and porcelain are manufactured.

Fukui, Japan (cap. Fukui), is noted for its paper and tinned crabs. At the time of the renaissance Fukui became an important educational and ecclesiastical center.

Fukuoka, Japan (cap. Fukuoka), is chiefly famous for its silk and interwoven picture fabrics.

Funchal, cap. Madeira Islands, is a seaport, coaling-station, and health resort. Although it has only an open roadstead, it has a large export trade in wine, embroidery, and fruits. It is much visited in winter by convalescents from pulmonary and other diseases.

Fünfkirchen, Hungary, has a fine 12th century cathedral. The name is derived from five Turkish mosques, three of which are now in ruins and two in use as churches. Manufactures leather, cloth, and pottery.

Furth, Germany (Bavaria), has manufactures of mirrors, gold-leaf, bronzes, toys, pencils, fancy ornaments, picture-books and chromo-lithographs, gold and silver wares, chicory, machinery, etc.

Galatz, Roumania (Moldavia), is a river port, with a large export trade in wheat, corn, lumber, and cattle. It is the seat of the Danube Commission. Here in 1789 the Turks defeated the Russians, and in 1828 were in turn defeated by them. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop.

Galesburg, Illinois (c. h. Knox Co.), is the seat of Knox College, founded in 1837, where took place the famous Lincoln-Douglass debate in 1858. Lombard University (Universalist) was established here in 1852. The St. Joseph Academy and the Ryder Divinity School are also located here. The city has extensive railroad shops, stock-yards, brickmaking plants, boiler- and engine-works, farm machinery works, and carriage factories.

Galle, Ceylon, is a port and coaling-station. Exports tea, coffee, and plumbago.

Gallipoli, Turkey (Adrianople), is the see of a bishop of the Greek church. Here, in 1294, the Venetians were defeated by the Genoese, but in 1416 won a naval battle here over the Turks.

Galveston, Texas (c. h. Galveston Co.), is a port of entry and the most important shipping point on the Gulf of Mexico west of New Orleans. It has a large export and coastwise trade. Its foreign exports are principally cotton, cottonseed-oil, oil-cake and meal, cattle, wheat, and provisions. It has a large jobbing trade. Among its industries are bagging mills, rope mills, cement and pipe works, cotton-presses, rice-mills, and breweries. On September 8, 1900, Galveston was almost entirely destroyed by a tidal wave, causing the death, direct or indirect, of 6,000 to 8,000 people; the loss of property was also immense, but the city has rallied bravely from the blow, and is rapidly increasing in commercial importance. It claims to be the first port in the United States for cotton and grain shipping. Its sea-wall, made of crushed granite sand and cement, is 3½ miles long, 17 ft. high, 16 ft. wide at its base, and 5 ft. wide at the top, curving from the top to the base. A walk 13 ft. wide and a driveway 38 ft. wide are on the filled-in lands inside this wall. The school of medicine of the State University, a Roman Catholic university, and numerous other educational institutions are located here. Galveston was the first city in the U. S. to inaugurate the commission form of government.

Gardala, Algeria, has a caravan trade in oil, dates, ostrich feathers, and pottery.

Gardner, Massachusetts (Worcester Co.), is the trade center of an agricultural region, and has a large chair-manufacturing industry, in which almost every known kind of chair is made. It also has manufactures of machinery, toys, etc.

Gary, Indiana (Lake Co.), is an industrial suburb of Chicago, with a good harbor and the largest steel-mills in the world.

Gateshead, England (Durham), manufactures locomotives, anchors, chain-cables, etc. It also has large chemical and glass works. Excellent grindstone is quarried, and coal is mined. Among its notable ancient buildings are the Church of St. Mary, originally erected in the 12th century, but almost entirely rebuilt in 1854, and Trinity Chapel, which is supposed to occupy the site of an ancient monastery.

Gaya, India (Bengal), is annually visited by many pilgrims. Six miles to the south is Buddha Gaya, the site of a temple dating from B. C. 543, and of a bo-tree sprung from that under which Buddha attained Nirvana.

Gefle, Sweden (cap. Gefleborg), is a port on the Gulf of Bothnia, with a large export in bar iron, timber, tar, and cellulose. It has ship-building yards, and manufactures of machinery, cotton, tobacco, and sail-cloth.

Gelsenkirchen, Germany (Westphalia), has large coal-mines and iron-works.

Geneva, New York (Ontario Co.), is the seat of Hobart College (1822) and its co-ordinate institution, the William Smith Hall for Women. The Delancey Divinity School is located here, also a state agricultural experiment station. It has extensive manufactures of cereals, stoves, steam-boilers, canned goods, etc. There are large nurseries and green-houses in the vicinity.

Geneva, Switzerland (cap. Geneva), is an important educational center, and also an industrial city renowned for its clock, watch, music box, scientific instrument, and jewelry manufactures. Diamond-cutting and enameling are also carried on. It affords fine views of Lake Geneva, and of the Alps, and of Mt. Blanc in particular. Its cathedral is Byzantine in character, and is said to have been built in 1124. Other places of interest are Calvin's house; the 16th century city hall; the botanic gardens and university, opposite the interesting Corrairie, formerly one of the ramparts of the city; several museums, including the Musée Rath; and the Ile Jean Jacques Rousseau. The historical fame of the city rests chiefly on the severe rule of John Calvin (1541-64), the reformer. In 1798 the republican army marched in and annexed it to France; but in 1815 the city joined the Swiss confederacy.

Genoa, Italy (cap. Genoa), is a fortified port and coaling-station and an archiepiscopal city. It is the principal commercial port of Italy and one of its busiest industrial centers. The chief branches of activity are ship-building, iron-founding, iron-works, sugar-refining, tanning, cement-making, the manufacture of cotton, macaroni, ornaments for personal wear, preserved fruits, etc. Of the palaces the most famous are the former palace of the doges, now the meeting-place of the senate; and the Doria, presented in 1529 to the great Genoese citizen, Andrea Doria. Foremost amongst the churches stands the cathedral, a grand 12th century pile in the Italian Gothic style. The university, originally built in 1623, reorganized in 1812, has a library of 116,000 volumes. To Columbus, Genoa's most famous son, there is a fine monument (1862) by Lanzio. A great mediæval republic, the rival of Pisa and Venice, Genoa in 1768 ceded Corsica to France.

Georgetown, cap. British Guiana, is a port with good anchorage in the harbor. Timber, gold, sugar, and small quantities of balata (very like gutta-percha), cocoa, coffee, etc., are exported. There are some fine buildings, such as the Roman Catholic cathedral, the Anglican cathedral, and the government buildings. The town also contains good botanical gardens. It is an episcopal see.

Ghent, Belgium (cap. East Flanders), is a river port with a large transport trade. Exports sugar, chicory, flax, hops, and other agricultural products, and has large manufactures of cotton, linen, and lace. It is noteworthy as a center of floriculture. It is an episcopal see, and among the chief buildings are the splendid cathedral of St. Bavon, of the 13th and 14th centuries, containing the "Adoration of the Lamb," by the brothers Van Eyck; the belfry (1183-1339), 280 ft. high, or 375 with the iron spire of 1855; the new citadel (1822-30); the Hôtel de Ville (1480-1628); the Palais de Justice (1835-43); the university (1816); the Béguinage; and the Academy of Painting.

Gibraltar, Spain, is a British fortress, a naval port, and coaling-station. Being a free port, it is much frequented as a depot and port of call. It exports, in transit from Spain, wine, fruit, and cork. It is situated on a bold rocky promontory at the extreme southern point of Spain, the entire length at the base of the rock being 2½ miles, and its greatest breadth three-quarters of a mile. The place was celebrated in the times of the Phœnicians and Greeks, and was fortified by Tarik, the Berber leader, who invaded and conquered Spain in 711. It was finally captured by the Spaniards in 1462. After its capture by the British in the war of the Spanish Succession, it was repeatedly attacked by the Spaniards, and underwent a long siege in 1726. From 1779 to 1783 it withstood the greatest siege in its history, under the gallant Elliott (Lord Heathfield), against the Spaniards and French. Gibraltar is the see of an Anglican bishop.

Glessen, Germany (Hesse), is the seat of a university founded in 1607, and is the site of the chemical laboratory rendered famous by Liebig. It has manufactures of tobacco, cigars, beer, etc., and there are lignite mines.

Gifu, Japan (cap. Gifu), has manufactures of silk and paper.

Gijón, Spain (Oviedo), is one of the best Spanish ports on the Bay of Biscay, and in summer is a popular sea-bathing resort. Exports zinc, copper, manganese, quicksilver, and agricultural produce. Gaspar de Jovelanos was a native and founded the Instituto Asturiano, with its fine art collection. Other features of the town are the Campos Eliseos, a bull-ring, a fine 15th century church, and two palaces. It was the capital of the Asturian princes in the 8th century.

Gillingham, England (Kent), has an important torpedo factory, also brick and cement works, and is the center of an extensive fruit district.

Girgenti, Italy (cap. Girgenti), is the successor of the ancient Agragas, or Agriguntum, which was founded in 582 B. C., flourished between 560 and 406 B. C., and again during the first and second Punic wars. From 828 to 1086 it was in the hands of the Saracens. Fine examples of Greek temples remain, while the modern buildings include a cathedral, library and museum.

Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, Canada, is a coal mining center on Glace Bay. It also has fishing industries, machine works, etc.

Glabach, Germany (Prussia), is the chief center of the Rhenish cotton industry. It has also dye-works and calico-printing establishments, iron-foundries, machinery factories, silk and woollen mills, stationery factories, breweries, etc. It derives its name from an abbey of Benedictine monks, founded here in 972, and dissolved in 1802. The minster has a Gothic choir of the 12th century and an 8th century crypt.

Glasgow, Scotland (Lanark), is the industrial and commercial metropolis of Scotland, and, next to London, is the most populous city of Great Britain. It is a port and coaling-station on the Clyde, and the water area of its harbor and tidal docks is 206 acres. The most important edifice is the cathedral, an early English structure, containing a small part of the previous cathedral consecrated in 1197; the present building was commenced in 1238 and is now in almost the same state as when at the Reformation, though stripped of its ornaments, it was saved by the citizens from the fury of the mob. Other notable structures are the municipal buildings, in the style of the Italian Renaissance, the Royal Infirmary, the Western and Victoria infirmaries, the city art galleries (Spanish Renaissance), a people's palace, and the University of Glasgow, founded in 1451. The university is attended by over 2,000 students annually, and includes the Hunterian Museum, with its famous anatomical collection. The Glasgow and West of Scotland Technical College, founded in 1886, has a large attendance. Among other noteworthy institutions are St. Mungo's College and Anderson's College, the Mitchell Library, containing about 150,000 volumes, the Corporation Public Libraries, and the Glasgow Art Gallery and Museum. Glasgow commenced very early to manufacture woollens, and acquired a fame for its plaids. In the 18th century were added muslin-weaving, distilling, ink-making, of which the secret was stolen from Holland, and the manufacture of tobacco, shalloons, cotton, leather, and furniture. The first cotton-mill was erected in 1792; and the greater part of the textile factories in the city are concerned with this fiber. There are also numerous calico-printing and bleaching works. Linen comes next in importance. The iron trade, introduced in 1732, is now the dominant one in Glasgow. The city contains blast-furnaces, iron- and steel-works and forges, and engineers' and boiler-makers' shops. The manufactures of chemicals, leather, clothing, whiskey, furniture, and timber are of the first importance. Ship-building is a leading industry at Clyde ports, the annual output aggregating half a million tons. Glasgow is the seat of an Episcopalian bishop and of a Roman Catholic archbishopric. It was in this city that Watt conceived the idea of the steam-engine; on the Forth and Clyde Canal, Symington ran the first steamboat in 1801; and ten years later Henry Bell built the steamship "Comet" which plied between Glasgow and Helensburgh.

Glauchau, Germany (Kg. Saxony), is one of the busiest manufacturing centers of the kingdom, its specialties being woollen dress stuffs, though it has also dye-works, calico-printing works, iron-foundries, breweries, flour- and sawmills.

Gleiwitz, Germany (Prussia), is the seat of iron industries; produces also bricks and glass.

Glens Falls, New York (Warren Co.), is a manufacturing and trade center on the Hudson River, where there is a succession of falls, with a descent of about 60 ft. The water-power is utilized by a number of manufactories; making flour, lumber, lime, cement, paper, etc. There are quarries of stone, limestone, and black marble. The island below the falls is the scene of some well-known incidents in Cooper's "Last of the Mohicans."

Gloucester, England (Gloucester), is a port on the Severn River, connected with the Bristol Channel by a canal. It contains a famous cathedral, built around a Norman core, with a stately tower, vast eastern window, and the canopied tomb of the murdered Edward II. Other public buildings are St. Mary le Crypt, the bishop's palace, shire hall and guildhall; the first prison built on Howard's plan; the public library and technical schools.

Gloucester, Massachusetts (Essex Co.), is a port of entry with an extensive fishing trade. It is one of the most important fishing ports and fish-markets in the world; cod, haddock, halibut, herring, and mackerel are the principal catches. It also has large manufactories of machinery, oil, fish-glue, shoes, twine, etc. It is a great resort of artists, attracted partly by the picturesqueness of the town itself and partly by the fine scenery of Cape Ann.

Gloversville, New York (Fulton Co.), is the greatest glove-manufacturing center in the United States and one of the largest in the world. It also has manufactories of gauntlets, mittens, leather goods, etc.

Goldfield, Nevada (Esmeralda Co.), is the center of a comparatively new and very productive gold-mining section. It has a large distributing trade, especially in lumber and mining machinery.

Gomel, Russia (Mohilef), has sugar-refineries and some ship-building.

Gonaives, Haiti, is a port on the Gulf of Gonaives, with exports of cotton, coffee, and mahogany.

Gorakhpur, India (United Provinces), contains a fine 17th century mosque, and carries on a river trade in grain and timber.

Görlitz, Germany (Prussia), manufactures cloth, mixed woollen goods, machinery, glass, bricks, and other commodities. The town possesses some fine Gothic churches (especially St. Peter and St. Paul, built in 1423-97, one of the noblest churches in Eastern Germany), and a 14th century town hall. Boehme, the mystic, lived and died in Görlitz.

Gotha, Germany (Saxe-Coburg-Gotha), is one of the busiest industrial towns in Thuringia, and produces sausages, toys, shoes, rubber tubes, sugar, etc. Here, too, is the geographical institute of Justus Perthes. The famous Almanach de Gotha, and Petermann's Mitteilungen are published in the town. The dominant feature is the ducal castle of Friedenstein (1643), crowning a hill south of the old town. Here also are the former ducal palace and the castle of Friedrichsthal.

Gottenborg, Sweden (cap. Gottenborg och Bobus), is a port and the second largest city of Sweden, remarkable for its beautiful parks and pleasure-grounds. It is the seat of a bishop and has a cathedral built in 1815; a museum, founded in 1833, is housed in the old East India Company's buildings. There is also a famous free technical school. The city has ship-building and machinery factories, sugar-refineries, breweries, tanneries, weaving and spinning factories, etc. Owing to its excellent harbor, which is almost always free from ice, it has a large trade. The principal exports are iron, timber, wood-pulp, corn, butter, and fish. Gottenborg was founded by Gustavus Adolphus in 1619.

Göttingen, Germany (Prussia), is the seat of a famous university founded in 1737. Göttingen manufactures sausages and other eatables, mathematical and scientific instruments, cloth, chemicals, sugar, and beer. In 1626 the town was taken by Tilly. Göttingen is famous for its Academy of Sciences, founded by Haller in 1751.

Govan, Scotland (Lanark), has ship-building yards which are among the largest on the Clyde. It has also engineering-, railway locomotive-, and iron-works.

Granada, Nicaragua (cap. Granada), is the seat of a considerable trade in dyewoods, indigo, hides, cacao, and has manufactories of gold wire chains.

Granada, Spain (cap. Granada), is an ancient Moorish city, the seat of the last Moslem kings, and was conquered by Ferdinand and Isabella in 1492. It possesses the famous palace of the Alhambra, and other picturesque structures of Moorish character. It is the seat of an archbishop, and has a university and a richly decorated Renaissance cathedral (1529), containing the tombs of Ferdinand and Isabella, and of Philip I., and his consort Juana. In the church of San Geronimo is the cenotaph of Gonsalvo de Cordova. Liqueurs, textiles, paper, and soap are manufactured.

Grand Forks, North Dakota (c. h. Grand Forks Co.), is an important railroad center and the second city of the state. It has large lumber-mills, flour-mills, steam-boiler works, and a large trade in live-stock, grain, and agricultural produce. It is the seat of the State University of North Dakota and other educational institutions.

Grand Junction, Colorado (c. h. Mesa Co.), is the largest city of western Colorado, and an important railroad and trade center in the famous fruit producing valley of the Grand River. It has brass- and iron-foundries, planing-mills, etc.

Grand Rapids, Michigan (c. h. Kent Co.), is a port of entry, the second city of the state, and the third city in the United States in the manufacture of furniture. The Grand River has here a fall of 18 feet, supplying excellent water-power. In addition to furniture, there are extensive manufactures of other lumber products, flour, plaster, carriages, wagons, bicycles, brass goods, automobiles, and agricultural implements. The gypsum quarries here have the largest output in the world. There are numerous educational institutions and a state soldiers' home.

Gratz, Austria (cap. Styria), is an episcopal see and the favorite place of residence for retired Austrian officials. It is the seat of a university founded in 1586, which has some 1,500 students, and of a polytechnic school. Its manufactures are machinery, steel and iron wares, soap, chemicals, pottery, confectionery, beer, etc. In addition there are large railway-car works. The central feature is the Castle Hill, which was fortified until 1809. There is also a 15th century cathedral.

Graudenz, Germany (Prussia), manufactures machinery, cigars, tapestry, flour, etc. About one mile north is the fortress, constructed by Frederick the Great in 1772-6, famous for its defence by the Prussians against the French in 1807, but dismantled in 1874.

Great Falls, Montana (c. h. Cascade Co.), is the second city of the state, near an important mining region, and has large smelting works. Gold, silver, copper, lead, bituminous coal, iron, and sandstone are found in the vicinity. It has manufactories of flour, furniture, and mining and agricultural implements. It derives its name and importance from the falls formed here by the Missouri, with a total descent of 500 ft.

Great Grimsby, England (Lincoln), is a seaport and coaling-station and the largest fishing-port of England. Its industries comprise ship-building, tanning, brewing, and rope-making, and it exports cottons, woollens, leather, fish, etc.

Greeley, Colorado (c. h. Weld Co.), is a trade center in a rich agricultural region largely under irrigation and is famous for its potatoes and alfalfa. It has a large trade in produce and agricultural implements, and manufactories of machinery, beet sugar, etc.

Heidelberg, Germany (Baden), is noted for its picturesque situation, its university, and its castle. The university, founded in 1386, is the oldest in the present German empire. From 1556 it came under the control of the leaders of the Reformation, and was reorganized by the elector Charles Frederick of Baden in 1803. The library was plundered and sent to Rome in 1623, and partially returned in 1816; it now consists of over 320,000 volumes. The castle, whose ruins are the most imposing in Germany, is a famous monument founded at the end of the 13th century by the count palatine Rudolf I., and enlarged and strengthened by succeeding electors. During the 16th century it received the architectural development which, despite disaster, makes it still one of the richest productions of the German Renaissance. In 1689 and 1693 it was ruined by the generals of Louis XIV., but was subsequently restored, only to be destroyed by fire from a lightning stroke in 1764. Heidelberg was the capital of the Palatinate from the 13th century to 1720. It was sacked by Tilly in 1622, by the French in 1689, and was nearly destroyed by the latter in 1693. It passed to Baden in 1803.

Heilbronn, Germany (Wurttemberg), has manufactures of silversmiths' ware, iron and steel goods, paper, sugar, salt, chicory, and chemicals. Wine and fruit are produced, and sandstone is quarried in the neighborhood.

Heider, Netherlands (North Holland), is a seaport strongly fortified both by sea and land. It contains several naval establishments, including an arsenal and a naval cadet school. Just outside the harbor the English fleet was defeated by De Ruyter and Tromp in 1673.

Helena, cap. Montana (c. h. Lewis and Clark Co.), is situated in the heart of one of the richest mining districts in the country and claims to be one of the wealthiest cities of its size in the world. It is said that gold amounting to $40,000,000 has been taken from the Last Chance Gulch, which runs through the city, and all around the city are valuable gold and silver bearing veins of quartz, besides deposits of copper, iron and galena. The State Capitol, costing $400,000, and the Montana Wesleyan University (M. E.) are among the prominent buildings. Auerbach's Keller, immortalized in Goethe's Faust, consisting of wine vaults dating from 1530, still serves as a restaurant. The churches of St. Nicholas (1017) and St. Thomas (1222) are the oldest. The famous university, founded in 1409, is attended by 3,600 students. Leipzig suffered severely during the Thirty Years', Seven Years', and the Napoleonic wars. The most celebrated of the battles fought here was that between the French, under Napoleon, and the allied armies of Austrians, Russians, Prussians, and Swedes (Oct. 16-19, 1813), the result of which effectually shattered Napoleon's power.

Leith, Scotland (Edinburgh), is a port and coaling-station on the Firth of Forth, 2 miles north of Edinburgh.

Le Mans, France (cap. Sarthe), manufactures iron products, machinery, clocks and watches, linen goods, and chemicals, especially sulphuric acid. The cathedral contains the tomb of Berengaria, queen of Richard Coeur de Lion. The town was the birthplace of Henry II. of England.

Lemberg, Austria (cap. Galicia), is the seat of an archbishop of the Roman Catholic, the Greek Catholic, and the Armenian churches. The chief buildings are the cathedrals; provincial house of assembly; university, founded in 1784; Ossolinski National Institute; and a polytechnic (1873-7). Machinery, beer, leather, matches, and candles are manufactured.

Lens, France (Pas-de-Calais), is situated in an important coal-field, and has iron and steel works, also sugar and soap factories.

Leominster, Massachusetts (Worcester Co.), is a busy industrial center, with extensive manufactures of combs, pianos, paper, cement, jewelry, toys, buttons, cabinet work, etc. It was settled in 1725.

Leon, Mexico (Guanajuato), has copper and silver mines in the neighborhood, and manufactures leather.

Leon, Nicaragua, is the largest town of Nicaragua and the seat of a university. It was at one time the capital of Nicaragua. Its public edifices are considered the finest in Central America, and it has manufactures of dressed leather and cutlery.

Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada, is an important railroad and coal-mining center with large collieries nearby. Live stock, wool, flax and sugar beets are produced in the neighborhood.

Lewiston, Maine (Androscoggin Co.), is a trade and manufacturing center, with extensive water-power furnished by the Androscoggin River, which here has a fall of about 50 ft., and the power of which is utilized by means of a distributing dam and canal. The chief industries are cotton and woollen goods, foundry products, engines, boilers, lumber, boots and shoes, etc. It also has dye-works and bleacheries. It is the seat of Bates College, which includes the Cobb Divinity School.

Lexington, Kentucky (c. h. Fayette Co.), is a trade center in the famous "blue-grass" region and is noted for the stock-farms in its vicinity. The chief manufactures are Bourbon whiskey, harnesses, saddlery, flour, canned goods, lumber, and carriages. It is the seat of Kentucky University, a state agricultural and mechanical college, a state reform school, and numerous other educational institutions. The state asylum for the insane is located here. Lexington was settled in 1775, and in 1792, when Kentucky became independent of Virginia, was made the capital of Kentucky.

Leyton, England (Essex), is a suburb of London and has Roman antiquities.

Libau, Russia (Courland), is a port with an artificial harbor and an important railway terminus. Its chief exports are grain, flax, hemp, linseed, petroleum, fish, meat, wool, leather, and skins. There are manufactures of rope, matches, agricultural implements, furniture, amber, and soap. It has naval dockyards, and a large meat-freezing establishment.

Lichtenberg, Germany (Prussia), is a suburb of Berlin.

Lieben, Austria (Bohemia), is a suburb of Prague and has manufactures of chemicals, machinery, sugar, and beer.

Liège, Belgium (cap. Liège), is an important industrial town, with manufactures of machinery, tools, bicycles, railway material, firearms, cannon, linen, woollens, leather, zinc goods, sugar, beer, and spirits. The law courts built in 1508-40, were long the residence of the prince-bishops. The city is famous for its university, attended by over 1,000 students. Liège fell before Marlborough in 1702. It is defended by a ring of modern forts. It is the seat of a bishop and has several ancient churches, some of them dating from the 10th century.

Liegnitz, Germany (Prussia), has manufactures of cloth, machinery, pianos, shoes, tobacco, oil, woollens, and pottery. The town, which dates from the 11th century, was the residence of the dukes of Lower Silesia after 1163. Near the town, Silesians, Poles, and Teutonic Knights fought a fierce engagement with the Mongols in 1241.

Lima, Ohio (c. h. Allen Co.), is an important trade center in the natural gas and petroleum belt of western Ohio, the oil fields of which extend into six counties. It has manufactures of locomotives and railway cars, machine-shops, petroleum refineries, etc. It is the seat of Lima College.

Lima, cap. Peru, is the commercial center of the country. Its manufactures include pottery, iron, copper, and furniture. More than half of the inhabitants are Indians, half-breeds, negroes, and Chinese. The cathedral is the most imposing building. Overthrown by the earthquake of 1746, which destroyed the greater part of the city, it has only recently been completely restored. The University of San Marcos was founded in 1551 and claims to be the oldest in America. There are also numerous handsome public buildings and the city preserves the air of the old vice-regal days better than any other city of South America. It has many pleasant suburbs and seaside resorts. Lima, a corruption of Rimac, was founded in 1535 by Pizarro.

Limerick, Ireland (cap. Limerick), has, among its principal buildings, the cathedral of St. Mary, a Gothic edifice founded in the 12th century; St. Mainchin's; and the castle built by King John, a fine example of Norman architecture. The "treaty stone" is preserved on a pedestal beside Thomond Bridge. Bacon-curing, flour-milling, and the manufacture of army and police clothing are the principal industries.

Limoges, France (cap. Haute-Vienne), was in the middle-ages celebrated for its enamel work and is now the principal seat of the porcelain manufacture, employing over 6,000 hands. Other manufactures are cloths and druggets, nails, knives, gloves, and paper. The cathedral of St. Etienne dates from 1273. There are also remains of a Roman fountain and amphitheatre.

Limon, Costa Rica, is the chief port of the country on the Caribbean Sea and the eastern terminus of the Costa Rica Railway. It exports coffee, tropical fruits, rubber, and dyewood.

Linares, Spain (Jaén), is the center of a great silver-lead mining district, which produces over 80,000 tons of silver and copper ore annually. Manufactures sheet lead, pipes, dynamite, and rope.

Lincoln, England (cap. Lincoln), has extensive manufactures of agricultural implements and holds annually important horse and cattle fairs. Lincoln Cathedral is a noble edifice, doubly cruciform, with central tower (271 ft.) and two western towers. The castle was erected by William the Conqueror; its principal remains are the gateway and two towers. Other buildings of special interest are the Stone Bow, a 15th century town gate; the High Bridge, with houses thereon; the site of John of Gaunt's Palace; St. Mary's Conduit (16th century); and the Jews' House (12th century). Lincoln was an important Roman station and colony.

Lincoln, cap. Nebraska (c. h. Lancaster Co.), is an important railroad and trade center. It is the seat of the State University and Agricultural College, with 2,500 students; of the Wesleyan University, with 650 students, situated in University Place, a suburb of Lincoln; of Union College (Seventh Day Adventists); and of Cotner University. It contains a penitentiary and an insane asylum. It has extensive manufactures of horse-collars, harness, oils and paints, also railway-car and repair shops, and carries on a large trade in dairy and farm products.

Linden, Germany (Hanover), has manufactures of machinery, velvets, woollen goods, carpets, chemicals, sugar, rubber, and artificial manures.

Linz, Austria (cap. Upper Austria), is a river port, and has boat building yards, cotton works, breweries, tobacco works, and carpet mills. The principal buildings are the Museum Francisco Carolinum, the house of the provincial diet, and a 17th century cathedral. It is the seat of a bishop.

Lipa, Philippine Islands (Batangas), is the trade center of a region producing sugar, cacao, tobacco, and indigo.

Lisbon, cap. Portugal (cap. Estremadura), is a port and coaling station, with a large trade, especially with Great Britain and Brazil. The celebrated aqueduct of the Aguas Livres, finished in 1749, crosses the valley of Alcantara on a bridge of 35 pointed arches, the largest 204 ft. high, with a span of 95 ft. The cathedral was originally a fine Romanesque building, but has been disfigured by earthquakes and modernization. The royal palace of Ajuda is a large building in a commanding situation above the Tagus, with a library considered the finest in Portugal. Lisbon was an ancient Roman city; was captured by the Saracens about 716; was taken from them by Alfonso I, in 1147; was made the capital in 1422; was in its most flourishing state about 1500; was occupied by the Spaniards 1580-1640; was nearly destroyed by an earthquake Nov. 1, 1755 (with a loss of about 40,000 lives); and was held by the French 1807-08.

Lisle, France (cap. Nord), is a first-class fortress, and is one of the chief industrial towns of France, specially noted for its textile factories, in which linen, cottons, velvets, ribbons, and woollen goods are produced. There are also sugar, soap, and tobacco factories, dye-works, chemical works, and distilleries, while large bleach-fields are found in the outskirts. Among its buildings may be noted the citadel (designed by Vauban) in the northwest, the church of Notre Dame de la Treille, the town hall, the bourse, and the museum, which contains exceptionally rich art collections. Lisle was taken by the Duke of Marlborough (1708). In 1792 it successfully withstood a terrible bombardment by the Austrians.

Little Falls, New York (Herkimer Co.), has extensive manufactures of knit goods, paper, carriages, bicycles, leather, knitting machinery, foundry and creamery products, etc. The Mohawk River furnishes abundant water-power, since it falls here about 44 ft. in less than a mile. It was settled about 1770, and in 1782 the settlement was destroyed by Indians and Tories. No successful efforts were made to rebuild it until 1790, when a colony of Germans took possession.

Little Rock, cap. Arkansas (c. h. Pulaski Co.), is the largest city of the state, and has extensive manufactures of cotton, cottonseed-oil, foundry and machine-shop products, railway shops, etc. In addition to the State Capitol, it has the Arkansas Military Academy, the Philander Smith School for colored youths, a state school for the blind, a lunatic asylum, and the state penitentiary. The University of Arkansas has branch schools of law and medicine located here.

Liverpool, England (Lancashire), is a port and coaling station on the Mersey, 3 miles from the Irish Sea. It is the second city of England, one of the most important ports of the world, the terminus of many transatlantic steamship lines, and has extensive ship-building, manufactures of rope, sugar, iron, chemicals, etc. It has a very extensive export trade in cotton, iron and steel manufactures, woollens, and machinery, and is the chief raw cotton importing port of Great Britain. Its harbor has 36 miles of quays, and a total dock area of 1,614 acres. It is the seat of an Anglican and of a Roman Catholic bishop. At the head of the numerous educational institutions stands the University, founded in 1903, which contains besides all the usual departments of a complete university, a school of tropical medicine. Among the city's architectural features the first place is given to St. George's Hall. This modern basilica is of the Corinthian order of architecture, and possesses a dignity, refinement, and style which makes it one of the finest buildings of the classical Renaissance. The town hall is also in the classic style, as are most of the public buildings of the city. The municipal offices form imposing buildings in the Palladian style. Among other important municipal buildings are the library and museum, erected by Sir William Brown; the Picton Reading Room, an extension of the library, erected by the city; the Walker Art Gallery, erected by Sir Andrew B. Walker; the technical schools; and the Exchange Buildings, in the style of the Flemish Renaissance. Liverpool received a charter from King John in 1207; was incorporated in 1229; and was taken by Prince Rupert in 1644. The commencement of its prosperity dates from the last half of the 17th century. It was largely engaged in the African slave-trade and in smuggling. It developed greatly in the 18th and still more in the 19th century. Liverpool was the birthplace of W. E. Gladstone, Mrs. Hemans, and Mrs. Oliphant.

Lockport, New York (c. h. Niagara Co.), is an important trade and manufacturing center, with extensive water-power obtained from the Erie Canal, which has here 10 large locks making a descent of 66 ft. There are large limestone and sandstone quarries in the vicinity.

Lodz, Russia (Poland), is one of the largest industrial towns in Russia, and its population has grown faster than any other town in the empire. The chief industry is cotton; after this come silk, wool, linen, cloth, flour, beer, spirits, and iron. There are also extensive dye-works, flour mills, and agricultural implement manufactures. It has several good technical schools. The population is mainly composed of Poles, Germans, and Jews, each amounting to nearly a third of the whole.

Logansport, Indiana (c. h. Cass Co.), is an important trade center in a fertile agricultural region. It has extensive manufactures of automobiles, car-trucks, motors, baskets, brooms, flour, lumber products, wagons, carriages, lime, and cement. The Northern Indiana Hospital for the Insane is located here.

London, cap. England, is the largest city in the world, the seat of government of the British Empire, a port and coaling station on the Thames about 50 miles from the North Sea. Foremost among its many structures and institutions are St. Paul's Cathedral, designed by Sir Christopher Wren, erected in 1675-1710, and measuring 500 ft. in length and 364 ft. in height to the top of the cross on its vast dome; Westminster Abbey, the Walhalla of the English nation, dating in its present form (in part) from the later half of the 13th century, and measuring 513 ft. in length, one of the most famous churches of the world; Buckingham Palace, the residence of the King of England; St. James's Palace, the residence of the Prince of Wales; the Houses of Parliament, a vast Gothic pile dating from 1840, which extends along the left bank of the Thames for a distance of 940 ft., and whose square Victoria Tower is 340 ft. high; the Mansion House, the official residence of the Lord Mayor; the Guildhall, or Council Hall of the City; the New Law Courts, a magnificent Gothic edifice with a frontage of 500 ft., opened in 1882; Lambeth Palace, the seat of the Archbishop of Canterbury; the British Museum, with a vast collection of Egyptian, Assyrian, Greek, and Roman antiquities, the famous Elgin Marbles, British prehistoric remains, an unrivalled collection of original drawings, engravings, and etchings, and a library of upward of 2,000,000 volumes; the Natural History Museum, containing the natural history collections properly belonging to the British Museum, and occupying a building that is the largest in the world devoted to collections of its class; the South Kensington Museum (or Victoria and Albert Museum), containing magnificent collections of ornamental or applied art, oriental and other collections, the National Art Library, etc.; the National Gallery, one of the greatest galleries of paintings in the world; the Bank of England, founded in 1694 and occupying a building which covers about 4 acres,—a huge but dreary edifice, in whose vaults are usually housed twenty million pounds sterling in gold and silver; and the Tower, dating from the time of William the Conqueror, historically the most interesting structure of all England,—at first a royal palace and stronghold, and afterwards a gloomy dungeon, or state prison, of London, and now containing the crown jewels and a large collection of old armor. The most famous monument of the city is the Albert Memorial, erected to the memory of Albert, Prince Consort, and adorned with reliefs in marble of 178 figures. Among its institutions of learning may be mentioned the University of London, founded as an examining body in 1836, and reorganized in 1900-01 into a body which, in addition to its examining functions, has control of the higher education in the metropolis, the principal institutions, including most of the medical schools, being subject to it; University College, opened in 1828; King's College, opened in 1831; Royal College of Science, founded as the Royal School of Mines in association with the Geological Survey of Great Britain; Central Technical College; Gresham College; St. Bartholomew's Hospital (founded in 1123) and College; London Hospital Medical College; Guy's Hospital Medical School; Royal College of Surgeons (with the famous Hunterian Museum); the schools of art of the Royal Academy and South Kensington Museum; the Inns of Court; the Imperial Institute of the United Kingdom, the Colonies and India, with a huge building erected in 1887-93 at South Kensington; British Academy (founded in 1901); British Association for the Advancement of Science; Institute of Architects; Institute of Civil and Mechanical Engineers; Royal Geographical Society; Royal Asiatic Society; the Geological, Zoological, Botanical, Linnean, Astronomical, Archaeological, Chemical, and Physical societies; Society of British Artists; Society of Painters in Water Colors; and Society of Arts. Other institutions are denominational colleges for theology, sometimes combined with general education; the Royal Naval College at Greenwich; the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich; the Royal College of Science; Royal Academy of Music; Royal College of Music; Trinity College, chiefly for music; several colleges for women, etc. Among the grammar and secondary schools are: St. Paul's School, founded in 1509, which provides a free education for 153 boys, with scholarships to Oxford and Cambridge; the Merchant Tailors' or Charterhouse School; Westminster School, founded by Queen Elizabeth in 1560; University College School; King's College School; City of London School; Mercer's School; and schools of the several city companies. Christ's Hospital School, founded by Edward VI, and commonly known as the Blue Coat School, from the uniform of its scholars, has been removed to Sussex. In Regent's Park there is a most famous zoological garden, and Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens, are of international fame. The Kew Botanic Gardens, with immense greenhouses, museums and the like, and Hampton Court are among the many park spaces on the Thames. The manufacturing industries of London are on a vast scale. It contains the largest breweries, distilleries, and sugar-refineries in the kingdom; was long the principal seat of silk-weaving; has extensive manufactures in metal, including machinery of all kinds, plate, jewelry, watches, and brass work, and an enormous production of books and prints. Millinery and the making of clothes, also of boots and shoes, are extensive branches of industry. Besides these, there are cabinet-making, coopering, coach-building, rope-making, mast-making, and much ship-building. London appears to have been resettled by the Romans about 43 A. D., and Londinium (called also Augusta) was the capital of Britannia in the last part of the Roman period. After the departure of the Romans (about 412) and in the early Saxon period, its history is obscure, though there were bishops of London from the 7th century. It was plundered by the Danes and rebuilt by Alfred and Athelstane. It received a charter from William I. and many privileges from Henry I. By the 14th century its commerce had greatly developed. The insurrection of Wat Tyler occurred in 1381. London sided with the Yorkists in the Wars of the Roses, and with the Parliamentarians in the Civil War. It was scourged by the plague in 1665, and was almost entirely destroyed by the great fire of 1666. A financial panic occurred in 1720, and the "No Popery" riots in 1780. London is the seat of an Anglican bishop and of a Roman Catholic archbishop.

London, Ontario, Canada, is the center of a rich agricultural district and has iron-foundries, chemical works, and extensive petroleum refineries. The sulphur springs in the neighborhood are a favorite resort. It is the seat of the Western University, of Huron and Hellmuth colleges, and of other collegiate institutions.

Londonderry, Ireland (cap. Londonderry), is the seat of a bishop, and has a cathedral, built in the 17th century. Shirt-making is the principal industry, and there are distilleries, foundries, tanneries, and ship-building yards. In 1688-9 took place the memorable siege by the forces of James II.

Long Beach, California (Los Angeles Co.), is a residential suburb of Los Angeles and a resort on San Pedro Bay.

Long Branch, New Jersey (Monmouth Co.), is one of the older summer resorts of the Atlantic Coast visited by many thousands of people during the hot summer months. The avenue along the bluff is a favorite walk, and on the beach there are excellent bathing facilities. It was settled about 1607.

Longton, England (Stafford), manufactures china and earthenware, and there are valuable coal and iron mines in the vicinity.

Lorain, Ohio (Lorain Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural and natural gas region, and a shipping port for central Ohio coal, iron ore, and lumber. Its chief industries are ship-building, coal-shipping, steel manufacturing, and fishing.

Lorca, Spain (Murcia), was the scene of much strife between Moors and Christians in the 12th and 13th centuries. Wine is produced, and there are some lead mines in the neighborhood.

Lorient, France (Morbihan), is a seaport and fortified naval arsenal. The dockyard is used for the construction and equipment of men-of-war, and is one of the finest in France. The exports are wheat, wines, sardines, etc. The town was founded in 1670 by the French East India Company, and on the dissolution of the company in 1770 it became a naval station.

Los Angeles, California (c. h. Los Angeles Co.), is the largest city of Southern California, the second city of the state, and one of the greatest winter resorts in the world. Its phenomenal growth is largely due to the influx of tourists, health-seekers, and others from the eastern states. It has a semi-tropical climate, remarkable for its equability and dryness, with little frost, no snow, and moderate winter rains. It is an important railroad and banking center, and has a large wholesale and distributing trade with southern California, Arizona, New Mexico, and old Mexico. The manufacturing industries have been greatly stimulated by the supply of petroleum fuel, also by the bringing of electricity from the mountain streams, a distance of over 100 miles. It has a large transhipment trade in oranges and other citrus fruits. It was founded by the Spaniards in 1781 and passed into American possession in 1846. It was, however, of no great importance till after 1880, when it underwent an almost unprecedented rapid increase in wealth and population. Its population rose from 11,183 in 1880 to 50,395 in 1890, to 102,479 in 1900, and to 319,198 in 1910.

Louisville, Kentucky (c. h. Jefferson Co.), is the largest city of the state, and one of the most important manufacturing and jobbing centers of the south. It has extensive manufactures of whiskey, cement, wagons, agricultural implements, leather, etc. It has large pork-packing establishments, and is the largest market in the world for Bourbon whiskey and leaf tobacco. It is also an important educational center, being the seat of the University of Louisville (800 students) with its law and medical departments, a manual training school, a normal school, several medical colleges, theological seminaries, and other educational institutions. It is the seat of the State Blind Asylum, containing the American Printing House for the Blind. Louisville was founded in 1778 and named in honor of Louis XVI. of France. In March, 1890, this city was visited by a terrific tornado, which destroyed property valued at over $3,000,000 and killed 76 persons.

Louvain, Belgium (Brabant), is famous for its university, founded in 1426, now attended by some 1,600 students. Its town hall (one of the finest on the Continent) and the church of St. Gertrude, both of the 15th century, are the chief features of the town. It manufactures beer, lace, starch, and tobacco.

Lowell, Massachusetts (c. h. Middlesex Co.), is noted for its great number of manufactures and its annual output of manufactured articles. Its power is obtained from the falls of the Merrimack, which here has a descent of 32 ft., and from the Concord River, but considerable steam-power is also used. It has a canal system, completed in 1825, through which water-power is furnished to manufactures in Lowell and then returned to the Merrimack to turn the wheels of mills in cities further east. Its woollen and cotton factories, hosiery and knitting mills, carpet and felt factories, bleacheries, dye-works, machine-shops, patent medicine works, and furniture factories are among the leading industries. It has an old ladies' home.

Lubeck, Germany (Lübeck), is a free city, one of the three remaining Hansa towns, a port on the Trave River, 10 miles from its mouth. Of its numerous churches the Marienkirche, founded in 1170, contains valuable works of art, and its dome, enlarged during the 13th century, possesses an altar painting by Hans Memling. The town hall (1250) is built of black glazed bricks in the style of the Renaissance period. The principal shipping trade is with Denmark, Sweden, Russia, and Finland, chiefly in machinery, chemicals, preserved food, linen goods, and cigars. Lubeck was made a free imperial city in 1226, and became the leader of the Hanseatic league in 1241. In 1866 it joined the North German Confederation, and in 1870 became, with its adjacent territory, one of the states of the new empire.

Lublin, Russia (Poland), has considerable trade, especially in corn, wine, and linen cloth. Distilleries, breweries, tanneries, brick works, soap, tobacco, candle manufactures, and flour-mills are the main industries. It has a 13th century cathedral and a palace of the Polish king John Sobieski.

Luca, cap. Italy (Lucca), is an ancient city and has several interesting buildings. Its cathedral of San Martino (11th century) is rich in paintings and sculptures, and many of its churches, which are fine examples of mediæval architecture, are built of Carrara marble. The ducal palace possesses a fine picture gallery. It is the seat of an archbishop. The town has extensive silk-mills; jute, velvets, tobacco, and cottons are also manufactured.

Lucerne, Switzerland (cap. Lucerne), is picturesquely situated on the shores of the Lake of Lucerne, and is now the chief center of foreign tourists in summer. To the east rises the celebrated view of the Rigi, and to the southwest that of Pilatus. The main features of interest in the town are mediæval towers and walls; the 5 bridges, including the covered wooden bridge, with its paintings representing scenes from the lives of patron saints and a "Dance of Death"; the Quai National and the Schweizerhof Quai, the latter with a fine avenue of chestnut trees; the Hofkirche, erected in 1506; the town hall, containing antiquarian and art collections; and the "Lion of Lucerne," a rock monument chiseled by Thorwaldsen, commemorating the heroic defence of Louis XVI.'s Swiss Guards during the attack on the Tuileries (Aug. 10, 1792). The glacier garden exhibits remarkable pot-holes.

Lucknow, India (United Provinces), is an important commercial and railroad center, with manufactures of muslins and shawls, gold and silver embroidery, glass and pottery ware. Its chief architectural features are the fort, the Imambara, or mausoleum of Asaf-ud-Daula, and the Jama Masjid. It is an important educational center, having, besides the Canning and Martinière Colleges, numerous missionary schools. Lucknow was defended (at first under Sir Henry Lawrence) against the Indian mutineers, July-Sept., 1857; was relieved by Havelock, Sept. 26; again relieved by Campbell, Nov. 16; and finally captured by Campbell, March, 1858.

Ludwigshafen, Germany (Bavaria), has very extensive manufactures of aniline dyes and soda, and considerable trade in timber, iron, and coal.

Lüneburg, Germany (Hanover), has several historic churches and public buildings dating from the 14th and 15th centuries. Its manufactures include chemicals, ironware, and carpets.

Luton, England (Bedford), has brass and iron works, cocoa works, and manufactures of felt hats and straw plait.

Luxemburg, cap. Luxemburg, has manufactures of gloves, pottery, vinegar, and machinery and large tanning industries.

Lynchburg, Virginia (Campbell Co.), is an important trade and manufacturing center, and has a large trade in tobacco, both raw and manufactured. It has manufactures of iron and brass products, cotton goods, agricultural implements, shoes, dyes, hardware, lumber, and flour. There are granite quarries near the town and large coal-fields and iron ore in Campbell and the neighboring counties. It is the seat of a woman's college and other educational institutions.

Lynn, Massachusetts (Essex Co.), is noted for its shoe factories, which employ over 25,000 people, and for its large electrical works. It also has manufactures of cut leather, shoe machinery, electrical supplies, lamps, morocco, patent medicines, etc. It was settled in 1629 and incorporated in 1630.

Lyon, France (cap. Rhône), is the third city of the country, and is a strongly fortified town, a leading industrial and commercial center, and an important railway and waterway junction. The silkworks reared in the Rhone valley and the proximity of coal and iron, at St. Etienne, have made Lyon the first town in France in silk manufacture, an industry first established here in 1450 by Italian refugees. Other manufactures are those of cotton, hardware, dyes, sulphuric acid, chemical manure, starch, candles, soap, paper-hangings, and machinery, and much business is done in chestnuts, cheese, and wine. Lyon is adorned with numerous interesting and beautiful buildings, among which may be mentioned the cathedral of St. Jean (12th to 15th century); the archiepiscopal palace (15th century); the church of St. Martin d'Ainay, which is built on the site of a Roman temple, and contains the remains of a Roman votive altar; the City Hall (1646); and several extensive and admirably arranged picture-galleries and museums, in addition to a state university ranking next to that of Paris in the number of its students (2,500), and a public library, which boasts some of the earliest specimens of printing. Lyon is the seat of a bishop. It was founded by Greeks in 560 B. C.; was greatly developed under the Roman emperor Augustus; was the capital of the first Burgundian kingdom (478), afterward passing to the Franks; was plundered by the Saracens in the 8th century; and was united to France at the beginning of the 11th century. Two important councils were held here in 1245 and in 1247.

McAlester, Oklahoma (c. h. Pittsburg Co.), is a trade center in a rich agricultural region. Coal-mining is the leading industry.

McKeesport, Pennsylvania (Allegheny Co.), is a trade center, originally noted for its fields of bituminous coal and natural gas. It has extensive manufactories of steel and iron, and tube works which employ 12,000 men; also railroad shops, glass-works, locomotive works, etc. It has a large trade in coal and lumber.

Maastricht, Netherlands (cap. Limburg), is an ancient city, and contains the church of St. Servatius, founded in the 6th century. South of the town are the tufa quarries of Petersberg, worked since Roman times; they have yielded many fossils, including saurians. Glass, pottery, and carpets are manufactured. Maastricht was, till 1878, one of the strongest fortresses in Europe, and suffered many sieges.

Macao, China, is a port belonging to Portugal, situated on an island at the mouth of the Canton River. Exports tobacco, preserves, and essential oils, and has a transit trade in tea, silks, etc. The old Collegiate church of the Jesuits is the most striking architectural feature. The town is notorious for its gambling-houses.

Macclesfield, England (Cheshire), is the chief silk-manufacturing center in England, producing broads, plain and fancy silks and satins, ribbons, gimps, and fringes. Silk-throwing is an important branch of the industry.

Macelo, Brazil (cap. Alagoas), is a seaport with extensive exports in cotton, sugar, cotton-seed, and hides; and manufactures of cottons and sugar.

Macon, Georgia (c. h. Bibb Co.), is an important trade and manufacturing center on the Ocmulgee River, which has a fall of about 90 ft. seven miles above the city, furnishing immense power. It is a railroad center and lies in the midst of a fast developing cotton district. It is one of the most important inland cotton markets in the United States, and is at the edge of the Georgia peach belt. It has extensive cotton manufactories, and yarn, duck, cordage, twine, hosiery, and knit underwear works. It also has extensive manufactories of cotton-seed-oil, cottonseed meal and cake for live-stock, agricultural implements, brick, and fertilizers. Here also are railroad shops, lumber-mills, etc. Near by is a large vein of kaolin.

Madison, Wisconsin (c. h. Dane Co.), is situated in a rich agricultural region, and is the seat of the University of Wisconsin (4,000 students). Its observatory is one of the best in America, and its departments of history, economics, geology, agriculture, and engineering are well equipped and have a national reputation. In addition to the State Capitol, containing the State Law Library of 40,000 volumes, another building of note is that of the Wisconsin Historical Society, the most important institution of the kind west of the Alleghanies, possessing a reference library of nearly 250,000 volumes and an historical and ethnological museum. A soldiers' orphan home is located here, and a state fish-hatchery is near the city. The chief manufactures are boots and shoes, agricultural implements, tools, flour, electrical machinery, wagons, and carriages.

Madras, India (cap. Madras), is a port and coaling station, where loading and discharging is done largely by lighter; but nevertheless it is one of the foremost seaports of India. It exports cotton, sugar, indigo, rice, hides, cocoanut-oil, oil-seeds, pepper, etc. It has a number of handsome edifices, such as the Government House, St. George's cathedral, the Scottish church of St. Andrew, the university buildings, the new law courts, Patcheappah's Hall, Memorial Hall, and the Chepauk Palace. There is a large arsenal. Besides the university, an examining institution, Madras possesses Presidency College, schools of law, medicine, agriculture, engineering, and art, Victoria Technical Institute, a teachers' college, the Madras Christian College, a botanical garden, and a valuable museum. Madras is the seat of an Anglican and of a Roman Catholic bishop. It manufactures cottons, known as "Madrases", and has dye-works, tanneries, potteries, glass-works, etc. In 1504 the Portuguese founded here the town of St. Thomé. In 1639 the rajah of Chandragiri granted to the East India Company a site close to St. Thomé, where the town of Madras was founded.

Madrid, cap. Spain (cap. Madrid), has a university, a normal school, veterinary school, schools of commerce, engineering, architecture, music, and the fine arts. The National Library contains 600,000 volumes and 30,000 manuscripts; while the National Museum of Painting and Sculpture has a fine collection of the works of Raphael, Titian, and Rubens, in addition to the most famous productions of Velasquez. The Church of San Francisco, finished in 1784, is a great rotunda, with a dome 163 ft. high, an apse, and three domed chapels radially arranged on each side. The interior is remarkable for its spaciousness, and for its profuse decorations with sculpture and painting by modern masters. The royal palace, begun in 1737, is imposing from its great size and its fine situation on a lofty terrace. In the royal armory is a unique collection of splendid mediæval and Renaissance armor, arms, banners, and trappings, a large proportion of which was actually used by some of the most famous personages in Spanish history. Industrially it is not very active, tobacco being the chief manufacture. Madrid was a Moorish outpost; was taken from the Moors in 1083; became the favorite residence of Charles V.; and was made the capital by Philip II. in 1560.

Madura, India (Madras), was for centuries the religious and political capital of South India, and contains some of the finest extant examples of Hindu architecture, including the granite temple of Minarchi, or the Fish Mother. Rebuilt in the 2nd or 3rd century, it was nearly destroyed during the Mohammedan conquest of the 14th century. Its present splendor is due to Tirumulla Nayak (1623-59). The town has coffee and cotton-mills and cigar factories. Brass ware and dyed cotton cloth are also made. Madura is the center of the American missionary effort in South India.

Magdeburg, Germany (Prussia), is one of the leading commercial centers of Germany and a strongly fortified city. Its industries comprise ship-building, and the construction of engines, machinery, armor-plate, and ordnance. The principal articles of commerce are sugar, chicory, and tobacco. It has a 13th century cathedral and a municipal museum of industries.

Mahanoy City, Pennsylvania (Schuylkill Co.), is a trade center in the anthracite coal region, and in the vicinity are also found fire-clay and an excellent building stone. The chief manufactures are pottery, foundry products, flour, hosiery, and lumber.

Mährisch-Ostrau, Austria (Moravia), has iron foundries, rolling-mills, chemical works, oil refineries, etc. There are coal mines in the vicinity.

Maldstone, England (cap. Kent), has among its principal buildings the mediæval church of All Saints, the College of All Saints, and the curious 16th century manor-house, which contains a valuable museum. Its industries include paper-mills, breweries, malt-kilns, and agricultural implement works. Stone is quarried, and hops and fruit are grown. The town was taken by Fairfax in 1648.

Malkop, Russia (Kuban Territory), is a fortified town and trade center.

Mainz, Germany (Hesse), is a fortified town and one of the most important commercial centers on the Rhine, and carries on a brisk shipping trade with Holland and Belgium. Its principal exports are leather goods, furniture, and wine, while printing, lithographic and otherwise, is a flourishing industry. Gutenberg, the inventor of movable type for printing, was born here. The picturesque cathedral dates back to 978. The old castle of the electors, built in 1627-78, contains rich collections of Roman and Germanic antiquities, and the Gutenberg museum was established in 1901.

Mako, Hungary, has oil-mills and a fine episcopal palace.

Malaga, Spain (cap. Malaga), is a port on the Mediterranean, with export trade in fruits and wine, and cane-sugar and distilling industries. The cathedral is a vast structure, mainly Gothic. The climate in winter is beautifully mild, and favorable for invalids. Of Phœnician origin, Malaga was for centuries a Moorish city and one of the principal ports of the kingdom of Granada. Ferdinand the Catholic captured it, after a long siege, in 1487.

Malden, Massachusetts (Middlesex Co.), is a suburb of Boston, with extensive manufactories of rubber boots and shoes, boot-trees, boot and shoe lasts, wire cord, leather, sand and emery paper, cotton goods, hosiery, knit goods, furniture, and soap.

Malmö, Sweden (cap. Malmöhus), is a fortified port and coaling station, with one of the largest artificial harbors in Scandinavia. Malmö has iron-works, woollen mills, dockyards, machinery, sugar, steam-mill factories, and breweries.

Malstatt-Burbach, Germany (Prussia), has coal-mines and iron-works.

Managua, cap. Nicaragua, has a national palace, and an industrial, commercial, and scientific museum. It exports coffee.

Manaos, Brazil (cap. Amazonas), is a port on the Rio Negro, a few miles above its junction with the Amazon. It has modern docking facilities and storage houses for the immense trade of the region in rubber, Brazil-nuts, cocoa, and copaiva oil. It has a cathedral, a magnificent theater, and all modern improvements.

Manchester, Connecticut (Hartford Co.), has extensive silk-mills, cotton and woollen mills, needle works, paper-mills, and electrical supply works. A large quantity of tinware is made here.

Manchester, England (Lancashire), is the greatest industrial town of England, and the center of its cotton industry, chiefly engaged in the spinning and weaving of cotton, and in the bleaching, printing, and making up of "Manchester goods." There are also a vast number of engineering works. The shipping houses of Manchester export cottons, silk and woollen goods, steam, gas, and electrical machinery, chemicals, india-rubber, iron, steel, and copper goods. It is now a port accessible for the largest sea-going vessels by means of a ship-canal, 35½ miles long, which connects it with the river Mersey, near its estuary. It is the seat of a university and of an Anglican bishop. It was the first town in England to adopt free libraries, and has numerous educational institutions, an art gallery containing a noteworthy collection, one of the finest town halls (1877) in England, etc. It was known as a manufacturing place as early as the 14th century; developed rapidly during the last half of the 18th century; was a leading center of the reform agitation in the early part of the 19th century (the scene of the "Peterloo massacre" in 1819); and became the center of the anti-corn-law and free trade movements under the lead of Cobden and Bright.

Manchester, New Hampshire (c. h. Hillsboro Co.), is an important trade and manufacturing center, the Amoskeag Falls above the city providing extensive water-power, which is made available by canals. It has extensive cotton-mills, and manufactures foundry and machine-shop products, hosiery, paper, boots and shoes, woodenware, needles, knit goods, woollen goods, carriages and furniture. A state industrial school is located here.

Mandalay, India (Upper Burma), is composed of the original town, a square encompassed by a wall, and an open city. Its gates are surmounted by curious wooden towers, and in the center of the town is the picturesque palace of the former kings of Burma. It has a famous pagoda containing an image of Buddha that attracts thousands of pilgrims. Silk-weaving is the chief industry.

Mangalore, India (Madras), is a seaport with exports of coffee, pepper, etc. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop and the headquarters of the Basel Lutheran mission in India.

Manila, cap. Philippine Islands (Rizal), is a port, coaling station, the commercial metropolis of the Philippine Islands, and the seat of the United States military, naval, and civil administration in the Far East. It is an archiepiscopal see and possesses a cathedral and a university (1,200 students). Its industries are extensive, especially in tobacco, cigars, cheroots, cord, rope, thread, and ice. There are also sugar-refineries, breweries, and manufactures of machinery. The climate of Manila is enervatingly tropical and generally uniform in temperature, which, as a mean for the year, is about 80°. The principal public buildings are palaces of the governor and the archbishop, the town house, churches of the different religious orders, monasteries, convents, arsenal, barracks, supreme court, prison, civil and military hospitals, and custom-house. Manila was founded by the Spaniards in 1571; was taken by the English in 1762; and has often been devastated by earthquakes. The bay was the scene of the first naval battle of the Spanish-American war of 1898, in which Dewey destroyed a Spanish fleet (May 1). The city surrendered to the United States' forces on August 13th of the same year.

Manipur, India (Assam), is the capital of a native state of the same name, and has a trade in opium, indigo, silk, rice, and tea.

Manissa, Turkey in Asia, is a busy trading place and has many mosques. Among the notable buildings are the palace of Kara Osman Oglu and the government house.

Manistee, Michigan (c. h. Manistee Co.), has extensive manufactories of timber products, leather, etc. There are large salt deposits, and the vacuum evaporating salt plant produces annually about 6,300,000 bushels. It has extensive shipping interests, and its transportation facilities make it an excellent distributing point for the interior of the northern part of the upper peninsula of Michigan.

Manitowoc, Wisconsin (c. h. Manitowoc Co.), is an important lake shipping port, with manufactures of leather, dairy products, flour, foundry and machine-shop products, agricultural implements, furniture, cigars, beer, etc.

Mankato, Minnesota (c. h. Blue Earth Co.), is an important trade and manufacturing center, with manufactures of knit goods, lime, cement, dairy products, flour, lumber, foundry and machine-shop products, and candy. Valuable stone quarries are in the vicinity. A state normal school is located here. Mankato was the scene of several battles during the Sioux Indian war, 1862-3.

Mannheim, Germany (Baden), is one of the principal trading centers of South Germany. Its industrial establishments include iron-foundries, machine-shops, saw-mills, and chemical, woollen, carpet, and glass-works. A large palace, built in 1720-9, formerly the residence of the Elector Palatine, faces the Rhine to the southwest of the town.

Manresa, Spain (Barcelona), has manufactures of textiles. The convent of Santo Domingo, where Loyola lived for a time, is located here and is the objective point of pilgrimage.

Mansfield, Ohio (c. h. Richland Co.), has extensive manufactories of boilers, agricultural machinery, pumps, soil pipe, steel harrows, brass goods, electrical supplies, stoves, wagons, etc. A state reformatory is located here.

Mantua, Italy (cap. Mantua), is a fortified city, and has many interesting mediæval palaces and churches, containing art treasures by Mantegna and Giulio Romano, both natives. It has an academy of sciences and arts, a theological seminary, an interesting museum, a botanical garden, and an observatory. It manufactures leather and textiles. Mantua is the birthplace of Vergil, the Roman poet.

Maracalbo, Venezuela, is the principal port of the country and has a large transit trade in merchandise destined for Colombia. It exports coffee, cocoa, box-wood, etc., and has some ship-building. It has a university and many fine buildings. Near by are asphalt deposits.

Maranhao, Brazil (cap. Maranhao), is a port and coaling station, situated on an island first settled by the Dutch. It exports cotton, sugar, rice, rubber, manioc hides, ginger, gum, etc. It is the seat of a bishop and has a cathedral.

Margate, England (Kent), is a favorite seaside resort, with a sea-front of nearly three miles, and is noted for its bracing air. It contains "The Grotto," a curious artificial cave adorned with shell mosaics, discovered in 1837.

Maria Theresopol, Hungary, is an important trade center, whose industries include weaving of linen, tanning, soap-making, ship-building, etc.

Marietta, Ohio (c. h. Washington Co.), is a trade center in a coal, iron, petroleum, and gas region, with fertile agricultural land in the valleys. It has extensive chair factories, glass-works, tool shops, brick works, boat yards, foundries, and other manufactories. It is the seat of Marietta College, and numerous other educational institutions. The site of Marietta was once part of a remarkable group of the mound-builders' prehistoric works, which consisted of two sections, one containing about 40 acres and the other about 20 acres. The remains of mounds, truncated pyramids, walls, and other ancient works still exist, although the city covers a large part of the original enclosures. Fragments of the walls, about 5 or 6 ft. high by 20 or 30 ft. base, may still be seen.

Marinette, Wisconsin (c. h. Marinette Co.), is the seat of an extensive lumber industry. The large lumber mills are the chief manufacturing establishments in the city, and there are also pail factories, paper and pulp mills, box and broom factories, engine and iron-works, threshing-machine factories, furniture factories, and cabinet shops. The city carries on a large commerce with all the important lake ports. In the vicinity are assembly grounds, where various religious and educational conventions are held each summer.

Marion, Indiana (c. h. Grant Co.), is a trade and manufacturing center in a fertile agricultural region, and a natural gas belt. The chief manufactures are flour, lumber, pulp, paper, brick, foundry products, window-glass, bottles, glass jars, furniture, linseed-oil, and rolling-mill products. It has a normal college, and three miles south of the city is a national soldiers' home.

Marion, Ohio (c. h. Marion Co.), is a trade and manufacturing center in a fertile agricultural section. It has extensive steam shovel works and manufactures of agricultural implements, carriages, buggies, mattresses, engines, etc.

Mariupol, Russia (Ekaterinoslaf), is a port on the Sea of Azof, with large exports of cereals, linseed, hides and tallow.

Marlboro, Massachusetts (Middlesex Co.), has manufactures of boots and shoes, shoe-making machinery, automobiles, automobile tires, bicycles, carriages, wagons, lamps, electrical machines, woodenware, and machine-shop products. During King Philip's war (1676), the Indians destroyed nearly the whole town.

Marquette, Michigan (c. h. Marquette Co.), is a port on Lake Superior having a fine harbor with the best of facilities for loading steamers with the iron ore and other minerals which are shipped from here in large quantities. Near the city are large quarries of brownstone. The chief industrial establishments are planing-mills, blast-furnaces, and stone-quarries. A state normal school, the Upper Peninsula State Prison, and a house of correction are located here.

Marsala, Italy (Trapani), is a fortified seaport, noted for its wines. It has a cathedral and occupies the site of the ancient Lilybæum, the chief fortress of the Carthaginians in Sicily.

Marseille, France (cap. Bouches-du-Rhône), is the leading port in the Mediterranean, a coaling station, and the second city of the country. The manufactures yield sugar, soda, metals, the products of lead-smelting, macaroni, and leather; but the city's specialties are oil-refining and soap-making. The fishing industry, especially for tunny, is flourishing. Marseille exports wine, fruits, cork, anchovies, silks, cotton, wool, etc., but the leading articles of trade are coal, oil-seeds, grain, soap, and petroleum. Of the older structures, the most interesting is the church of St. Victor, with its 11th century crypt. Originally perhaps settled by Phœnicians, Marseille owes its historical foundation to a Greek colony of Phœceans (600 B. C.). Having espoused the cause of Pompey, it was besieged and captured by Caesar (B. C.

49), and under Roman domination was famous alike for its commerce and its culture. Semi-independent through the middle ages, Marseille was deprived (1660) of many of its privileges as a free port by Louis XIV. In 1720 it was fearfully ravaged by the plague.

Marshalltown, Iowa (c. h. Marshall Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural and stock-raising region. It has flour-mills, grain elevators, glucose factories, meat-packing plants, furniture factories, carriage works, foundry and machine-shops, etc. The Iowa State Soldiers' Home is located here.

Masaya, Nicaragua, Central America, is a trade center, which has tobacco interests.

Maskat, Arabia, is a seaport and the capital of the independent state of Oman, which is under British political influence. It exports dates, hides, horses, asses, pearls, and drugs. It was taken by the Portuguese in 1508 and remained under their rule till the 17th century.

Massa, Italy (cap. Massa e Carrara), has a fine ducal palace, and is a center of the famous Carrara marble industry. Its manufactures include silk, paper, olive-oil, cotton, and tobacco.

Massillon, Ohio (Stark Co.), is a railroad and trade center in a section noted for its large bituminous coal-fields and for its excellent farm lands. There are quarries of white sandstone in the vicinity. Among its industrial establishments are foundries, rolling-mills, machine-shops, bridge works, steel-works, glass-works, potteries, flour-mills, and creameries. It has a large trade in coal, sandstone, grain, and live stock. The State Hospital and Asylum for the Insane is located here.

Mayebashi, Japan (cap. Gumma), has an important silk trade.

Mazatlán, Mexico (Sinaloa), is the chief port of Mexico on the Pacific Coast, and a coaling station. It exports gold, silver, dyewood, hides, cotton, coffee, and sugar.

Meadville, Pennsylvania (c. h. Crawford Co.), is a trade center in a fertile agricultural region, and in the vicinity of extensive oil fields. It has large railroad car shops, iron-works, silk-mills, chocolate works, engine works, etc. It is the seat of Allegheny College, established in 1815, a theological school, a college of music, and other educational institutions. It was settled in 1788, became a borough in 1823, and a city in 1866.

Mecca, Turkey in Asia (Arabia), is the holy city of the Mohammedan world, being the birthplace of Mohammed and the goal of the annual pilgrimage to his shrine. Every Moslem is bound to undertake once in his life a pilgrimage to Mecca, and in the rites performed on this occasion are included the circuit around the Kaaba and the kissing of the black stone. Mecca was the residence of the first five caliphs. It is now governed by a sheriff, who is chosen by the people from the descendants of the prophet, but holds his authority from the Turkish sultan. It has always been a center of trade, but its industries are now confined to pottery and articles for sale to pilgrims. Mecca was sacked by the Carpathians in 930 and passed to the Turks in 1517.

Mechlin, Belgium (Antwerp), is the see of the cardinal-primate of Belgium, and is noted for its vast Gothic cathedral, dating partly from the 13th century and containing Van Dyck's Crucifixion and Rubens' Last Supper. Other works of Rubens are in the churches of Notre Dame and St. John. Among other interesting buildings are the cloth hall, the law courts, and the archbishop's palace. Mechlin was formerly important for lace, shawls, and linen, but now its chief manufactures are woollen goods and "Gobelins" tapestry, with cabinet-making and carpentry.

Medellin, Colombia, is the second city of Colombia and its most important commercial and mining center. It has cotton factories. It is a bishop's see, and has a theological seminary, a school of mines, and a school of art and technology.

Medford, Massachusetts (Middlesex Co.), is a residential suburb of Boston, with manufactures of machinery, cotton goods, dyes, rum, chemicals, carriages, brick, and novelties. It is the seat of Tufts College (1120 students). The Craddock House, built in 1634, is one of the oldest, if not the oldest building, in the United States; it retains its original form.

Medina, Turkey in Asia (Arabia), is a walled city and is second only to Mecca in sanctity, being the scene of Mohammed's work after the Hejira or flight from Mecca Friday, July 16, 622 A. D. It contains the tomb of Mohammed and attracts many pilgrims.

Medinet-el-Fayoum, Egypt, manufactures woollen stuffs. It is the site of ancient Arsinoe.

Meerut, India (United Provinces), has a large military cantonment. It was the scene of the outbreak of the mutiny in 1857.

Mehallet-el-Kebir, Egypt, is a trade center and has manufactures of cotton.

Meiderich, Germany (Prussia), has iron and steel works.

Meissen, Germany (Saxony), is noted for the manufacture of "Dresden china." Its cathedral dates from the 13th century and is one of the finest Gothic structures in Germany.

Mekinez, Morocco, contains the summer residence of the sultan and the Mulai Ismael mosque, a royal burial-place much visited by pilgrims. Leather and earthenware are manufactured.

Melbourne, cap. Victoria, Australia, is a port and coaling station on Port Phillip Bay, and the largest city of Victoria. It is the seat of an Anglican bishop and of a Roman Catholic archbishop. It contains magnificent buildings, such as the Government House, the two cathedrals, the government offices, Houses of Parliament, law courts, and the university. Exports wool, gold, wheat, flour, frozen mutton, wine, etc.

Memphis, Tennessee (c. h. Shelby Co.), is the first city of Tennessee, and the most important on the Mississippi River between St. Louis and New Orleans. It is an important railroad center and is of great importance as a distributing point for cotton, lumber, groceries, shoes, hardware, and other commodities. It has the only bridge spanning the Mississippi River south of St. Louis. It has large cotton compresses, cottonseed oil-mills, flour-mills, pulp- and paper-mills, fiber plants, car works, pump works, machinery works, etc. It has a medical college, a college of the Christian Brothers, a normal institute for colored pupils, and other educational institutions. A national cemetery, containing over 20,000 graves, is 5 miles distant from the city.

Mendoza, Argentina (cap. Mendoza), is a trade center in a rich mining and agricultural region. Vineyards abound in the neighborhood, and wine is extensively manufactured. It is a fine city with many handsome buildings, and has an agricultural college. It was founded in 1559, and destroyed by an earthquake in 1861, after which it was rebuilt a mile nearer the mountains.

Menominee, Michigan (c. h. Menominee Co.), is a trade center in an extensive lumber region, and is one of the largest shipping ports on the Great Lakes. Its chief industries are manufactures of lumber, paper, shoes, machinery, beet sugar, electrical machinery, etc.

Mentone, France (Alpes-Maritimes), is a favorite winter resort on the Riviera, with a fine climate and surrounded by orange and lemon groves.

Merida, Mexico (cap. Yucatan), is a bishop's see, and has a cathedral dating from 1598, a university, etc. Exports sisal hemp, hides, sugar, indigo, logwood, etc.

Meriden, Connecticut (New Haven Co.), is noted for its large manufactures of cutlery, silver and plated ware, steel pens, hardware, screws, glassware, cut glass, malleable iron, brass castings, curtain fixtures, self-playing attachments for pianos and organs, and agate ware. The Connecticut School for Boys, and the Curtis Home for Orphan Children are located here.

Meridian, Mississippi (c. h. Lauderdale Co.), is a trade center in a cotton-producing district. The chief manufactures are cotton-mills, cotton seed oil-mills, lumber mills, railroad shops, cotton-gins, and cotton compresses. It is the seat of the East Mississippi Female College, opened in 1869, and other educational institutions.

Merthyr Tydfil, Wales (Glamorgan), is the great center of the iron and steel industry of South Wales, and has extensive coal mines.

Meshed, Persia, is a famous place for pilgrimages, the attraction being the tomb of Imam Riza, son of Ali, founder of the Shiites, located in a magnificent and richly adorned mosque. Its trade, once considerable, has decreased since the completion of the Russian railway from the Caspian Sea to Samarkand. Fine silks, carpets, shawls, and sword blades are manufactured.

Messina, Italy (cap. Messina), manufactures silks, muslin, linen, and coral ornaments. The principal exports are wine, oranges, lemons, almonds, licorice, and pistachios. It is the seat of an archbishop, and has a cathedral, commenced in 1098, and the church of Sta. Annunziata, dating from the Norman period. Its university contains a valuable library collected by the Jesuits, and has nearly 700 students. In 829 Messina was taken by the Saracens, who, in turn, were expelled by the Normans in 1072. The town suffers periodically from earthquakes, and was nearly destroyed in December, 1908.

Metz, Germany (Alsace-Lorraine), is a fortified town, with a 14th century cathedral, a museum, and several learned societies. It has trade in leather goods, preserved fruit, and wine. Known to the Romans as Divodurum, it was called Mettis in the 5th century, when it became the capital of the kingdom of Austrasia. It was frequently besieged, notably, and in vain, by the Emperor Charles V. in 1552. Metz remained in the possession of the French, to whom it was secured by the Peace of Westphalia in 1648, until 1870, when it capitulated to the Germans.

Mexico, cap. Mexico (Federal District), is the most imposing city of Latin America, and the metropolis of Mexico. Its famous cathedral, occupying the site of the chief Aztec temple (Teocalli), begun in 1573 and dedicated in 1667, is the second largest in the world. The National Museum contains valuable and interesting historical collections. The government offices, houses of Congress, Museum of Fine Arts, mint, school of mines, industrial museum, school of medicine, and conservatory of music are among the many notable buildings and institutions. The Palace of Chapultepec occupies the site of Montezuma's Palace, and dates from 1783-5, with later additions; it is now occupied by President Diaz and by the National Military School. The commerce of the city is mainly in transit. Its manufactures include cigars and cigarettes, gold and silver work, pottery, feather-work, saddlery, paper, religious pictures, hats, and beer. The present city was founded in 1522 on the site of the Aztec capital, Tenochtitlan, then situated in the lake Texcoco. The water of the lake afterwards retired, but the valley was subject to serious inundations until a few years ago. Numerous attempts have been made at various epochs to drain the valley of Mexico, but none of these proved successful until the completion in 1898 of the great Drainage Canal, constructed at a cost of $10,000,000. It is 30 miles long and crosses the mountains by a tunnel 6 miles in length. Its width at the top varies from 45 ft. to 168 ft., and it is crossed by numerous bridges of stone and iron. Elevation 7,850 ft.

Milagao, Philippine Islands (Iloilo), has manufactures of hemp.

Michigan City, Indiana (Laporte Co.), is a port at the southern end of Lake Michigan, and has manufactures of hosiery, knit underwear, chairs, lumber, railroad cars, and furniture. It has a large trade in iron ore, salt, lumber, and farm products. A state prison is located here.

Middlesborough, England (York), is a port with a large harbor, in the Cleveland iron district. Has large iron and steel-works, blast-furnaces, foundries, rolling-mills, tube works, and wire mills. Rock-salt was discovered in 1882, and large quantities are prepared, chiefly from brine.

Milan, Italy (cap. Milan), is in size the second city of Italy, and is the chief commercial and financial city of the country. It is the center of the Italian book-trade, and the printing of music is important; other industries are silk reeling and weaving, and the manufacture of velvet, machinery, chemicals, and metal work. The center of the city is occupied by the famous cathedral, built of white marble, commenced in 1386 and completed under Napoleon I., who was crowned King of Italy in 1805 with the iron crown of Lombardy. The town is exceptionally rich in monuments and in public gardens. There are numerous museums, picture galleries, and educational institutions. Among its theaters the famous Teatro della Scala is of world-wide renown. The city dates from the 4th century B. C., and was named Mediolanum. It was taken by Scipio (222 B. C.), and under Roman rule became a seat of learning. In 303 A. D. the Emperor Maximilian I. chose it as his residence, and made it the capital of Northern Italy, which it remained for about a century. After numerous wars with the German emperors and much internal strife, Milan became a duchy in 1395 under Gian Galeazzo Visconti. Having been held by Spain (1545) and Austria (1714), it was occupied by Napoleon Bonaparte in 1796, who made it the capital of the kingdom of Italy in 1805. Ten years later it reverted to Austria. It was the scene of great disturbance during the troubles of 1848-9 and 1853. After the peace of Villafranca (1859), it was ceded to Piedmont.

Milford, Massachusetts (Worcester Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural region and has considerable manufacturing interests. Its chief manufactures are foundry and machine-shop products, silk, boots and shoes, thread, straw goods, etc.

Millville, New Jersey (Cumberland Co.), is a manufacturing city, whose chief industrial works are foundries, glass factories, dyeworks, bleacheries, cotton-mills, machine-shops, etc.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin (c. h. Milwaukee Co.), is the largest city of Wisconsin, one of the chief manufacturing and commercial cities of the northwest, and one of the most important lake ports, with an excellent harbor, formed by the erection of huge breakwaters. It has an extensive commerce in grain, flour, coal, lumber, hides, and the products of its great manufacturing industries. The leading industry is the making of iron, steel, and heavy machinery. The flour-mills are very large, with a daily capacity of over 9,000 barrels, and the grain elevators have a capacity of about 6,000,000 barrels. Milwaukee lager beer is known all over the United States, and is produced annually to the amount of over 3,500,000 barrels. Pork-packing is extensively carried on, and the staple manufactures include leather, clothing, and tobacco. It is the seat of a state normal school, and the Milwaukee-Downer College for young women. The Layton Art Gallery has some interesting pictures and statues, and the magnificent public library contains over 200,000 volumes. Milwaukee was settled about 1818, became a village in 1835, and received the city charter in 1846.

Minneapolis, Minnesota (c. h. Hennepin Co.), is the largest city of Minnesota, and the chief flour-making place in the world. It is situated on the Mississippi River at the point where the river descends over the Falls of St. Anthony, about 50 ft., yielding over 50,000 horse-power. Its flour-mills have a daily capacity of about 85,000 barrels, and produce about 16,000,000 barrels annually. Its lumber mills cut 600,000,000 ft. of timber annually. It also has extensive manufactures of iron and steel goods, machinery, street-cars, woollens, boots and shoes, clothing, furniture, linseed-oil, paper, etc. It has an extensive trade in agricultural implements, and a large jobbing trade in general merchandise. It is the seat of the University of Minnesota, with an annual enrollment of about 4,000 students, and many other educational institutions. Minneapolis owes its prosperity and rapid growth to the extensive agricultural district tributary to it. It was settled in 1856 and became a city in 1867.

Minsk, Russia (cap. Minsk), is the seat of a Greek Orthodox and of a Roman Catholic bishop, and has cathedrals of Orthodox and Roman Catholic communions. Soap, tobacco, matches, woollen cloth, hats, and leather are manufactured, and there are breweries, distilleries, saw-mills, iron-foundries, and tile-works.

Mirzapur, India (United Provinces), has manufactures of carpets and brassware. Its ghats and temples are specially noteworthy.

Miskolcz, Hungary, has a Gothic church dating from the 13th century. It manufactures flour, pottery, and porcelain.

Missoula, Montana (c. h. Missoula Co.), is the largest city of western Montana, and the seat of the state university. It has iron-works, tile- and brick-works, lumber mills, etc.

Mitau, Russia (cap. Courland), has tanneries and cloth-works, and manufactures tin articles, linen, and white lead. From 1561 to 1795 it was the capital of the duchy of Courland. It was the favorite residence of Marshal Biron, ruling courtier of Empress Anne, who built there a fine palace.

Mito, Japan (cap. Ibaraki), manufactures cloth, paper, and cigarettes, and exports fish.

Mobile, Alabama (c. h. Mobile Co.), is a port and coaling station on Mobile Bay, 33 miles from the Gulf of Mexico. It is one of the leading cotton markets and shipping points in the country, and the natural center of the Alabama-Tombigbee cotton region. It exports cotton, cottonseed-oil, fruits, coal, lumber, live stock, meat, tar, turpentine, and rosin. It has extensive manufactures of lumber and grist-mill products, foundry and machine-shop works, ship and boat building, etc. A United States marine hospital is located here and there are numerous educational institutions. Mobile was founded in 1702 by the Sieur de Bienville. It was the capital of Louisiana down to 1723. In 1763 it passed, with part of Louisiana, to Great Britain; in 1780 it was handed over to Spain, and in 1803 it became part of the United States by the Louisiana Purchase, although the government did not take possession until 1813. It was incorporated as a city in 1819. In 1864 the harbor was attacked and closed by Admiral Farragut, but the city itself did not surrender to the Federal troops until April 12, 1865.

Modena, Italy (cap. Modena), is the seat of an archbishop and is especially rich in churches, palaces and public buildings. The cathedral, with a marble tower, was commenced in 1099 by the countess Matilda of Tuscany; while the palace, built by Francis II. in the 17th century, contains a valuable library, an important picture gallery, and a rare collection of coins. Modena has a university, a military college, an academy of arts and sciences, an observatory, and a botanical garden. It has manufactures of woollen and hempen cloths, hats, and leather. It was from the end of the 13th century until 1860 the capital of the duchy of Modena, ruled by the Este family.

Modica, Italy (Syracuse), trades in grain, wine, oil, and cotton. There are remarkable prehistoric caves in its vicinity.

Mohilef, Russia (cap. Mohilef), possesses a fine town hall (1679), a Roman Catholic cathedral (1692), and an Orthodox cathedral, founded in 1780 by Catherine II. The Roman Catholic archbishop is primate of all Roman Catholics in Russia. Leather, tobacco, and pottery are manufactured.

Molenbeek, Belgium (Brabant), has machine-works dye-works, tanneries, and manufactures of textiles, carpets, soap, and margarine.

Molfetta, Italy (Bari delle Puglie), is a port with a commodious harbor. The principal exports are wine, almonds, olive-oil, and niter.

Moline, Illinois (Rock Island Co.), is an important manufacturing city, with good water-power secured by damming a part of the Mississippi River between the shore and an island at this point. There are coal-fields near by, which also contribute to the industrial development of the city. The chief manufactures are wagons, carriages, agricultural implements, steel, steam-engines, pumps, flour, and foundry and machine-shop products.

Mombasa, cap. British East Africa, Africa, is a port and coaling station, with a harbor well sheltered by a coralline bar of depth sufficient for largest vessels. Exports gum, copra, cattle, ivory, grain, etc. Mombasa dates from the end of the 15th century, when the Portuguese acquired it.

Monastir, Servia (cap. Monastir), has tanneries and manufactures of silver filigree, woollen stockings, and carpets.

Monclova, Mexico (Coahuila), is a trade center, and has large railroad shops. It was founded in 1685.

Moncton, New Brunswick, Canada, is a railway and trade center with car shops, machine shops, wire fence works, etc.

Monghyr, India (Bengal), has manufactures of cotton, cloth, and shoes.

Monroe, Louisiana (c. h. Ouachita Parish), is the largest city of northeastern Louisiana, and has extensive shingle-mills, and other lumber interests.

Mons, Belgium (cap. Hainaut), is the center of a very rich coal-mining region, and its industries include engineering works, cotton-spinning, and sugar-refining. It contains the church of Sainte Waudru (1450-1589), one of the finest Gothic edifices in Belgium, and a 15th century town hall.

Montauban, France (cap. Tarn-et-Garonne), has manufactures of textiles, and a large trade in wine, grain, and agricultural produce. It was one of the strongholds of the Huguenots, and even now half of its inhabitants are Protestants. It possesses a Protestant theological college, the only one of the kind in France.

Montclair, New Jersey (Essex Co.), is a residential suburb of New York and is noted for its healthy climate. It has a state normal school, a military academy, and electrical construction works.

Monte Carlo, Monaco, is one of the chief resorts on the Riviera, and is famous for its casino with its gaming tables of roulette and trente-et-quarante. It is charmingly situated, and has an exquisite climate, beautiful gardens, and a well-known opera house.

Monterey, Mexico (cap. Nuevo Leon), is a winter resort with mineral springs, and the most important manufacturing city of Northern Mexico, with large smelting-works, iron-foundries, cotton factories, and silver mining. It has a cathedral. Monterey was taken from the Mexicans by the United States army under General Taylor in 1846.

Montevideo, cap. Uruguay, is the chief port of Uruguay and has the best harbor on the Plata River, which at this point is 50 miles wide. The most imposing buildings are the senate-house, the cathedral, the university (over 400 students), the national library and museum, the great Solis Theatre, the school of art, etc. The principal exports are hides, wool, and preserved beef. The port is noted for salubrity and cleanliness, and has all modern improvements. Until 1814 Montevideo was in the possession of the Spaniards. In 1828 it became the capital of the republic.

Montgomery, cap. Alabama (c. h. Montgomery Co.), is at the head of navigation of the Alabama River, 410 miles from the Gulf of Mexico, and is one of the chief cotton marts and distributing points of the south. There are coal and iron fields near by, and the vast forests of yellow pine on the south add to its great natural advantages for manufacturing. Its industries include car shop and foundry works, factories for boilers and other iron goods, cotton factories, cordage factories, ginning and compress plants, cottonseed-oil and cake works, wood-working and lumber plants, roofing material plants, etc. There are located here a state normal school and other educational institutions. In the State House the Confederate Government was inaugurated by Jefferson Davis on Feb. 18th, 1861, whence Montgomery has been called the "Cradle of the Confederacy". It was also the scene of Yancey's celebrated secession speech on Jan. 11th, 1861.

Montlucon, France (Allier), has blast-furnaces and iron-works, and engineering shops. Mirrors are a specialty.

Montpellier, France (cap. Hérault), is chiefly important as a wine center and for silk culture. There are also manufactures of blankets, soap, and candles. Montpellier possesses not only the oldest botanical garden in Europe, but one of its most famous universities, constituted (in 1289) from the already existing schools of medicine, law, and arts. Moorish physicians founded the school of medicine and science, with which are associated the names of De Villeneuve, Rabelais, Rondelet the anatomist, Bauhin, Magnol, Tournefort, and De Jussieu. At the university, too, Petrarch was a student and Casaubon a professor. The town has a cathedral.

Montreal, Quebec, Canada, is a port at the head of navigation of the St. Lawrence River, nearly 1,000 miles from the ocean, and is the largest city of Canada. It is the chief commercial and financial center of Canada, and has extensive manufactures of woollen and cotton, boot and shoe factories, breweries, iron-foundries, railway works, clothing, sugar, and tobacco factories. More than half of its population are French. The city, which is predominately Roman Catholic, contains many fine churches, notably the cathedral of Notre Dame, St. James' Cathedral, St. Patrick's, and the Jesuit Church, noted for its frescoes. The Anglican cathedral, Christ Church, is said to be the finest specimen of Decorated Gothic in America. Mention must also be made of the fine group of buildings in which McGill University is housed. When Jacques Cartier sailed up the St. Lawrence in 1535, he found here the Indian town of Hochelaga. In 1760 Montreal surrendered to the English under Lord Amherst. During the war of independence, it was occupied by the Americans (1775-6). The riot of 1847 resulted in the destruction of the parliamentary buildings by fire, and the removal of the seat of government to Quebec.

Montreuil, France (Seine), is a suburb of Paris, and contains a beautiful 13th century church. It is celebrated for its culture of peaches, and has manufactures of colors, glue, varnish, and soap.

Monza, Italy (Milan), is an ancient city, and has a cathedral, founded in 595, where the famous iron crown of Lombardy is preserved. The town hall dates from 1293, and the royal palace from 1777. It has manufactures of coarse cottons, hats, leather, and silk; also dye-works. In 1900 King Humbert of Italy was assassinated here.

Moosejaw, Saskatchewan, Canada, is in the midst of a prosperous agricultural district, and has large flour-mills and stock-yards.

Moradabad, India (United Provinces), has manufactures of cotton, and is noted for engraved metal ware. It has ruins of Rustam Khan's fort, dating from the foundation of the town in 1625.

Morelia, Mexico (cap. Michoacan), has manufactures of cottons, pottery, and sugar. It possesses a cathedral and two colleges.

Morioka, Japan (cap. Iwate), is noted for silks and kettles.

Morocco, cap. Morocco, is an inland walled town, of oriental aspect, which contains the imperial residence of the Sultan. It was formerly important as the place of manufacture of morocco leather.

Morristown, New Jersey (c. h. Morris Co.), is a residential suburb of New York, and is noted for its beautiful homes, country-seats, etc. It was settled in 1709-10 and was called West Hanover. In 1740 the name was changed to Morristown in honor of William Morris, then colonial governor of New Jersey. It was incorporated in 1865. This place figured prominently in the Revolution; in 1777, from January to May, and from December, 1779 to June, 1780, Morristown was Washington's headquarters. An historical museum, in the house occupied by Washington, is now owned by the Washington Association, who preserve here many mementoes of Revolutionary and pre-Revolutionary times.

Morshansk, Russia (Tambov), carries on a large trade, and has manufactures of soap, tallow, spirits; also breweries, saw-mills, and fisheries.

Moscow, Russia (cap. Moscow), is the ancient and still, in a sense, joint capital of Russia, the second largest city of the empire, and the chief railway and manufacturing center. The Kreml or Kremlin, Moscow's acropolis, is entirely surrounded by a wall (40 ft. high), enclosing a space of more than 80 acres. Inside is the cathedral of the Assumption, built in 1474-9, in Lombardo-Byzantine style, and here the Russian emperors are crowned. The cathedral of the Annunciation, founded at the beginning of the 14th century, contains 15th century paintings. The cathedral of St. Michael contains life-sized frescoes of early Russian sovereigns round the walls. The isolated bell-tower of Ivan Velikii has a head of gilded copper, some 260 ft. above the pavement. One of the bells weighs almost 64 tons. The Czar Kolokol, or King of Bells, stands on a pedestal at the foot. It is the largest bell in the world, and weighs some 200 tons. Cast in 1735, it was broken in 1737 without having once sounded. The old imperial palace, the former residence of the Czars, was built in 1487; the Great Palace, an immense pile built in 1806 by Alexander I., contains a collection of ancient robes and armor; the Little Palace, built by Nicholas I., contains valuable pictures and a great collection of books relating to Moscow. Among other wonders of the Kremlin are the Treasury of the Patriarchs, the Chudov Convent, the House of the Holy Synod, and the Saviour Gate. The cathedral of St. Basil (built in 1554), is one of the strangest erections of Christian art. Moscow is the seat of the metropolitan, the chief prelate of the Russian Orthodox Church. The university, founded in 1755, has a library of 300,000 volumes. The city has woollen, silk, and metal manufactures, cotton-mills, tanneries, and candle factories. The principality of Moscow was united with that of Vladimir, and Moscow became the capital of the grand principality of Moscow and the seat of the metropolitan in the first part of the 14th century. It was taken and burned by Lithuanians and Tatars in the 14th century, was nearly destroyed by fire in 1547, and burned by the Khan in 1571. The capital was removed to St. Petersburg by Peter the Great in 1711. Moscow was burned by its inhabitants during its occupation by Napoleon in Sept., 1812.

Mosul, Turkey in Asia, was very prosperous between the 10th and 13th centuries, and was for long afterwards a great trading center, noted particularly for its manufactures of muslin, to which it gave its name. Its importance has greatly declined since the opening of the Suez Canal. Near Mosul are the mounds which mark the site of ancient Nineveh, the capital of Assyria.

Motherwell, Scotland (Lanark), is situated in a rich coal-mining district, and has iron- and steel-works. A growing industry is iron bridge-building.

Mountain Ash, Wales (Glamorgan), has coal-mines and iron-works.

Mount Carmel, Pennsylvania (Northumberland Co.), is a trade center in the midst of valuable coal-fields and nearby are a number of anthracite mines. It has manufactures of mining implements, miners' lamps, hats, caps, men's clothing, flour, cigars, etc.

Mount Clemens, Michigan (Macomb Co.), is a celebrated health resort with several mineral springs.

Mount Vernon, New York (Westchester Co.), is a residential suburb of New York, and has several industrial establishments and a considerable trade. It was founded in 1852 and chartered in 1892.

Mukden, China (cap. Manchuria), is an important banking and commercial center, especially for furs. It has an arsenal and a mint, and outside its walls four conspicuous Lamaist monasteries. During the Boxer rising in 1900 the city was much injured by fire. Inside the east gate is the famous "Fox" temple, much frequented by those who seek to have their diseases miraculously cured. After a fiercely contested battle of fourteen days, duration, the Russians were here defeated by the Japanese, who entered the city on March 10, 1905.

Mulhausen, Germany (Alsace-Lorraine), is a most important manufacturing center, principally for cotton goods and chemicals. Machinery and railway materials are also produced.

Mulheim-on-Rhine, Germany (Prussia), has chemical and engineering works, and manufactures silks, satins, and plush.

Mulheim-on-Ruhr, Germany (Prussia), has iron-works, engineering shops, and glass-works. A large coal trade is carried on.

Multan, India (Punjab), is a railroad center, with extensive trade and important bazaars and banking business. It manufactures textiles, including brocades.

Muncie, Indiana (c. h. Delaware Co.), is a trade and manufacturing center in the natural gas belt of Indiana. In the vicinity are coal-fields and glass sand, and the White River furnishes good water-power. The chief industrial establishments are iron- and steel-works, glass-works, machine-shops, canneries, pulp and paper-mills, manufactories of silver and plated goods, flour, etc. It has numerous educational institutions.

Munich, Germany (cap. Bavaria), contains a royal residence, a magnificent pile, commenced in the beginning of the 17th century, under Maximilian I. The cathedral dates from 1368. Among other buildings of great architectural beauty are the Glyptothek, the new Pinakothek (both picture and sculpture galleries), the National Theatre, the new Courts of Justice (1897), and the Imperial Bank (1901). In addition to the university (4,500 students), and the famous Academy of Arts, there are numerous educational institutions. The royal library is one of the most valuable in Germany, while the art collections are unrivalled. Munich is the home of countless literary, scientific, geographical, and other societies. The principal industry is brewing, but leather goods, gloves, machinery, artificial flowers, embroideries, gold and silver articles, and scientific instruments form other branches of commerce. The town was founded by Henry the Lion, Duke of Saxony, in the middle of the 12th century. It was taken by the Swedes under Gustavus Adolphus in 1632. King Louis I. (1825-48), a great patron of the arts, did much towards embellishing the town. In his reign the university, originally established at Ingolstadt in 1472, and removed to Landshut in 1800, was transferred to Munich. King Maximilian II. (1848-64) followed in his father's footsteps, but devoted more care to the development of the sciences. He founded the Maximilianeum and the National Museum, and gathered round him many of the principal scientists of the day.

Munster, Germany (Prussia), has numerous mediæval buildings, including the 14th century Gothic church of St. Lambert. In the town hall, built in 1335, was signed the Peace of Westphalia on October 24, 1648, which terminated the Thirty Years' war. The university was founded in 1771. The principal manufactures are linen and cotton goods, while Westphalian hams and pumpernickel, a coarse, black rye-bread, are exported. Distilling, brewing, wood-carving, and glass-painting are thriving industries.

Murcia, Spain (cap. Murcia), is the seat of a bishop and has a cathedral in the Gothic Romanesque style begun in the 14th century, with a striking tower completed in 1766. Cloth, gunpowder, and flannel are manufactured.

Nanaimo, British Columbia, Canada, has a fine harbor and is a trade center in a fruit growing and farming section. It has extensive fishing and fish curing interests and ships considerable coal.

Nanchang, China (cap. Kiangsi), is the center of the porcelain trade of the country.

Nancy, France (cap. Meurthe-et-Moselle), was formerly the capital of the duchy of Lorraine, and it possesses a university, a large public library, and a famous school of forestry. It is an important railway center, and its chief manufactures are embroidery, cambrie, muslin, jaconets, cotton and woollens, and artificial flowers. Outside the town Charles the Bold of Burgundy was killed in the battle against the Swiss (1477).

Nankin, China (cap. Kiangsu), is a port on the Yangtze River, 130 miles from its mouth. Its silks and satins are famous in China, its nankeens in Europe. It contained the remarkable "porcelain tower", and the tomb of the first Ming emperor (Hung Wu) is near the city. An arsenal stands outside the city.

Nantes, France (cap. Loire-Inférieure), exports wine, preserved provisions, and hardware, and has manufactures of sugar, leather, soap, preserved meats, fruits, and sardines, as well as cotton-mills, iron-foundries, and ship-building yards. In its 14th century castle Henri IV. signed the Edict of Nantes (1598). The somewhat unsightly cathedral (1434-1852), contains an exquisite Renaissance monument by Colomb to the last Duke and Duchess of Brittany.

Nanticoke, Pennsylvania (Luzerne Co.), is a trade center in an anthracite coal region. Has extensive water-power, which is utilized in manufacturing mining and agricultural implements, hosiery, knit goods, lumber, flour, etc. The industry contributing most to the wealth of the town is coal-mining.

Naples, Italy (cap. Naples), is a port, coaling station and the largest city of Italy, famous for its beautiful situation. It has extensive ship-building, and is an important port of embarkation of emigrants, and has a large export trade in wine, silk, hemp, flax, fruit, etc. It is the seat of an archbishop, and has a cathedral, commenced in 1272 and completed in 1316. The university (5,550 students) was founded by the Emperor Frederick II. in 1224. Among other public buildings are the castle of St. Elmo (1334); the new castle, built by Charles I. in 1283; the Borbonico (now National Museum), founded in 1586; the royal palace, dating from 1600; and the San Carlo theatre, opened in 1737. Naples was a Greek colony from Cumæ; flourished under Roman rule; suffered in the barbarian invasions; was taken by Belisarius in 536, by Totila in 543, and by the Normans in 1130; and became the capital of the kingdom of Naples and of the Two Sicilies in 1139.

Nara, Japan (cap. Nara), was from 709 the first fixed capital of Japan. It has beautiful temples, a Shinto dating from 767, and a Buddhist from 752; also a huge bell, weighing 37 tons (cast in 732), and a gigantic image of Buddha. Fans and toys are manufactured.

Narbonne, France (Aude), is an ancient city, and has a cathedral dating from the 13th century and a town hall, also from the 13th century, which is now a museum. It makes brandy and wine, and is famous for its heather honey.

Nashua, New Hampshire (c. h. Hillsboro Co.), is an important manufacturing city. Its water-power is obtained from the Nashville River by means of a canal 3 miles long, 60 ft. wide and 8 ft. deep. The chief manufactures are cotton goods, paper, shoes, iron and steel products, edged-tools, saddlery, refrigerators, registers, sash, doors, and blinds, ice-cream freezers, etc. It has a United States fish-hatchery. The first settlement was made in 1655.

Nashville, cap. Tennessee (c. h. Davidson Co.), is the second city of the state, and the most important educational and publishing center in the South. It is the seat of Vanderbilt University, attended by upwards of 1,000 students; the University of Nashville, attended by about 1,500 students; and the Peabody teachers' college, 1,000 students. Fisk University, 600 students, the Roger Williams University, 250 students, and Walden University, 1,000 students, are the leading seats of learning for colored persons. There are numerous other educational institutions. The most prominent public building is the State Capitol. The state library contains 40,000 volumes, and the Tennessee Historical Society has a large and valuable library, with many rare MSS., portraits, etc. The city has manufactures of hardware, large flour-mills, copper mills, tobacco works, etc.; also a large and extensive wholesale trade in dry goods and other merchandise; and is a leading lumber-market. Several large sectarian publishing houses are located here. Nashville was settled in 1780 and became the permanent state capital in 1843. The Federal army occupied the city in 1862 and around it, in 1864, was fought one of the greatest battles of the Civil War, in which Gen. Hood, at the head of the Confederate army, was defeated by Gen. Thomas.

Neunkirchen, Germany (Prussia), has coal-mines and iron-works.

Neuss, Germany (Prussia), has manufactures of screws, nails, paper, soap, and starch.

Nevers, France (cap. Nièvre), manufactures chains, cables, and agricultural implements; but the most famous product is majolica pottery, introduced from Italy in 1565. It is the seat of a bishop, and the chief buildings are the cathedral (11th to 15th century), with an apse at either end, and the Law-Courts (1475), the residence of the former dukes of Nevers.

New Albany, Indiana (c. h. Floyd Co.), is an important railroad center and manufacturing city on the Ohio River, nearly opposite Louisville. It has large glass-works, pork-packing establishments, tanneries, furniture factories, rolling-mills, lumber mills, and foundries. It is the seat of De Pauw College for women and other educational institutions. It was incorporated in 1839.

Newark, New Jersey (c. h. Essex Co.), is the largest city of New Jersey, and the third insurance center in the United States. It has extensive manufactures of jewelry, patent enameled leather, celluloid, hats, automobile bodies, varnish, cutlery, malt liquors, clothing, etc. Essex County Court-House has mural decorations by Blashfield, Walker, Cox, Maynard, Pyle, Turner, Millet, and Low. Newark was settled in 1666 and chartered as a city in 1836.

Newark, Ohio (c. h. Licking Co.), has manufactures of glassware, chemicals, instruments, carriages, locomotives, cars, flour and lumber products. In the vicinity are valuable deposits of sandstone, coal, and natural gas. Near by are two large mounds which belong to the works of the "Mound Builders." It was settled in 1802.

New Bedford, Massachusetts (c. h. Bristol Co.), was formerly an important whaling port, and is now a busy center in the manufacture of cotton. It has upwards of fifty cotton-mills, employing many thousand operators, large cordage works, large shoe factories, woollen mills, glass-works, paint works, and other industries. It ranks first among the cities of the United States in the production of fine cotton yarn and second in the number of spindles. It has a state textile school. It was settled in 1652, incorporated in 1787, and chartered as a city in 1847. On September 5, 1778, it was attacked by a British fleet, captured and almost destroyed.

New Britain, Connecticut (Hartford Co.), has extensive manufactures of stamped ware, hardware, knit goods, and cutlery, and is the seat of a state normal school and other educational institutions. It was settled in 1687 and granted a city charter in 1871.

New Brunswick, New Jersey (c. h. Middlesex Co.), is the seat of Rutgers College, a state agricultural and mechanical college, and other educational institutions. It has extensive manufactures of rubber, wall-paper, cigars, etc. It was settled in 1681 and chartered as a city in 1784. It was the scene of much of the trouble during the Revolutionary War, and was occupied by the British during the winter of 1776-7.

Newburgh, New York (Orange Co.), has extensive manufactures of cotton and woollen goods, silk, powder, paper, carpet, flour, lumber, and cigars. It has shipyards and extensive coal, brick and lumber-yards. Large quantities of coal from Pennsylvania are brought here to be loaded on coasting vessels and barges. The Hasbrouck Mansion, which was Washington's headquarters from 1782-3 and dates in part from 1750, contains interesting relics; it was here that Washington was offered the title of king by the officers of the army. In the ground surrounding this building is the so-called Tower of Victory with a statue of Washington. The city was incorporated in 1865.

Newburyport, Massachusetts (c. h. Essex Co.), has boot and shoe factories, cotton factories, hat shops, etc. It was settled in 1635 and chartered as a city in 1851.

Newcastle, England (Northumberland), is a port and coaling station near the mouth of the Tyne. Has large ship-building yards, engineering and steel-works, locomotive works, glass-works, and other extensive industries. It is the largest coal market in the world. It is the seat of a bishop, and the Church of St. Nicholas, dating from the 14th century, is now the cathedral. The Norman castle, built in 1080 and rebuilt by Henry II., was long a noted stronghold. Newcastle was a Roman and a Saxon town; was taken by the Scots in 1640 and 1644; and long held an important place in border warfare.

Newcastle, New South Wales, Australia, is a port with an extensive export trade in coal, wool, and frozen meats.

New Castle, Pennsylvania (c. h. Lawrence Co.), is a trade center in a productive agricultural region, and in the vicinity are extensive coal-fields and deposits of iron, sandstone, limestone, and fire-clay. The chief manufactures are glass, iron, flour, paper, agricultural implements, stoves, nails, tin-plate, and lumber. It was settled in 1712 and received its city charter in 1869.

New Guatemala, cap. Guatemala, Central America, manufactures muslins, cotton yarns, silver articles, and embroidery, and is the center of the trade of the entire republic. It has most of the government offices, a museum, a cathedral, and a university.

New Haven, Connecticut (c. h. New Haven Co.), is the largest city of Connecticut, and the seat of Yale University, attended by over 3,000 students and having, besides the academic department, schools of science, theology, medicine, law, forestry, music, and fine arts. A state normal school, a manual training school, and other educational institutions are located here. It has extensive manufactures of clocks, watches, hardware, firearms, ammunition, carriages, engines, automobiles, rubber goods, etc. New Haven was settled in 1638 and incorporated as a city in 1784.

New London, Connecticut (c. h. New London Co.), is a port on the Thames River, three miles from its entrance into Long Island Sound. It has large manufacturing of silk, woollen goods, furniture, foundry and machine-shop products, and shipyards. A small government naval station is near by. It was settled in 1646 and incorporated in 1784. On September 6, 1781, a British force under Benedict Arnold attacked the town, destroyed the wharves and many of the buildings, and killed a number of the people.

New Orleans, Louisiana (c. h. Orleans Parish), is the largest city of the Southern States, the second largest cotton market in the world, and ranks next to New York City in value of exports. It is a port and coaling station on the Mississippi River, 107 miles from its mouth. It is the outlet of the greatest agricultural valley in the world and exports large quantities of cotton, sugar, molasses, rice, pork, corn, wool, timber, hides, and tobacco. It manufactures extensively cottonseed oil, machinery, timber products, flour, rice, tobacco, and sugar. It is the seat of Tulane University, an important and well-equipped institution with nearly 2,000 students, and of other educational institutions. It has an archiepiscopal palace dating from 1737. The Cabildo, now occupied by the state Supreme Court, was erected in 1795 and was formerly the government building; here the cession of Louisiana from France to the United States took place in 1803. A United States mint and a marine hospital are located here. A national cemetery nearby contains 12,000 graves of Union soldiers of the Civil War. New Orleans was settled in 1718, and in 1726, it was made the capital of the French colony of Louisiana, which then included nearly all of the Mississippi Valley. It was incorporated as a city in 1804. When, in 1812, Louisiana was admitted to the Union as a state, this city was its capital and remained such until 1852. In 1865-80 it was again the state capital. On January 8, 1815, occurred the battle in which Gen. Andrew Jackson defeated the British army under Gen. Pakenham. Soon after the secession of Louisiana from the Union and the establishment of the Confederate government, New Orleans was blockaded by the Federal fleet under Farragut and was captured in April, 1862.

Newport, England (Monmouth), has manufactures of steam-engines, railway material, agricultural implements, glass, pottery, chemical manures, shipbuilding, and brewing. Coal, iron, and steel are exported. It is an ancient city, and many Roman remains have been discovered here.

Newport, Kentucky (c. h. Campbell Co.), is a residential suburb of Cincinnati, and has manufactures of cigar boxes, iron, carriages, watch-cases, and furniture. Fort Thomas, a government military post, is nearby.

Newport, Rhode Island (c. h. Newport Co.), is a port and famous summer resort on Narragansett Bay. It is a favorite watering-place of people of great wealth who have here many costly summer residences. Overlooking and guarding the harbor are Fort Greble and Fort Adam, and a United States torpedo station, war college, and naval hospital are near by. It has a large trade in fish. Newport was settled in 1639 by William Coddington and other dissenters from the Puritan church of Massachusetts, and a century later had about 5,000 inhabitants. In 1770 Newport was surpassed by Boston only in the extent of its trade, which was considerably greater than that of New York. It suffered greatly during the Revolution, however, and never recovered its commercial importance, so that in 1870 its population was no larger than in 1770. During part of the Revolutionary struggle Newport was occupied by the French allies of the Americans, who were so favorably impressed with Rhode Island, that they sought to have it ceded to France.

Newport News, Virginia (Warwick Co.), is a port on Hampton Roads and an important railroad terminal. It has an extensive export trade in grain, a large shipbuilding plant, and other industries.

New Rochelle, New York (Westchester Co.), is a residential suburb of New York, settled in 1687 by Huguenots and named after La Rochelle, France.

Newton, Massachusetts (Middlesex Co.), is a suburb of Boston, and has manufactures of boots and shoes, silk-mills, rubber works, printing works, worsted mills, etc. It has a theological seminary and other institutions of learning. It was settled in 1631 and was incorporated in 1688 under the name of New Cambridge, which name it retained until 1692. The city charter was granted in 1873.

New Westminster, British Columbia, Canada, is a fresh water port on the Fraser river, 13 miles from the Strait of Georgia and is a center of lumbering, farming and fishing industries. Its industries include large sawmills, many fish canneries, iron works, railway car building works, etc.

New York, New York (c. h. New York Co.), is the largest city of the state and of the United States, the second largest city of the world, a port and coaling station, and the chief portal of the foreign commerce of the United States. It is a great manufacturing as well as trading center, with extensive manufactures of sugar, tobacco, clothing, brass and copper, chemicals, patent medicines, iron and steel, boats and sails, glass and glassware, india-rubber and leather products, instruments for scientific purposes, gold and silver wares, malt liquors and distilled spirits, products of cotton, wool, and wood. It has large printing, lithographing, engraving, and map-making works, in which industries New York holds the first place in America. It is noted for its magnificent public and commercial buildings, especially for those of extraordinary height called "sky-scrapers." Among its prominent buildings are the Custom-House, with its splendid sculptured groups emblematic of the continents, a large quadrangular granite building in the French Renaissance style, erected in 1902-7, and occupying the site of Fort Amsterdam; the Stock Exchange, the Produce Exchange, the United States Sub-Treasury, the Singer Building, the Metropolitan Life Building, the Hudson Terminal Building, the City Hall, the Hall of Records, and the Appellate Court-House. Trinity Church, a handsome Gothic edifice of brownstone, dates from 1839 and occupies the site of a church of 1696. Grace Church, with its rectory, chantry, and church-house, forms, perhaps, the most attractive ecclesiastical group on the continent. St. Patrick's Cathedral, a white marble building in the decorated Gothic style, is doubtless the most important church edifice in the United States. It was designed by James Renwick and erected in 1850-79 at a cost of $3,500,000. The Cathedral of St. John the Divine, designed by Heins and La Farge, the corner-stone of which was laid in 1892, is in course of construction and is intended to be the largest and most important cathedral of the Episcopal church. The Metropolitan opera-house is a large and handsome building. New York is the seat of Columbia University, attended by upwards of 5,000 students and ranking with the foremost universities of America; it was founded in 1754 as King's College; in 1890, the institution was reorganized on a broad university basis and now consists of Columbia College proper for men, Barnard College for women, and schools of law, medicine, mines, engineering, chemistry, architecture, music and design, education (teachers' college), pharmacy, political science, philosophy, and pure science. Its library contains 427,000 volumes. Among the other educational institutions are the Normal College, the Union Theological Seminary, the College of the City of New York, attended by 4,000 students, and New York University, also attended by 4,000 students. The Metropolitan Museum of Art contains, perhaps, the foremost collection of paintings, antiquities, and statuary in the western hemisphere. The American Museum of Natural History is the most important institution of its kind in America, and its buildings, planned to cover an entire city block of 18 acres, house one of the largest and most interesting collections of the kind in the world. The New York Public Library contains over 1,000,000 volumes and over 400,000 pamphlets. The first settlement of Manhattan Island was made by the Dutch in 1624 and the little town was christened Amsterdam, which, by 1650, had about 1,000 inhabitants. In 1664 the town was seized during a time of peace by the English, and, though retaken by the Dutch in 1673, it passed permanently into English possession by a treaty in the following year. The name of the town was then changed to New York in honor of the Duke of York. In 1765 delegates from nine of the thirteen colonies met in New York to protest against the Stamp Act and to assert the doctrine of no taxation without representation, and the first actual bloodshed of the Revolution took place here in 1770. The town was occupied by Washington in 1776 but, after the battles of Long Island and Harlem Heights, the Americans retired, and New York became the British headquarters for seven years. The British troops evacuated the city on November 25, 1783. From 1785 to 1790 New York was the seat of the Federal government, and it was the state capital down to 1797. In 1807 the first steamboat was put on the Hudson River and in 1825 a great impulse was given to the city's commerce by the opening of the Erie Canal. In July, 1863, the opposition in New York to the draft act culminated in a riot, which lasted three days, cost over 1,000 lives, and destroyed property worth about $1,500,000. In March, 1888, New York was visited by a terrible blizzard. In 1890 a Commission was appointed by the state legislature to inquire into the expediency of the consolidation of New York with Brooklyn and other contiguous towns and cities, and in 1896 the act to make this consolidation became a law. In 1897 the charter of Greater New York was finally passed. In 1909 New York was connected with New Jersey by underground tunnels.

Nezhin, Russia (Chernigof), is a trade center in a tobacco growing district.

Niagara Falls, New York (Niagara Co.), is famous on account of the Falls, one of the great scenic wonders of the world, and is visited annually by thousands of tourists. The power of the falls is utilized for extensive manufactures of paper, flour, cereals, electrochemical products, machinery, lumber products, etc.

Niagara Falls, Ontario, Canada, is a popular summer resort and manufacturing center. Power is supplied by natural gas and electric generating plants. Its industries include cereal foods, carborundum, wire chain, etc.

Nice, France (cap. Alpes-Maritimes), is one of the largest winter health resorts of the Riviera, picturesquely situated at the foot of the Maritime Alps. It exports wine and liqueurs, olive-oil, glass, pottery, fruits, and soap, and manufactures art pottery and olive-wood inlay work. It is the birthplace of Garibaldi.

Niigata, Japan (cap. Niigata), manufactures coarse lacquer ware, and there are coal and petroleum deposits in the vicinity.

Nijmegen, Netherlands (Gelderland), produces tobacco, metal wares, and beer. The principal church (1272) contains a fine monument to Catherine of Bourbon. Here treaties of peace were signed between Spain, France, Austria, and the Netherlands (1678-9).

Nikolai, Russia (Cherson), is a fortified port and naval station on the Bug River, 20 miles from its mouth. It has an Orthodox cathedral, Admiralty buildings, an observatory (1821), and a school of navigation. The dock-yards and naval arsenal are important, and there are industries of rope, tallow, tobacco, and candies. It is, with Sevastopol, the principal naval station of Russia on the Black Sea.

Nîmes, France (cap. Gard), manufactures shawls, carpets, silks, wine, and brandy. It is an episcopal see, and possesses a modern cathedral. Nîmes is noted for its Roman antiquities, among which are the amphitheater, in excellent preservation; the Maison Carrée one of the finest Corinthian temples of the Roman period, now a museum; and an aqueduct. The town was the birthplace of the historian Guizot (1787) and of the novelist Daudet (1840).

Ningpo, China (Chehkiang), is a treaty port with large exports of rice, cotton, varnish, oils, sepias, and bamboo. It is noted for its wood-carving and embroideries, and is the meeting-place of large fishing fleets.

Nissa, Servia, is a fortified city and the seat of a bishop. It was the birthplace of Constantine the Great, and was long a bone of contention between Hungarians and Turks.

Niuchwang, China (Shengking), is a treaty port in South Manchuria, on the Liao River, 25 miles from its mouth. Exports beans and bean-cake, castor-oil, tobacco, silk, etc.

Nizhni Novgorod, Russia (cap. Nizhni Novgorod), is a port on the Volga and the seat of one of the greatest European fairs, held annually, from July to September, to which some 400,000 visitors and traders resort. In the Kremlin are the cathedrals of the Transfiguration (founded in 1227) and of the archangel Michael (founded in 1222), the governor's palace, the tower of Prince Dmitri (1374, rebuilt in 1869), the tower of the Czar Ivan III. (1500), the arsenal, a military cadet school, and the law-courts. The principal industrial establishments are flour-mills, metal foundries, machine-works, and distilleries. Nizhni Novgorod was founded in 1212, and became the capital of a separate principality in 1350. It was sacked by the Tartars in 1377, and united to Moscow in 1392.

Nizhni Tagilsk, Russia (Perm), is a mining and iron and steel manufacturing city. Iron, copper, gold, and platinum are found in the vicinity.

Nome, Alaska, is the center of an important mining district on Seward Peninsula, and, next to Fairbanks, is the largest place in Alaska. In 1898 gold was discovered here in the beach sands of the coast and shortly afterwards rich placer deposits in the interior were found.

Nordhausen, Germany (Prussia), has distilleries, and manufactures of tobacco, cigars, chicory, sugar, leather, wall-paper, and machinery.

Norfolk, Virginia (Norfolk Co.), is the second largest city of Virginia, also a port and coaling station, situated on an arm of the Chesapeake Bay. It is an important railroad and steamship terminus, and has an extensive trade in lumber, coal, grain, cotton peanuts, oysters, fruit, and vegetables. The manufacturing industries include cotton knitting mills, cotton compress mills, fertilizer factories, shipyards, tobacco and sugar factories, iron-foundries, machine-shops, steel-works, lumber mills, silk-mills, etc. It was settled in 1608. The Norfolk navy yard, located at Portsmouth, on the opposite side of the Elizabeth River, is one of the largest naval stations in the United States. It was bombarded and nearly destroyed by the British on Jan. 1, 1776. Norfolk was incorporated as a borough in 1736 and chartered as a city in 1845.

Norristown, Pennsylvania (c. h. Montgomery Co.), is a manufacturing center in a rich agricultural section. It has manufactures of knitting-machines, hosiery, glass, iron, wire, agricultural implements, furniture, etc. Valley Forge and other places of historical interest are in the vicinity. It was settled in about 1688 and incorporated as a borough in 1812.

Norrköping, Sweden (Oster Gotland), is a port with a good harbor, situated at the head of Bräcken Bay. It manufactures cottons, paper, tapestries, and sugar, and has ship-building yards.

North Adams, Massachusetts (Berkshire Co.), has extensive manufactures of cotton and woollen goods, boots and shoes, cigars, etc. It is the seat of a state normal school, and was settled in 1765.

Northampton, England (cap. Northampton), is one of the oldest towns in the country, and has several ancient interesting churches, such as St. Sepulchre's (12th century), one of the few round churches still remaining in England, and St. Peter's, a fine example of Norman architecture. It is the center of the boot and shoe manufacture of England.

Northampton, Massachusetts (c. h. Hampshire Co.), is a trade center in an active agricultural section, and has extensive manufacturing and commercial interests. A state asylum for the insane, Smith College, and a classical school for girls are located here. The "Home Culture Club", founded by George W. Cable and endowed by Andrew Carnegie, gives instruction in household arts and amusements. The city was settled in 1654.

North Tonawanda, New York (Niagara Co.), is a manufacturing suburb of Buffalo. It has large lumber yards and manufactories of steam-pumps, merry-go-rounds, pig-iron, and lumber products.

North Yakima, Washington (c. h. Yakima Co.), is the largest city of central Washington and the trade center of the rich Yakima Valley, an agricultural region largely under irrigation. It has a large trade in fruits, grains and agricultural produce. Its industries are chiefly canneries, flour-mills, and wood-working establishments.

Norwich, Connecticut (c. h. New London Co.), is at the head of navigation of the Thames River, about 14 miles from Long Island Sound. Its exceptional water-power has contributed to extensive development of manufacturing industries. The chief manufactures are firearms, leather, silk fabrics, cotton and woollen goods, machinery, stoves, iron products, and furniture. A state armory and a state insane hospital are located here.

Norwich, England (cap. Norfolk), has manufactures of boots and shoes, ready-made clothing, and agricultural implements, iron-foundries, tanneries, breweries, and flour-mills, as well as mustard, starch, and vinegar works. The cathedral begun in 1096 is said to preserve its Norman plan with less alteration than any other English cathedral. The largest church, St. Peter Mancroft, is a handsome 15th century edifice; St. Andrew's was built in 1506; St. Michael Coslany is an example of fine flint and stone work; St. Andrew's Hall, a handsome Gothic structure, was formerly the nave of the Blackfriars monastery church. Norwich was a British and Roman town; was burned by Sweyn; became the seat of the bishopric of East Anglia in 1094; received a colony of Flemish weavers in the 14th century and became an important center for cloth manufactures. It was one of the leading towns in England in the 17th century.

Nottingham, England (cap. Nottingham), is the center of the English lace and hosiery manufacture, and has also manufactories of silk, leather, and machinery. It has a castle, built by William the Conqueror, which contains now a museum and an art gallery, a University College, and a very large marketplace. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop. Nottingham was one of the Five Boroughs of the Danel, and was reconquered by Edward the Elder. Here Mortimer and Queen Isabella were captured in 1330. Charles I. raised his standard here, in 1642, at the beginning of the civil war.

Novara, Italy (cap. Novara), has manufactures of silks, cottons, and linen. It has several fine churches, notably a Romanesque cathedral, dating from the 14th century and rebuilt in 1870. The Italian army was totally defeated here by the Austrians under Radetsky in 1849.

Novgorod, Russia (cap. Novgorod), is one of the oldest, and in mediæval times was one of the largest cities of Russia. It was one of the leading commercial centers of Europe, and was a member of the Hanseatic League. It was the capital of an independent state, but was brought under the dominion of Moscow about 1478, and was sacked by Ivan the Terrible in 1570. Its commercial importance has been entirely destroyed by the foundation of St. Petersburg, and by the building of railroads. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop. The Cathedral of St. Sophia, within the walls of the highly picturesque Kremlin, or citadel, was built in the middle of the 11th century by workmen from Constantinople; and, despite several restorations, it retains in great measure its Byzantine character.

Novocherkassk, Russia (cap. Don Cossacks), has extensive vineyards, fisheries, and flour-mills. An Orthodox cathedral has been building since 1893; the library and museum illustrate the history of the Don Cossacks. There are coal-mines in the vicinity.

Nuka, Russia (Elizavetpol), has silk raising and spinning interests.

Nuremberg, Germany (Bavaria), is one of the richest towns on the continent in mediæval buildings and works of art, and still retains its ancient walls and moat. The churches are full of priceless paintings, statuary, and carvings. Of its many famous collections the Germanic museum is the most valuable, and a remarkable library, dating from 1445, is preserved in the old Dominican monastery. The castle, dating from 1050, was enlarged by Frederick Barbarossa, and has served as residence for many German emperors. The principal industries are the manufacture of toys, optical and other scientific instruments, cycles, automobiles, bronzes, and the brewing of beer. Nuremberg was made a free city in 1219, and retained its independence till 1803, when Napoleon I. bestowed it upon the king of Bavaria.

Nyireghyaza, Hungary, has manufactures of soda, saltpeter, and matches, and there are large vineyards in the neighborhood.

Oakland, California (c. h. Alameda Co.), is situated on the east shore of San Francisco Bay, and is connected with San Francisco by ferries. Its harbor accommodates the largest ocean vessels and the city has 15 miles of water frontage. High-tide jetties, forming the harbor entrance, are built of rubble stone. Its excellent facilities for transportation are greatly increasing the amount of its shipments each year, and it is the commercial center of a large agricultural region. The principal industrial establishments are iron-works, ship-building works, canneries, flour-mills, planing-mills, and lumber-yards. It has numerous educational institutions, including a Baptist college, a Roman Catholic academy, etc.

Oaxaca, Mexico (cap. Oaxaca), has sugar-mills, breweries, and fiber factories. It has handsome churches and other public buildings. Near the city stood Uaxuayca, the ancient capital of the Zapotecs.

Oberhausen, Germany (Prussia), is the center of a mining district, and has foundries, chemical works, and porcelain and glass factories.

Odenburg, Hungary, manufactures sugar, preserved fruit, agricultural implements, etc.

Odense, Denmark (cap. Fünen), exports butter, cheese, hides, bacon, corn, and molasses. It is the seat of a bishop and contains the churches of St. Knud (11th century) and Our Lady (12th century). It was the birthplace of Hans Andersen.

Odessa, Russia (Cherson), is a coaling station, the chief seaport and commercial center of southern Russia, and one of the largest cities of the realm. It is especially noted for its export of grain; but has also large exports of sugar, flour, wool, hides, flax, tallow, caviare, fish, and cattle. It has a university with a good library and a museum; a cathedral; a museum of antiquities, which contains many interesting Greek and Scythian remains, and various educational and scientific institutions. It was founded in 1794 and was bombarded by the English and French forces in 1854.

Offenbach, Germany (Hesse), is a great industrial center, and exports leather goods, carriages, chemicals, soap, carpets, varnish, etc.

Ogden, Utah (c. h. Weber Co.), is an important railroad center in a fertile agricultural region and in the vicinity of productive mines. The chief industrial establishments are canneries, beet sugar factories, and woollen mills. A state industrial school, a state institution for the deaf, dumb, and blind, a Mormon academy, and a Catholic academy are located here. It was founded in 1848, and, in 1850, under the direction of Brigham Young, was laid out as a city.

Ogdensburg, New York (St. Lawrence Co.), is a port of entry on the St. Lawrence River and is connected by ferry with Prescott, Ontario. It is at the foot of deep water navigation of the Great Lakes and has excellent transportation facilities. Shipping and wholesale dealing in lumber, grain, and coal are the most prominent industries. It also has manufactories of silk, flour, gloves, lumber, and lumber products. A state armory and a state hospital for the insane are located here.

Oil City, Pennsylvania (Venango Co.), is a trade center in the midst of the most productive oil fields of Pennsylvania, and many of its industries are connected with the marketing of petroleum. On June 5, 1892, a terrible fire swept over the city, caused by burning oil coming down Oil Creek from Titusville, and more than 100 persons were killed, while property exceeding $1,000,000 in value was destroyed.

Okayama, Japan (cap. Okayama), contains an important mission and is noted for its castle and superb gardens.

Oklahoma, Oklahoma (c. h. Oklahoma Co.), is the largest city of Oklahoma and an important trade center in a rich agricultural region. The chief manufacturing establishments are cotton-mills, flour-mills, iron-works, woodworking shops, etc. It has an extensive trade in grain, cotton, and live stock, and is the seat of the Epworth University, a college for girls, and the Oklahoma Military Institute. It was settled on April 22, 1889, when, by proclamation, the country was declared open for settlement.

Oldenburg, Germany (cap. Oldenburg), exports leather goods, soap, machinery, and musical instruments.

Oldham, England (Lancashire), is the chief center of the cotton-spinning industry, over 12,000,000 spindles being employed, more than one-fourth of the total for Lancashire and neighboring district. The fabrics produced include velvets and velveteens, fustians, sheetings, nankeens, and sateens. There are also large engineering works. In the district are important collieries.

Olean, New York (Cattaraugus Co.), is a trade center in a fertile agricultural region and near the Pennsylvania oil fields. It has a large distributing trade in petroleum, which is brought by pipe lines from the oil fields south of the city. The chief manufacturing establishments are lumber mills, tanneries, oil refineries, glass factories, wagon and carriage factories, brick-yards, flour-mills, and furniture factories. A state armory is located here. It was settled in 1804.

Olmütz, Austria (Moravia), manufactures malt, beer, sugar, starch, and alcohol. It is an archiepiscopal see and has interesting churches and a university founded in 1581. Lafayette was imprisoned here in 1794, and Ferdinand I. here resigned the crown to his nephew in 1848.

Olympia, cap. Washington (c. h. Thurston Co.), is a port of entry at the head of navigation of Puget Sound. It has fishery interests and a large trade in fruit, agricultural produce, etc. The State Capitol is an imposing structure built of native sandstone.

Omaha, Nebraska (c. h. Douglas Co.), is the largest city of the state and one of the most important railroad centers of the middle west. Among the important industries are extensive breweries and distilleries, smelting and refining works. It has an extensive trade in wheat and corn and is an important cattle and hog market. Its wholesale and jobbing trade in merchandise extends over a large area. The city owes its commercial importance to its position as one of the chief gateways to the west, and has grown rapidly since its foundation in 1854. Omaha is the headquarters of the military department of the Missouri, and Fort Omaha, just north of the city, is the chief signal-service, balloon, and "wireless" experimental station of the United States army.

Omdurman, Egypt (Sudan), was the Dervish capital and here, on Sept. 2, 1898, the Anglo-Egyptian troops, under Lord Kitchener, defeated the Dervishes, completely destroying the Mahdi's power.

Omsk, Russia (cap. Akmolinsk), is a fortified town and contains a cathedral and governor-general's palace. Its industries include brick and pottery works, breweries and distilleries, tobacco, oil, and soap manufactures.

Onomichi, Japan (Hiroshima), is a port on the Inland Sea and has manufactures of fancy mats. It has two interesting old temples.

Oporto, Portugal (cap. Oporto), is the second city of the country and the center of the port wine trade. It is also a great manufacturing center, the chief industries being the spinning and weaving of cotton, woollen, and silk, distilling, sugar-refining, and tanning. There is an ancient Gothic cathedral, modernized in the 18th century, and an interesting municipal museum with many notable paintings.

Oppeln, Germany (Prussia), exports leather goods, cement, wood, and cattle.

Oran, Algeria, is a fortified seaport and coaling station, with exports of esparto-grass, iron ore, grain, wool, hides, and wine, most of the trade being with the Spanish coast. Originally built by the Moors, Oran was captured by the Spaniards in 1509 and held by them, with a break of twenty-four years, till 1792. It came into the possession of France in 1830.

Orange, New Jersey (Essex Co.), is a residential suburb of New York, which has extensive hat manufacturing and is the site of the Edison laboratory. It was settled in 1666.

Orebro, Sweden (cap. Orebro), has a trade in mining products. At Orebro in 1529, Lutheranism was established as the state religion.

Orel, Russia (cap. Orel), has manufactures of candles, ropes, oil, and flour; and also distilleries, breweries, brick works, and tobacco factories. Here Turgenev was born.

Orenburg, Russia (cap. Orenburg), has an extensive trade with Central Asia, and exports frozen meat, tallow, skins, wool, butter, and cheese. Between June and November caravans arrive from all parts of Russian Central Asia and West Siberia. It contains military schools, an Orthodox seminary, and an arsenal.

Orihuela, Spain (Alicante), has silk and other textile industries.

Orizaba, Mexico (Vera Cruz), is the trading center of a rich sugar region, and has manufactures of flour, tobacco, and textiles.

Orleans, France (cap. Loiret), is an important railroad and commercial center, and has also small industries of cottons, linen, and leather. It contains a late-Gothic cathedral built in 1601; a city hall, a museum (15th century); and the houses of Joan of Arc and of Agnes Sorel. It was besieged in 1428-9 by the English, but was delivered by Joan of Arc, who is therefore called the Maid of Orleans.

Oruro, Bolivia, has mines of silver and tin. Altitude 12,117 feet.

Osaka, Japan (cap. Osaka), has cotton spinning, glass and iron-works, and ship-building. Foreign trade has been allowed since 1868. Its temples and castle (1583) are famous, and it has an arsenal and a mint.

Osh, Russia in Asia (Ferghana), has on the west Takht-i-Suleiman, or the "Throne of Solomon", a prominent rock, famous in Oriental legend, and an object of pilgrimage to Moslems of Central Asia.

Oshkosh, Wisconsin (c. h. Winnebago Co.), is a trade center in a region having extensive lumbering interests. The chief manufactures are lumber and lumber products, grass twine, and agricultural implements. It is the seat of a state hospital for the insane and a state normal school. It was settled in 1836.

Oskaloosa, Iowa (c. h. Mahaska Co.), is a trade center in a fertile agricultural region in which stock-raising receives much attention. The chief industries are flour- and grist-milling, and the manufacture of vitrified brick, wagons, iron and brass goods, and woollen goods. It has a large meat-packing plant. In the vicinity are large coal-fields and deposits of limestone and fire-clay. Penn College, opened in 1873 by the Society of Friends, and the Oskaloosa College, under the auspices of the Disciples of Christ, are located here.

Osnabruck, Germany (Prussia), has a fine cathedral and a 14th-century Gothic church. It manufactures cigars, chemicals, nails, machinery, and musical instruments.

Ostend, Belgium (West Flanders), is a port, coaling station and a famous seaside resort. Public buildings include the handsome casino, royal chalet, town hall, and the fine hotels facing the sea. The fisheries are important, and there are large oyster parks. It exports rabbits to England.

Oswego, New York (c. h. Oswego Co.), is a port of entry and has an extensive lake trade. It has a large starch factory, machine-shops for oil-well supplies, boiler and engine works, knitting mills, car spring works, match factories, etc. A state arsenal and a state normal and training school are located here. It was founded in 1724 as a trading post and military station, and was chartered as a city in 1848.

Otaru, Japan (Hokkaido), is a seaport and a center for herring-fishing.

Otsu, Japan (cap. Shiga), was anciently a capital of the mikados and has a citadel, palaces, and wide streets. It manufactures especially the abacus (or calculating-frame). On May 11, 1891, it was the scene of an attempt on the life of Nicholas II. of Russia (then Czarewitch).

Ottawa, Illinois (c. h. LaSalle Co.), is a trade center in a productive agricultural region, in which are extensive deposits of fire-clay, glass sand, and bituminous coal. It has extensive glass-factories, potteries, agricultural implement shops, carriage factories, organ and piano factories, etc. A Lutheran college and a Roman Catholic college are located here.

Ottawa, Ontario, cap. Canada, is not only a most important town socially and politically, but is the center of a great lumber trade, due to its position on the Ottawa River, which brings down logs from the interior. This river forms the great Chaudière Falls at Ottawa, and, with its branches, the rapidly flowing Gatineau and Rideau rivers, furnishes motive power for many lumber- and flour-mills, and for factories in which agricultural implements, machinery, ironware, bricks, etc., are made. The very handsome Parliamentary buildings, including the circular library, stand in spacious grounds on a bluff overlooking the river, and crowned by the fine Victoria Tower (180 ft.). Rideau Hall, the governor-general's residence, two cathedrals, the national art gallery, and the museum of the Geological Survey, are noteworthy buildings. There are various educational institutions, including the Ottawa University and a normal school. The city was founded under the name of Bytown in 1829, but was not incorporated until 1854, when its name was changed to Ottawa. In 1858 it was selected by Queen Victoria as the capital of the two Canadas.

Ottumwa, Iowa (c. h. Wapello Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural region, in which there are extensive coal-fields. It has good water-power, which, combined with the abundance of coal, has developed extensive manufacturing industries. The chief industrial establishments are mining and agricultural implement works, foundries, iron-works, pork-packing plant, flour-mills, etc. It was settled in 1849.

Ouro Preto, Brazil (Minas Geraes), has mines of iron, manganese, asbestos, and gold near by. A school of mines is located here.

Oviedo, Spain (cap. Oviedo), was the ancient capital of Asturias, and has an ancient cathedral, where some of the kings of Asturias are buried. It has a university, a national factory of arms, and metallurgical industries.

Owensboro, Kentucky (c. h. Daviess Co.), is a trade center in a farming and stock-raising region, and there are coal and iron fields near by. It has an extensive river trade. The chief manufactures are tobacco products, cellulose, whisky, brandy, brick and tile, and iron products.

Owen Sound, Ontario, Canada, is a port at the head of Owen Sound, an inlet of Georgian Bay. It has cement works, furniture factories, tanneries, etc.

Oxford, England (cap. Oxford), is chiefly noted as the seat of Oxford University, which dates from the 12th century and comprises 21 colleges. Among Oxford's numerous buildings are All Souls College (founded 1437); the Ashmolean Museum (1682); Balliol College (c. 1268); the Bodleian Library (1602; 500,000 books, 30,000 MSS.); Brasenose College (1509); Christ Church College (1525-46; its chapel, the "cathedral", dating from 1120 and onwards); the Clarendon Building (1712-30, till 1830 the University Press); Corpus Christi College (1516); the Divinity Schools (1445-80); the Examination Schools (1882); Exeter College (1314); Hertford College (1874); the Indian Institute (1884); Jesus College (1571; still partly Welsh); Keble College (1870); Lincoln College (1429); Magdalen College (1458); Manchester College (1893); Mansfield College (1886); the Martyrs' Memorial (1841); St. Mary's Church (1300-1488), with a spire 180 ft. high; Merton College (1264); the New Museum (1856-60); New College (1379); Oriel College (1326); Pembroke College (1624); Queen's College (1340); the domed Radcliffe Library (1749; since 1861 a reading-room for the Bodleian); the Radcliffe Observatory (1795); St. John's College (1555); the Sheldonian Theatre (1669; in which "Commemoration" is held); the Taylor Institution (1843); Trinity College (1554); the Union Society (1823; new building 1859); University College (1249); the University Press (1830); Wadham College (1613); and Worcester College (1714). To these may be added Somerville Hall (1879), Lady Margaret Hall, and St. Hugh's Hall, all for women. The authentic annals of Oxford begin in 912, when it was annexed by Edward the Elder, king of the West Saxons. It was a place of strategical importance and one of the political centers in the middle ages; it was a meeting-place of the witenagemot. Harold Harefoot was proclaimed king there in 1036, and died there in 1039. The population in the time of Edward the Confessor is estimated at 3,000; in 1086 it was only 1,700. The castle was besieged by Stephen in 1141-42, Matilda escaping then over the frozen river. The city was the Royalist headquarters in the Civil War, and was taken by Parliamentarians under Fairfax in 1646. Oxford is the seat of an Anglican bishop.

Pachuca, Mexico (-cap. Hidalgo), has rich silver mines and a meteorological observatory.

Padang, Sumatra, is a seaport with large export trade in coffee, spices, rubber, tobacco, hides, and copra.

Padua, Italy (cap. Padua), is the seat of a bishop, and has a cathedral (16th century), with a collection of valuable miniatures. The Palazzo della Ragione was built as law-courts (1172-1219); and the university, especially famous in the 13th century, was founded in 1222. Padua, the ancient Patavium, was the birthplace of Livy, and an important Roman commercial center.

Paducah, Kentucky (c. h. McCracken Co.), has extensive manufactures of pig iron, lumber products, stoneware, pottery, saddles, tobacco products, knifegoods, etc. It has a large ore-milling plant and in the vicinity are deposits of fire-clay, glass sand, zinc, etc. It was settled in 1821.

Paisley, Scotland (cap. Renfrew), has manufactures of cotton thread, carpets, textiles, chemicals, corn-flour, starch, and preserves, engineering and electric works, and ship-building. The scholastic buildings include the John Neilson Educational Institution (1852) and the technical school (1899). There was here a Cluniac priory, raised to an abbey (1219), burnt by the English (1307), and rebuilt between 1445-1525. The present edifice formed the nave of the sanctuary, which was restored in 1902.

Pakhoi, China (Kwangtung), is a treaty port, opened to foreign trade in 1876, and has large exports of indigo.

Palembang, Sumatra (cap. Palembang), is a port on the Palembang River, 60 miles from the sea. It is a health-recruiting station for the troops of the Dutch East Indies. It contains a fine mosque (1740), and the ancient palace and tombs of the former native dynasty. Cotton, sago, pepper, honey, rattans, dyewoods, and gutta-percha are exported.

Palermo, Italy (cap. Palermo), is a seaport, and the principal town of Sicily. It is the seat of an archbishop, and has a magnificent cathedral in the Gothic style, begun in 1180, which contains the tombs of Roger the Norman and Emperor Frederick II. It has a university, founded in the 14th century; a famous observatory, located in the royal palace; and large barracks, which occupy the former Palazzo Sclafani. The principal exports are olive-oil, wines, sulphur, and fruits. Palermo is a very ancient town, and was founded by the Phœnicians. It was occupied by the Romans in 254 B. C. and became one of their principal naval stations.

Palestine, Texas (c. h. Anderson Co.), is a trade center in a rich agricultural region, of which cotton is the leading product. It has cotton gins, lumber mills, machine shops, etc.

Palma, Spain (cap. Balearic Islands), is a fortified seaport, and has manufactures of flour, soap, starch, alcohol, liqueurs, glass, and leather, as well as ship-building yards and exports of fruit, wine, and olive-oil. It is the seat of a bishop, and has a fine cathedral in the Gothic style. It has a seminary for priests, a normal school, a school for painting, and a fine picture gallery.

Pamplona, Colombia, is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop. It has breweries and match factories.

Pamplona, Spain (cap. Navarra), is a strongly fortified town, and has a cathedral dating from the middle ages. It has manufactures of paper, leather, etc.

Panama, cap. Panama, is a port and coaling station, and exports pearls, mother-of-pearl, rubber, and mahogany. It has a large transit trade. The original Panama, founded in 1518, lay 4½ miles to the northeast, and was destroyed in 1671 by the buccaneer Morgan. The present town dates from 1673. Its most noteworthy sights are the cathedral, the bishop's palace, and a few famous ruins.

Pantin, France (Seine), is an industrial suburb of Paris, and has glass-works, sugar-refineries, and railway shops.

Paoting, China (cap. Chili), is a trade center, which figured prominently in the Boxer insurrection of 1900, and was captured by the French.

Pará, Brazil (cap. Para), also called Belem, is a port on the estuary of the Para River, 85 miles from the Atlantic Ocean, and forms the principal entrance for ships into the Amazon River. It is, therefore, a great trading center, and has large exports of rubber, cocoa, sugar, coffee, cinchona, and hides. Its exports of rubber exceed that of any other port in the world. Para is the seat of a bishop, and has a cathedral dating from 1720. It has a museum, botanical gardens, a fine theater, and several educational establishments. Para was founded in 1615, but its actual prosperity dates from the last quarter of the 19th century.

Paramaribo, cap. Dutch Guiana, is a port and the center of trade of the colony. Coffee, cocoa, sugar, and rum are exported.

Parana, Argentina (cap. Entre Rios), was the capital of Argentina from 1852 to 1861, and is now the residence of a bishop.

Paris, cap. France (cap. Seine), is the third largest city of the world, and as much of a center for commercial and manufacturing occupations as it is for art, literature, science, fashion, and kindred interests. The fancy goods industry takes the first place, including gold and silver-work, jewelry, dressmaking, high-class cabinet-making, and all manufactures known as French goods, and employs 500,000 work-people. Paris is strongly fortified, and extends along both northern and southern banks of the Seine, in which lies the Ile de la Cité, the earliest original site of the city. On this small island, the heart of Paris, are some ancient buildings; one group includes the Palais de Justice, the Conciergerie, a prison which won evil fame during the Revolution, and the exquisite Sainte Chapelle. At the eastern end of the island stands the noble cathedral of Notre Dame. The two banks of the Seine are connected by numerous bridges, some of them old and of handsome design. On the left, or southern, bank are the Quartier St. Germain, the home of the French aristocracy, and the Diplomatic Corps; and the Quartier Latin, famous for its picturesque student life. Here are located schools of art, medicine, law, science, literature, and the like, the Institute of France and the University of Paris, including the Sorbonne, for the faculties of literature and science, with about 12,000 students. Here, also, is Mont Ste. Geneviève, crowned by the Panthéon, set apart as a mausoleum for Frenchmen considered worthy of fame, the interior of which is decorated by well-known artists depicting episodes in France's history. The gardens of the Luxembourg containing the Luxembourg Palace, where the Senate convenes, and the noted gallery of modern painting and sculpture; the Observatory; the Chamber of Deputies; the Hôtel des Invalides, containing a museum of artillery, and Napoleon I.'s tomb; the great Salpêtrière hospital; the factory of the Gobelins; the Odéon theater; and the Jardin des Plantes are among the more celebrated institutions on the south bank of the Seine. The Hôtel Cluny, an old mansion containing collections of mediæval objects, lace, carriages, etc., is built on the site of the palace of the Frankish kings, and shows ruins of Roman baths. On the right bank of the Seine lies the magnificent open space known as the Place de la Concorde, flanked by the broad tree-bordered Champs Elysées, near which is the Elysée Palace where the President of the Republic resides, and by the gardens of the Tuileries, a royal palace destroyed during the Commune. These gardens extend to the Louvre, one of the most beautiful palaces in the world, which was at first a fortress and was rebuilt by Francis I. in 1541. It contains priceless treasures of art, both paintings and sculpture. The social life of Paris and much of its business concentrate about the grand boulevards, broad tree-shaded avenues which girdle the older part of the city. Two triumphal arches, erected by Louis XIV., the Porte St. Martin, and the Porte St. Denis, divide the stream of traffic on the busiest of these boulevards, and in their vicinity are the Madeleine, a church fashioned like a Greek temple, and the magnificent Opéra, celebrated alike for its music and its architecture, and for its museum of dramatic history. The Palais Royal, built by Cardinal Richelieu, the scene of many notable gatherings of historical personages and containing the Théâtre Français; the Hôtel de Ville, a reproduction of the one burned in 1871, splendidly decorated; the national library, of about 2,500,000 books, and considered to be the richest library of the world as regards rare books and old and modern bindings; the Bourse; the quaint little church of St. Germain l'Auxerrois, dating from the 13th century, from whose belfry sounded the signal for the massacre of the Huguenots of France on St. Bartholomew's Day; and the curious tower of St. Jacques, a fragment of an ancient church are all clustered on the right bank. There, also, are the Halles Centrales, the great markets of Paris. There are numerous columns, monuments, and triumphal arches, the largest of which is the Arc de Triomphe de l'Etoile commenced by Napoleon I., commemorating various events in the turbulent history of France. The Palace of the Trocadéro, erected for the Universal Exhibition of 1878, has a hall capable of holding 5,000 spectators; and across the Seine the Eiffel tower, erected for the exhibition of 1889, reaches a height of 984 feet. There are many churches of interest in the city, both for age or architecture or for decoration, but the most prominent is the church of the Sacré Cœur, which stands alone on the top of Montmartre, and commands the whole capital. It is modern, and as yet unfinished, and forms a vast basilica in the Roman style, with a Byzantine dome 272 ft. high. The Bois de Boulogne is a great park in the city, affording a fashionable driving place and promenade and there are other splendid parks in and about Paris, including the grounds about the palaces of St. Cloud, Chantilly, and the more distant Fontainebleau and Versailles. Even the cemeteries of Paris are renowned, especially that of Père Lachaise, crowded with mortuary chapels and sculptured memorials. Other educational institutions of Paris are the Collège de France; Musée d'Histoire Naturelle; Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers (applied sciences); Ecole Normale Supérieure; Ecole des Ponts et Chaussées (for civil engineers); Ecole des Beaux-Arts, founded in 1648, one of the most famous schools of painting, sculpture, engraving, and architecture in the world; Ecole Polytechnique; and the Conservatory of Music and Declamation. Paris was the ancient capital of a small Gallic tribe, the Parisii; was the capital of Constantius Chlorus (292-306); was made the capital of the Frankish kingdom by Clovis in 508; was ruled by counts under the Carolingians; became again the capital under the Capetians (10th century); was largely developed under Philip Augustus and St. Louis; suffered from civil strife under Charles VI.; was entered by Henry V. of England in 1420, but expelled the English in 1436; was the scene of the massacre of St. Bartholomew in 1572; and was the scene of many of the leading events in the first revolution and in those of 1830 and 1848, as well as during the Commune in 1871. International expositions were held here in 1855, 1867, 1878, 1889, and 1900.

Parkersburg, West Virginia (c. h. Wood Co.), has oil-refineries, oil-well supply works, flour and lumber mills, and an extensive trade in manufactured goods, farm products, and coal. In the vicinity are valuable clay and coal deposits, gas and petroleum wells and several medicinal springs noted for their quality. It was settled in 1773.

Parma, Italy (cap. Parma), is the seat of a bishop, and has a cathedral dating from the 11th century, which contains Correggio's "Assumption." It possesses a university founded in 1599, and among other notable buildings are the 12th century baptistery; a former ducal palace; a library; a museum of antiquities; and a picture-gallery, with famous paintings by Correggio, Giulio Romano, and Parmigiano. Parma has a seminary for priests, an agricultural college, a school of fine arts, and an academy of music. It has manufactures of silk, woollens, linen, hats, and tobacco, and large printing establishments. The town, known to the ancient Romans as Gallia Cispadana, was colonized in 183 B. C. The Roman road Via Emilia crosses it, dividing it into two equal parts. In 1346 it passed into the possession of the Visconti family, and until 1512 its fate was linked with that of the duchy of Milan.

Parsons, Kansas (Labette Co.), is a trade center in a productive agricultural region. It has extensive grain elevators, creameries, agricultural implement works, and railroad shops. A state hospital for the insane is located here.

Partick, Scotland (Lanark), has ship-building yards, brass and other foundries, cotton factories, and flour mills.

Pasadena, California (Los Angeles Co.), is a health resort and residential city, famous for its beautiful homes and gardens. Its annual floral parade attracts thousands of visitors.

Passaic, New Jersey (Passaic Co.), is a manufacturing suburb of New York. It has good water-power and the chief industrial establishments are large rubber works, silk-mills, woollen mills, chemical works, etc. It was settled in 1692, and is near the scene of several of the engagements of the Revolutionary War. Washington crossed the Passaic River here in 1776, when he was retreating through New Jersey.

Paterson, New Jersey (c. h. Passaic Co.), is the third city of the state, and one of the most important manufacturing centers in the country, with abundant water-power afforded by the Passaic River, which here makes a descent of about 70 ft. over the Passaic Falls. It is the principal silk manufacturing center of the western hemisphere, this industry alone employing 16,000 wage-earners. It also has extensive works for dyeing and finishing textiles. Steel and iron manufactures rank next in importance. There are large breweries and many smaller industries. Paterson was founded in 1791; on February 8, 1902, the heart of the business section of the town was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of over $6,000,000. Less than a month later, the greatest flood ever known in the Passaic Valley caused great loss of property, and, in October, 1903, another great flood occurred, with heavy loss. Notwithstanding these calamities, the city is prosperous and progressive.

Patala, India (Punjab), is the capital of a native state of the same name, and has marble quarries and copper mines.

Patna, India (Bengal), has a government college and a Roman Catholic cathedral. Patna rice is famous, and other articles of export are cotton, oil-seeds, and salt. Opium is manufactured.

Patras, Greece (cap. Achaia), is a fortified seaport on the north coast of Morea. The principal buildings are the citadel, the cathedral, and the castle. Its principal exports are currants, olives, olive-oil, and lemons.

Pau, France (cap. Basses-Pyrénées), is a favorite winter resort in the foothills of the Pyrenees. It possesses golf links, laid out in 1854, which, except Blackheath, are the oldest links in the world outside Scotland. Pau was the ancient capital of French Navarre and Béarn. Its history centers round the castle, rebuilt in 1363 by Gaston Phoebus, Comte de Foix. Pau was the birth-place of General Bernadotte, who became King of Sweden.

Pavia, Italy (cap. Pavia), is the seat of a bishop, and has a cathedral dating back to 1488. The university (1,500 students), said to have been founded by Charlemagne in 774, was restored by Galeazzo Visconti, Count of Pavia, in 1361. The municipal museum, a valuable collection of paintings and engravings, is housed in the Palazzo Malaspina. Charlemagne took the town, which was known to the ancient Romans as Ticinum, in 774. Church councils were held here in 1081, 1160, and 1423. Here also was fought in 1525 the great battle which resulted in the defeat of the French and the capture of their king, Francis I., by the troops of the Emperor Charles V. The town was annexed by Austria in 1714, and was joined to the kingdom of Italy in 1859.

Pawtucket, Rhode Island (Providence Co.), is an important manufacturing city with extensive water-power furnished by the Blackstone River, which, at this place, has a fall of 50 ft. It has extensive cotton and woollen mills, silk factories, foundries, machine-shops, electrical supply works, wire-works, yarn mills, hosiery mills, knit goods factories, textile dyeing and finishing establishments, lumber products and factories, boot and shoe factories, etc. It has a state armory and a state emergency hospital. It was settled in 1654, and cotton manufacturing was first introduced into the United States at Pawtucket.

Paysandu, Uruguay, is the second port of the country, and has a large export trade in preserved meat.

Peabody, Massachusetts (Essex Co.), has extensive manufactures of leather, shoes, electrical supplies, thermometers, and glue. It contains the Peabody Institute, founded in 1852 by George Peabody.

Peekskill, New York (Westchester Co.), has knit goods factories, brick works, foundries, machine-shops, etc. A Roman Catholic home for children has over 1,000 inmates. The state military camp ground is just north of the village. It was settled by the Dutch in 1664.

Peking, cap. China (Chili), is the largest city of China and consists of an inner and outer—that is, a Manchu and a Chinese—city. The former is 14½ miles in circuit, and has 3 gates on the south and 2 on the northwest and east sides. The wall is about 45 ft. high and 47 ft. thick. Within the Manchu city lie the imperial palace and parks, the palaces of the nobles, the public offices and barracks, the examination hall, the Confucian and other large temples, and many private residences. In the Chinese city, which projects on the south of the Manchu city, and is enclosed by a wall 22 ft. high with 7 gates, are shops, theatres, restaurants, club-houses, the temples of heaven and agriculture; but large spaces are unoccupied, and other ground is under cultivation or used for desiccating manure. The summer palaces of Yuan-ming-yuan, Wan-shou-shan, and I-ho-yuan lie from 5 to 6 miles north of the city; and in the plain surrounding the city are many picturesque graveyards belonging to noble families. The tombs of the last dynasty lie about 20 miles north of the city, and those of the present dynasty from 2 to 3 days' journey east and west of Peking. Peking has, except for short intervals, been an imperial residence for more than 900 years, and was an important place long before that date. It probably owes its choice as a capital in large measure to its favorable position from a geomantic point of view. As the country around it is too poor to support its population, supplies have to be imported from the south. This need led to the construction of the Grand Canal, and of a shorter canal across the promontory of Shan-tung. Peking became one of the capitals of the Khitan Tatars at the end of the 10th century; was rebuilt by Kublai Khan; and has been sole capital since the beginning of the 15th century. It surrendered to the Anglo-French force in 1860, and was taken by the allied forces sent in 1900 for the relief of the foreign legations.

Pensa, Russia (cap. Pensa), has breweries and tanneries, iron and bell foundries, brick works, sawmills, and flour-mills, and manufactures soap, candles, wax, cloth, paper, and celebrated camel's-hair stuffs. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop and possesses a fine cathedral. It has a botanical garden, a school of agriculture, and several technical colleges.

Pensacola, Florida (c. h. Escambia Co.), is a port of entry on Pensacola Bay, 6 miles from the Gulf of Mexico, and an important railroad terminus.

Peoria, Illinois (c. h. Peoria Co.), is the commercial and industrial center of a large extent of country. The chief manufacturing establishments are meat-packing houses, distilleries, strawboard factories, breweries, flour and lumber mills, glucose works, wagon and carriage factories, wire fence works, and agricultural implement works.

Périgueux, France (cap. Dordogne), contains the remarkable cathedral of St. Front, in the Byzantine style (984-1047). Périgueux was the Vesunna of the Romans, and has a large amphitheatre and the circular tower of Vesone, 89 ft. high.

Perm, Russia (cap. Perm), is a river port, and has tanneries, brick fields, distilleries, machinery and chemical works, sawmills, copper foundries, soap, candle, rope, and pottery manufactures, and a cannon foundry. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop, and has a fine cathedral.

Pernambuco, Brazil (cap. Pernambuco), also called Recife, is a port and coaling station, with exports of cotton, sugar, carnauba wax, hides, and skins.

Perpignan, France (cap. Pyrénées-Orientales), is a fortress of great strength, commanding the passage from Spain across the east Pyrenees. Perpignan did not become French till 1642, and is still half-Spanish, half-Moorish in appearance, while its people resemble those of Catalonia.

Perth, Scotland (cap. Perth), is, on account of the charming scenery of its surroundings, called the "Fair City."

Perth, Australia (cap. West Australia), has numerous fine buildings, including a town hall, Anglican and Roman Catholic cathedrals, council chambers, banks, museum, library and art gallery, mechanics' institute, and hospital.

Perth Amboy, New Jersey (Middlesex Co.), is a port of entry with an extensive shipping trade.

Perugia, Italy (cap. Perugia), is an ancient town, and contains many interesting mediæval buildings. It is the seat of a bishop, and has an unfinished Gothic cathedral, begun in the 15th century, which contains a library with a valuable collection of manuscripts.

Pesaro, Italy (cap. Pesaro e Urbino), has manufactures of majolica ware, silk and woollen goods, sealing-wax, and cream of tartar.

Peshawar, India (cap. Northwest Frontier Province), is an important strategic point near the Khyber Pass, on the route from India to Kabul.

Peterborough, England (Northampton), is a town grown up around a Benedictine monastery, founded in 655, destroyed by the Danes in 870, rebuilt in 970, burnt in 1116, and refounded in 1117. Two queens were buried here—Catherine of Aragon, and Mary Queen of Scots, the latter only till 1612. Portions of the cloisters and of other monastic buildings still remain, and within the precincts are the museum and Young Men's Institute. The town has trade in agricultural produce, manufactures bricks, and has large railway locomotive works.

Peterborough, Ontario, Canada, is a trade center noted for its canoes. It has manufactures of sawmill machinery, packing houses, etc.

Petersburg, Virginia (Dinwiddie Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural region of which tobacco is one of the chief products. Owing to its good water-power and the abundance of raw material near at hand, it has large manufacturing interests. The chief manufacturing establishments are tobacco factories, cotton-mills, knitting mills, silk factory, machine-shops, and lumber mills.

A state hospital for the colored insane, a state normal and collegiate institute for colored students, and several other educational institutions are located here.

Petropolis, Brazil (cap. Rio di Janeiro), is a popular watering-place, and has cotton and other factories.

Petrograd, formerly St. Petersburg, (cap. Russia), is a port and coaling station at the head of the Gulf of Finland. The Winter Palace, the center of court life in the capital, is an immense quadrilateral, built in 1732-62 (after the plans of Rastrelli), burnt in 1837, and rebuilt in 1837-8. It contains many magnificent state rooms. The other imperial and princely palaces include the Old and New Mikhailovskii residences, built in 1797-1801 and in 1819-25 by Paul I. and Alexander I. respectively; the Taurida palace, built by Catherine II. for Potemkin; the Anitchkof palace, a favorite residence of Alexander III.; the Marble or Orlof palace, another of the creations of Catherine II.; and the palaces of the Grand Dukes Vladimir and Michael. Several of these contain valuable art collections, though many of their treasures have been concentrated at the Winter Palace and the Hermitage. The last named (founded in 1765, rebuilt and greatly enlarged in 1840-52) is the Louvre of Petrograd; it contains some of the finest artistic and archaeological collections in the world, including Greek antiquities from the Black Sea coasts. Nowhere else is there such a wealth of Rembrandt's masterpieces; only in Madrid is there a greater treasure of the best works of Velasquez and Murillo; and no continental gallery has so good a collection of English art. The imperial, or National Library ranks after those of Paris and London; it possesses 1,500,000 printed volumes and 27,100 manuscripts. Among other libraries and collections are those of the Academy of Sciences (the chief learned society of the empire); of the Asiatic Museum; of the Academy of Fine Arts; of the National Museum of Alexander III., especially representative of Russian painting; of the university (which was founded in 1819, and has 2,000 students), of the School of Mines, of the Museum of Artillery, of the Semenof Gallery in Vasilii Ostrof, of the Imperial Geographical Society, and of the Historical, Archaeological, and Economical Societies. Besides the university, Petrograd possesses a school of mines, with a mineralogical collection unsurpassed in Europe; a technological institute, a school of civil engineering, a forestry school, the military academy of the general staff, academies of artillery, military law, medicine, and engineering, of Greek Orthodox and Roman Catholic theology, of fine arts, and of music, as well as a naval academy. The great departmental state buildings include the Admiralty, founded in 1704 by Peter the Great, and containing the archives and official rooms of the ministry of marine and the naval museum; the general staff buildings containing the military archives of Russia, and the official quarters of the ministries of war, finance, and foreign affairs; the buildings of the governing Senate and the Holy Synod. Petrograd also possesses thirteen cathedral churches, of which those of St. Isaac the Dalmatian, of the Kazan Mother of God, of St. Alexander Nevskii, of St. Peter and St. Paul, of the Resurrection, and of the Emperor Alexander II. are the most noteworthy. The greater industrial establishments of Petrograd consist chiefly of metal works, iron-foundries, sugar-refineries, distilleries, breweries, ship- and boat-building yards, printing works, and manufactures of tobacco, crystal and glass, silk, cotton and cloth stuffs, leather, cordage, carts and carriages, gold embroidery, pottery and porcelain, and machinery. The chief exports are grain, linseed, oil-cake, flax, petroleum, wool, beer, eggs, and timber. Founded in 1703 by Peter the Great, the city was in 1712 formally created the imperial capital.

Pforzheim, Germany (Baden), has manufactures of gold and silver ornaments, chemicals, and paper.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania (c. h. Philadelphia Co.), is the third city of the United States in extent and population. Its commerce by sea and land is very large, and, as a manufacturing center, it ranks next to New York and Chicago. It has on its 2 rivers over 30 miles of frontage, docks and wharfrage. The chief manufactures are machinery, locomotives, ironware, ships, cotton and woollen goods, silk, leather, cigars, drugs, and chemicals. It is the seat of the University of Pennsylvania with about 3,000 students, which maintains in its college department, besides its usual arts course, courses in architecture, mechanical engineering, music, etc. Its medical school has about 500 students and its law school about 400 students. Girard College, founded in 1831 by Stephen Girard, for the education of poor white male orphans, is one of the richest and most notable philanthropic institutions in the United States. It now accommodates over 1,500 boys, and the value of Mr. Girard's bequest of $5,260,000 has been increased to about $35,000,000. Hahnemann College and Hospital is one of the chief homœopathic institutions of the kind in the country. The Drexel Institute, founded by A. J. Drexel and opened in 1892, is an institution for "the extension and improvement of industrial education as a means of opening better and wider avenues of employment to young men and women." The Free Library of Philadelphia contains 280,000 volumes and has 19 branches in different parts of the city. Ridgway Library contains 120,000 volumes, including many rarities. The Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, founded in 1805, has an extensive collection of over 500 paintings, sculptures, casts, and engravings, and maintains an important art school. The Academy of Natural Sciences, founded in 1812, contains large collections of natural history and a library of 50,000 volumes. Independence Hall is, in some respects, the most interesting building in the United States; here the Continental Congress met during the American Revolution (1775-81) and here, on July 4, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was adopted. A United States Navy Yard, with a dry dock measuring 750 ft. by 134 ft., is located on League Island. The Philadelphia Mint, established here in 1792, is the parent mint of the United States. Philadelphia was founded in 1682 by a Quaker colony under William Penn, who purchased the site from its Indian owners. The city received its charter from Penn in 1701, when it had about 4,500 inhabitants. From that time to about the 19th century, it rivaled Boston as the leading city of the country, and was the scene of the most important official acts in the Revolution. The first Continental Congress assembled here in 1774; the Declaration of Independence was signed here on July 4, 1776. The Constitution of the United States was drawn up and promulgated here in 1777. The first President of the United States resided here, and here Congress assembled until 1797. From September, 1777, to June, 1778, the city was in the possession of the British. During the 19th century, its history was one of quiet and rapid growth. In 1876 Philadelphia was the scene of the Centennial Exhibition, held in honor of the 100th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

Philippopolis, Bulgaria (Eastern Roumelia), manufactures silk, cloth, woollens, leather, and tobacco, and prepares and exports large quantities of attar of roses. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop. In Roman times it was the capital of Thracia.

Phillipsburg, New Jersey (Warren Co.), has large railroad shops, foundries, and machine-shops, horseshoe works, stove works, silk-mills, etc. It was settled in 1749.

Phoenix, cap. Arizona (c. h. Maricopa Co.), is the trade center of the fertile Salt River Valley, and one of the most important commercial cities of Arizona. It has creameries, flour-mills, olive-oil mills, etc. The remains of several prehistoric towns have been found in the vicinity.

Piacenza, Italy (cap. Piacenza), is an important strategic and commercial center, and has manufactures of silk, cottons, hats, and pottery. It is the seat of a bishop and has a cathedral in the Lombardo-Romanesque style (dating from the 12th century), with an immense crypt, a campanile 223 ft. high, and paintings by Carracci, Guercino, and others. The church of San Sisto (1499) formerly contained the famous Sistine Madonna by Raphael. There is a public library possessing a valuable collection of manuscripts. Founded as a Roman colony at the same time as Cremona, Placentia, as it was then called, was destroyed by the Gauls in 200 B. C. The French, under Louis XII., took it, but it was recaptured by Pope Julius II.; and it remained a papal domain until 1545, when Paul III. gave it to his son, Peter Farnese. It formed part of the duchy of Parma until incorporated in 1860 with the kingdom of Italy.

Platra, Roumania (Moldavia), has a large trade in timber.

Pietermaritzburg, cap. Natal, Africa, has government buildings, a town hall, hospital, and asylum, and is the see of an Anglican bishop.

Pilsen, Austria (Bohemia), is famous for its beer, though it also produces sugar, clothing, porcelain and pottery, machinery, furniture, hardware, spirits, leather, sulphuric acid, and paper. Coal, iron, and alum are mined. The 13th century church of St. Bartholomew, the town hall (1555), and the museums are the chief public buildings.

Pine Bluff, Arkansas (c. h. Jefferson Co.), is an important trade center in an agricultural region in which cotton is one of the chief crops. It has cotton-gins, cotton compresses, cottonseed-oil mills, foundry, furniture factory, sheet iron works, railroad shops, etc. The annual state fair is held here. It is the seat of the state colored normal college and other educational institutions.

Pingyang, Korea, is an ancient city, and was the scene of battles between Japan and China in 1592 and 1894, China winning the former, Japan the latter.

Pinsk, Russia (Minsk), has potteries, tanneries, breweries, oil and soap works, and leather manufactures.

Piotrkof, Russia (Poland), is one of Poland's oldest towns, and has remains of a royal mediæval castle.

Piqua, Ohio (Miami Co.), has large linseed-oil works, strawboard mills, woollen mills, furniture factory, rolling-mills, iron-works, and sheet steel mills.

Piræus, Greece (Attica), is the chief port of entry of Greece, and exports olives, olive-oil, and marble. It has an arsenal, and some cotton-mills. It was founded by Themistocles and Pericles; was destroyed by Sulla in 86 B. C.; and was rebuilt in the 19th century. It was in ancient times connected with Athens by the "Long Walls."

Pirmasens, Germany (Bavaria), manufactures boots and shoes and leather goods.

Pisa, Italy (cap. Pisa), has cotton manufactures and exports olive-oil and marble. It is the seat of an archbishop and has a magnificent cathedral in the Gothic style, commenced in 1063, and completed in 1118. In front of the cathedral stands the circular marble baptistery (12th century), adorned with numerous columns and a dome nearly 200 ft. high. The Campo Santo, or cemetery, dates from the 13th century, and contains numerous interesting monuments, sarcophagi, friezes, etc. The famous leaning tower, a campanile, built entirely of marble, 178½ ft. high, was commenced in 1174 and completed in 1350. Amongst secular buildings are the university, founded in 1343; the Agostini and Toscanelli palaces; the Palazzo del Comune; the municipal museum; and the Academy of Arts. Pisa is an ancient Etruscan town, and became subject to Rome in the 2nd century B. C. Between the 11th and 14th centuries it was a powerful commercial republic, the rival of Genoa and Venice. After its great naval defeat by Genoa in 1284, Pisa began to decline until at the beginning of the 15th century it became subject to Florence.

Pistoja, Italy (Florence), is the seat of a bishop, and its 12th century cathedral is rich in works of art. Among other famous churches and secular buildings are the Madonna dell' Umiltà, San Giovanni, San Domenico, the Palazzo del Comune (1294), and the Ospedale del Ceppo (1277). Pistoja is famous for its gun-barrels and pistols, the latter of which are said to have derived their name from the town. It was here that Catiline fell in the battle of 62 B. C.; while during the middle ages the feuds between the Bianchi and Neri frequently devastated the town.

Pittsburg, Kansas (Crawford Co.), is a trade center in a productive agricultural region and has extensive railroad shops, foundries and machine-shops, packing houses, planing-mills, rolling-mills, glass factories, brick plants, etc. In the vicinity are coal-mines, and a state manual training normal school is located here. It was settled in 1876.

Pittsburg, Pennsylvania (c. h. Allegheny Co.), is the second city of Pennsylvania, and one of the chief industrial centers of the United States, situated at the junction of the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers, which here unite to form the Ohio. The sister city of Allegheny, situated on the north bank of the Allegheny and extending down to the Ohio, was incorporated with Pittsburg in 1907, and is now known as the North Side. The great basis of the prosperity of the "Iron City" has been the fact that it stands in the center of one of the richest coal districts of the globe, and of the chief supply of natural gas, the use of which as a fuel gave a great impetus to its manufacturing industries, although the gas is now mainly used for domestic purposes. The staple manufactures of Pittsburg are iron, steel, and glass. The Pittsburg district produces 65 per cent. of all the coke manufactured in the United States, and the output of bituminous coal is enormous. Pig iron, structural iron and steel, steel rails, armor-plate for battleships, electrical machinery, air-brakes, locomotives, steam-engines, and other machinery are extensively manufactured. The largest manufactory of corks in the world is located here. It also has one of the most famous establishments for the manufacture of instruments of precision. It is engaged in the manufacture of salt, fire brick, building brick, stoves, brass ware, bronze ware, white lead, pottery, leather, paper, and lumber. It is also the center of large and important chemical industries and is heavily engaged in the production of food products, meats, preserves, and pickles. The Western University of Pennsylvania, founded in 1787, has about 1,000 students in its various departments of law, literature, engineering, medicine, dental surgery, and pharmacy. Theological seminaries of the Presbyterian, United Presbyterian, and the Reformed Presbyterian churches are located here. The Pennsylvania College for Women is an important institution, and there is a large number of denominational schools and private academies. The University of Pittsburg has about 1,000 students. The Carnegie Institute, with an extensive gallery of art, one of the largest museums in America, and an exceptional and perfect music hall, has, in recent years, achieved a world-wide reputation as a center of artistic and scientific activity. Connected with the institute is a school for industrial training, for which Andrew Carnegie has given an endowment of $2,000,000. The Carnegie Free Library of Pittsburg, founded by the princely benefactor whose name it bears, is the greatest establishment of its kind in America, contains upwards of 300,000 volumes, and maintains branch libraries and numerous agencies for the free distribution of literature within Greater Pittsburg. Pittsburg occupies the site of the French Fort Duquesne, erected in 1754 and abandoned on the advance of Gen. Forbes in 1758. Its place was taken by the English Fort Pitt, and the laying out of the town of Pittsburg may be dated from about 1765.

Pittsfield, Massachusetts (c. h. Berkshire Co.), noted for its beautiful homes, is situated in the center of the Berkshire Hills. The chief industrial establishments are foundries and machine-shops, electrical works, paper-mills, etc. The Berkshire Athenæum, the Crane Art Museum, and a public library with 50,000 volumes, are among the institutions of note. It was settled in 1743.

Pittston, Pennsylvania (Luzerne Co.), is in the midst of the anthracite coal region, and its chief industries are connected with the mining and shipping of coal. It has large flour and lumber mills, knitting mills, foundries, machine-shops, brick and terra-cotta works, stove and engine works, breweries, etc. It was settled in 1770.

Plainfield, New Jersey (Union Co.), is a residential suburb of New York, and has a number of manufacturing establishments, the chief of which are tool works, machine-shops, kid glove factories, silk and cotton mills, aluminum works, etc. It was settled in 1684.

Plattsburg, New York (c. h. Clinton Co.), is a port of entry on Lake Champlain and the center of a region in which there are many famous summer resorts. The chief manufacturing establishments are lumber mills, sewing-machine works, flour-mills, pulp-mills, etc. It is the seat of a state normal and training school, and has numerous other educational institutions. Adjoining the village on the south is a United States military reservation. It was settled in 1784. The first naval battle between American and British forces took place on October 11, 1776, off Valcour Island, a short distance from Plattsburg.

Plauen, Germany (Kg. of Saxony), has extensive lace-making, embroidery, and white cotton goods industries.

Ployesti, Roumania (Wallachia), has a considerable trade in wool, and large petroleum refineries.

Plymouth, England (Devon), is a strongly fortified port, and one of the chief naval stations of the country, with large naval and military establishments. It has an extensive trade, and exports lead, tin, copper, fish, and machinery. Plymouth was the starting-point of the expedition against the Armada in 1588, and the last European point touched by the Mayflower in 1620. It was unsuccessfully besieged by the Royalists in the civil war.

Plymouth, Massachusetts (c. h. Plymouth Co.), is of abiding interest as the landing-place of the Pilgrim Fathers, and the site of the first settlement in New England. The Plymouth Rock, on which the Pilgrims landed from the Mayflower in December, 1620, is carefully preserved and is now covered by a granite canopy. Other places of interest in the town are Pilgrim Hall, where books, pictures, and other valuable relics of early times are kept, and Cole's Hill and Burial Hill, where many of the first settlers are buried. Plymouth also has the national monument to the Pilgrims, dedicated in August, 1889. Its manufactures include duck, cordage, wire nails, and electrical supplies; its fisheries are of considerable importance. On account of its beautiful situation and historic interest, Plymouth is a popular summer and tourist resort.

Plymouth, Pennsylvania (Luzerne Co.), is situated in the anthracite coal region, and its chief industries are the mining and shipping of coal. It also manufactures drills and other mining machinery. It was settled in 1768.

Point de Galle, Ceylon, was for a long time the chief port of the island, but since the transference of the shipping traffic to Colombo, trade has much declined, although coconut, plumbago, and tea are still exported.

Poitiers, France (cap. Vienne), is the seat of a bishop, and has a cathedral founded in 1161 by Eleanor of Aquitaine, queen of Henry II. of England. Other noteworthy buildings are the church of St. Hilaire le Grand, in which rest the remains of the famous bishop of Poitiers (320-68), and the church of St. Radegonde, long a place of pilgrimage. In the neighborhood Clovis defeated Alaric, king of the Visigoths, in 507, and in 1356 the Black Prince defeated the French.

Pola, Austria (Coastland), is the principal naval station of Austria, with a snug, strongly fortified natural harbor. There are many Roman and mediæval remains, and a modern cathedral. Pola was taken in 1148 by Venice, and repeatedly destroyed during the contests between the Venetians and the Genoese.

Poltava, Russia (cap. Poltava), has breweries, brick works, tanneries, flour-mills, and manufactures of cloth, flannel, soap, candles, tobacco, carts, and carriages. Poltava is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop, and contains a cathedral (1710) and a military school. Two monuments (besides the cathedral) commemorate the victory of July 9, 1709, when Russia, under Peter the Great, definitely worsted Sweden under Charles XII.

Ponce, Porto Rico (cap. Ponce), is the second largest city of Porto Rico, and the first in commercial importance. Coffee is its most important export. It also exports sugar, rum, molasses, and tobacco. At its port, Playa Ponce (2½ miles), are a large harbor, accommodating vessels drawing 25 ft., and the custom-house. Ponce has a cathedral, hospitals, theatres, fine residences, and gardens, and in the vicinity are many extensive plantations.

Pondichery, India (Madras), is the chief settlement of the French in India. It has no harbor, and is dependent on artesian wells for its water-supply. The chief industry is weaving and dyeing. The French first settled here in 1674; the town was taken by the Dutch in 1693, and by the British in 1731, 1778, 1793, and 1803. It was finally restored to the French in 1815.

Pontiac, Michigan (c. h. Oakland Co.), has large carriage manufactories, machine-shops, flour and lumber mills, gasoline engine works, etc. The Eastern Michigan Asylum for the Insane, with 1,200 patients, is located here. Pontiac was settled in 1818.

Pontypridd, Wales (Glamorgan), has mines of iron and coal, foundries, and chain and cable works.

Poona, India (Bombay), is the headquarters of the Bombay army, and the seat, during the rainy season, of the government of the presidency. Gold, silver, and brass ware, ivory-carving, paper-making, and the modelling of small clay figures are its chief industries. It has two arts colleges and a college of science. Poona is the center of Brahmanical influence in Western India.

Portage la Prairie, Manitoba, Canada, is a railroad and trade center in a rich agricultural section. It has numerous grain elevators, threshing machine and farm implement works, oatmeal mills, etc.

Port Arthur, China (Manchuria), is a fortified port on Kwangtung peninsula. Port Arthur was taken by the Japanese in 1894 during their war with China, and in 1898 it was leased by China to the Russians, who strongly fortified it, and made it the terminus of the Siberian Railway. Here the Japanese commenced war with Russia in February, 1904, by a torpedo attack, and early in January, 1905, the town capitulated to the Japanese after a siege of 7 months.

Port Arthur, Ontario, Canada, is a port on Thunder Bay, Lake Superior, with a large transshipment trade. Its industries include a blast furnace, boiler works, stock yards, elevators, etc.

Port au Prince, cap. Haiti, is a port at the inner extremity of Gulf of Gonaive and is the seat of the bulk of the foreign trade of Haiti. Exports coffee, cocoa, mahogany, etc. It is partially fortified, and is an archbishop's see.

Port Elizabeth, Cape Colony, Africa, is a port on Algoa Bay, and the third city of the colony. Exports wool, skins, and hides.

Port Huron, Michigan (c. h. St. Clair Co.), is a port of entry, the southern outlet of Lake Huron, and is a favorite summer resort. The chief industries are ship-building works, engine and thresher works, fiber works, etc. A tunnel under the Saint Clair River, over a mile long, connects this city with Sarnia, Ontario. It was settled in 1790.

Portland, Maine (c. h. Cumberland Co.), is the largest city of Maine, and an important seaport and railroad terminus, which is noted for its exports of grain, fruit, and live stock. Its industries include boot and shoe factories, rolling-mills, foundries, machine-shops, locomotive works, engine and boiler works, petroleum refineries, lumber mills, etc. Fishing and the shell-fish industry are extensively pursued. A United States marine hospital and a state hospital are located here. Its harbor is deep, and well protected by 6 forts. Casco Bay, an admirable yachting water, is crowded with pretty wooded islands, many of which are favorite summer resorts. The Wadsworth-Longfellow Mansion, erected by Gen. Peleg Wadsworth, the poet's grandfather, in 1785-6, is of note and, in an addition built in 1903, contains the library of the Maine Historical Society. The town was founded in 1633. It suffered severely at the hands of the French and the Indians in 1775; and was almost totally destroyed by the Indians. After the war it was rebuilt.

Portland, Oregon (c. h. Multnomah Co.), is the largest city of the state, a port of entry with an extensive coastwise and transpacific trade, and an important railroad terminus, located on the banks of the Willamette River, 120 miles from the Pacific Ocean. Its exports are chiefly wheat, flour, wool, fish, and timber. The country surrounding Portland is rich in timber and minerals, and a vast agricultural region is tributary to this rapidly growing metropolis. Its principal manufactures are lumber, flour, furniture, woollen goods, cordage, clothing, canned goods, wagons, and carriages. Excellent water-power for manufacturing purposes is obtained from the Willamette Falls, Oregon City, 12 miles distant. Among the educational institutions are the Portland University and the medical and law schools of the State University. Portland ranks among the wealthiest cities of its size in the country. It was settled in 1843 and its growth since has been rapid and uninterrupted.

Port Louis, cap. Mauritius, is a port and coaling station, and the chief commercial center of the colony. In 1810 it was taken by the British.

Porto Alegre, Brazil (cap. Rio Grande do Sul), is a port and the most important city of southern Brazil. It exports tobacco, Paraguay tea, hides, and cattle.

Port of Spain, cap. Trinidad, is a port and coaling station, and exports cocoa, sugar, and asphalt. It contains a royal college, governor's house, and botanical gardens.

Porto Novo, cap. Dahomey, Africa, has considerable trade in palm-oil, kola-nuts, etc.

Porto Praya, Cape Verde Islands, exports coffee.

Port Said, Egypt, is a port and coaling station at the Mediterranean entrance to the Suez Canal. Exports cotton and oil-seeds.

Portsmouth, England (Hampshire), is a fortified port, coaling station, and the chief naval station of England. It has the greatest arsenal, and is the most strongly fortified place in the kingdom. The church of St. Thomas Becket is notable. Portsmouth rose to importance in the 13th century, and was strongly fortified in the 16th century.

Portsmouth, New Hampshire (Rockingham Co.), is the only seaport of the state, with some coasting trade, principally in coal, but very little foreign commerce. It has cotton-mills, marble works, boot and shoe factories and some ship-building. It contains many colonial houses of historical interest, chief among which are the Wentworth house and the Langdon house. The Athenaeum contains a library of 25,000 volumes. The United States Navy Yard, which is officially known as the Portsmouth Navy Yard, is situated on an island named Piscataqua, within the limits of the township of Kittery, Maine. It has a large dry dock, and, in the days of wooden ships, many were built here. The treaty of peace between Russia and Japan was signed here on September 5, 1905. Portsmouth was first settled in 1623 and was under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts until 1679, when New Hampshire became a separate colony. It was incorporated as a town in 1653, when it received the name of Portsmouth, and became a city in 1849. It was the capital of the state for some time and is now, alternately with Concord, the seat of the sessions of the United States district court of New Hampshire.

Portsmouth, Ohio (c. h. Scioto Co.), is a commercial center of an extensive mining and manufacturing section, situated at the confluence of the Scioto and Ohio rivers, and at the southern terminus of the Ohio canal. In the vicinity are valuable deposits of fire-clay. The chief manufactures are foundry and machine-shop products, paving and building brick, cars, lumber products, stoves, rectified spirits, carriages, furniture, etc. In the vicinity are interesting remains of the Mound Builders. It was settled in 1803.

Portsmouth, Virginia (c. h. Norfolk Co.), is an important trade and railroad center opposite Norfolk, with which it is connected by ferry. It has a good harbor and considerable coastwise trade. It exports large quantities of lumber, cotton products, naval stores, pig iron, fruit, and vegetables. It has a United States navy yard, which has a plant for constructing steel ships, and there are two dry docks. It has also a United States navy hospital. It was settled in 1752.

Posen, Germany (cap. Posen), is the most important fortress on Germany's eastern frontier. Agricultural implements, machinery, liqueurs, beer, and cigars are the principal products. Posen was a flourishing member of the Hanseatic League during the middle ages.

Potosi, Bolivia, was long famous for the silver mines in the neighboring mountain (Cerro de Potosi), where silver was discovered in 1546, but the production has greatly decreased of late. The tin mines are, however, still extensively worked. The town has a university, a Bolivian mint, and a metallurgical museum.

Potsdam, Germany (Prussia), contains the palace of Sans-Souci and the castle of Babelsberg, the former built by the Great Elector in 1660. Frederick the Great greatly embellished the town and its surroundings. To the Friedenskirche is attached a mausoleum, in which lie the Emperor Frederick and his consort, the Princess Royal of Great Britain. Cottons, woollens, tobacco, and sugar are manufactured.

Pottstown, Pennsylvania (Montgomery Co.), is the trade center of a fertile agricultural region. There is a considerable amount of mineral wealth in the vicinity. It has large manufactories of iron and steel, rolling-mills, blast-furnaces, steel-mills, bridge works, boiler works, carriage works, automobile factories, etc.

Pottsville, Pennsylvania (c. h. Schuylkill Co.), is one of the most important mining centers and shipping points in the Schuylkill anthracite coal region. Has steel mills, blast-furnaces, rolling-mills, and foundries. Here anthracite coal was first successfully used in smelting iron ore. It was settled in 1800.

Poughkeepsie, New York (c. h. Dutchess Co.), is an important commercial center on the east bank of the Hudson River, which is here spanned by a cantilever bridge 1½ miles long and 200 ft. above high water. Its chief industrial establishments are foundry and machine-shops, lumber mills, mowing-machine works, flour-mills, etc. Two miles north of the city is the Hudson River State Hospital for the Insane. Two miles east of the city is Vassar College, with about 1,000 students, the first and perhaps the best known of the American colleges for women, founded in 1861 by Matthew Vassar.

Prague, Austria (cap. Bohemia), is the commercial and manufacturing center of Bohemia, and has engineering and iron-works, and manufactories of chemicals, cement, earthenware, porcelain, furniture, cottons, carpets, paper, and hats, as well as breweries, distilleries, flour and lumber mills, and printing establishments. Prague contains many historic buildings. The stone Charles's Bridge (1357-1503), adorned with statues and groups, is an object of pilgrimage to Czechs, because of the martyrdom there of John of Nepomuk (1383). The Teyn church (1360-1460) played a prominent part in the religious troubles of Bohemia, and contains the tomb of the Danish astronomer, Tycho Brahe (1546-1601). The Clementinum contains the archiepiscopal seminary, the university library, the astronomical observatory, and part of the university. The last named, founded in 1348, was in 1882 divided into a German and a Czech section. Other buildings of note are the cathedral (begun 1344), and the Bohemian parliament palaces. Prague contains two polytechnic schools, an academy of music, an academy of fine arts, the Bohemian National Museum, and several big monasteries. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic archbishop. Founded apparently about the 8th century, Prague was developed in the 13th and 14th centuries. It became the center of the Hussites, having been taken by them in 1418. The Thirty Years' War commenced there in 1618. It was taken by the Imperialists in 1620, the Saxons in 1631, Wallenstein in 1632, the Swedes in 1648, the French and Bavarian troops in 1741, the Imperialists again in 1743, and Frederick the Great in 1744. Near it, May 6, 1757, the Prussians under Frederick the Great defeated the Austrians under Charles of Lorraine. It was taken by the Prussians in 1866.

Prato, Italy (Florence), has a cathedral dating from the 12th century and containing a Madonna by Andrea della Robbia (1489). Another noted church is that of the Madonna delle Carceri. It has manufactories of straw, woollen and cotton goods, and near by are quarries of serpentine.

Pressburg, Hungary, is a strongly fortified town, and the trading center of a fertile wheat and wine growing district. It has manufactories of furniture, musical instruments, gloves, silks, flour, spirits, and wine. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop, and has a cathedral, founded in the 11th century, where the kings of Hungary were crowned. On the capture of Buda by the Turks in 1541, Pressburg was declared the capital of Hungary, which, with a short interval, it remained until 1784.

Preston, England (Lancashire), is a port 12 miles from the mouth of Ribble River, and a center of the cotton-spinning industry. It has, besides, ship-building, iron and brass foundries, machine and electrical engineering works, and other industrial establishments.

Pretoria, cap. Transvaal, Africa, was laid out in 1855, and named after Pretorius, first president of the South African Republic. It became the seat of government in 1863. In 1900 it was entered by Lord Roberts. The Parliament House is the principal building.

Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, Canada, is an important trade and railroad center with extensive lumber interests, flour-mills, etc.

Prince Rupert, British Columbia, Canada, is the Pacific terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway, with extensive harbor facilities. It has sawmills and other lumber industries.

Prisrend, Servia, is famous for its manufacture of weapons; there are also steel, glass, pottery, and saddlery industries. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic and of a Greek Orthodox archbishop, and has a Greek Orthodox seminary for priests.

Prossnitz, Austria (Moravia), has manufactories of clothing, shoes, agricultural machines, and beer.

Providence, cap. Rhode Island (c. h. Providence Co.), is the largest city of the state, and a port of entry on the Providence River, a tidal arm of the Narragansett Bay, 25 miles from the Atlantic Ocean. It is the second city of New England, and one of the great industrial centers of the United States, noted for the variety of its manufactured products and the greatness of its industries. It has extensive manufactories of jewelry, silverware, cotton goods, gold and bronze ware, woollen goods, steam-engines, fine tubes and machinery, screws, locomotives, leather belting, rubber goods, boilers, stoves, as well as scores of other manufacturing plants. Brown University, founded in 1764, with upwards of 1,000 students, a state normal school, Rhode Island School of Design, Williams College, and other educational institutions are located here. The Athenæum contains a library of 70,000 volumes and some interesting portraits. The city was founded by Roger Williams in 1636 after his expulsion from Massachusetts.

Przemysl, Austria (Galicia), is a strongly fortified town, and trades in wood, leather, corn, and linen. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic and of a Greek Orthodox bishop, and has two cathedrals.

Pskof, Russia (cap. Pskof), has tanneries, distilleries, sawmills, flour-mills, manufactories of tobacco, cordage, flax materials, and sail-cloth. Pskof is the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop, and has a cathedral (1689-98) in the Russo-Byzantine style. From 1348 to 1510, when it was finally conquered by Moscow, Pskof formed an autonomous city-state, closely similar to Novgorod.

Puebla, Mexico (cap. Puebla), is one of the oldest cities of the republic, and contains a fine cathedral, a state college, episcopal palace, and the Palafoxiana library. It has cotton and woollen mills, iron and bronze works, and potteries.

Pueblo, Colorado (c. h. Pueblo Co.), is an active commercial and industrial city and an important railway and mining center. In the vicinity are extensive coal and oil fields, also deposits of limestone and iron ore. The city is noted for its smelting and steel works, with many thousand employees. It also has large railroad car shops. There is a state mineral palace, with a complete collection of the minerals of Colorado. A temporary Mormon settlement was located here in 1846 and a trading post was established in 1850. In 1854 the Ute Indians massacred the residents of the post, and, in 1859, the present city was laid out.

Puerto Cabello, Venezuela (Carabobo), is a seaport with modern docks and an export trade in coffee, cocoa, hides, and cattle. It has handsome buildings, including the finest custom-house in Venezuela.

Puerto Plata, Santo Domingo, West Indies, is a port with good anchorage, and has considerable trade in tobacco.

Punta Arenas, Chile (cap. Magellanes), is the southernmost town in the world, but only as far south as Dublin in Ireland is north. It has good wharves and warehouses and a growing trade in cattle, sheep, and furs. It is a Chilean naval station and a coaling station for the ships of all nations.

Quebec, cap. Quebec, Canada, is a port and coaling station on the St. Lawrence River, 400 miles from its mouth; the third city of Canada; and the most important military position in the Dominion. It is picturesquely situated, being largely built on the precipitous flanks of a bold headland, which is crowned by an ancient citadel. It is an important railroad and steamship terminal, and the largest ocean steamers can reach the city, but the port is usually closed by ice from the middle of December to April. It exports grain, cattle, and lumber, and has manufactories of iron, leather, and cotton. Quebec is the seat of a Roman Catholic cardinal archbishop and of an Anglican bishop, and has Roman Catholic and Protestant cathedrals. The fine Parliament house (1887) is also worth mentioning. Among the educational institutions are Laval University and Morrin College. The site of Quebec was visited by Cartier in 1535; the city was founded by the French under Champlain in 1608; taken by the British in 1629 and restored in 1632; unsuccessfully attacked by the British in 1690; besieged by the British under Wolfe in 1759, and taken after the battle of Quebec in Sept., 1759; ceded to Great Britain in 1763; and unsuccessfully attacked by the Americans under Montgomery in 1775. In the battle of Quebec, on the Plains of Abraham, near Quebec, Sept. 13, 1759, a victory was gained by the British under Wolfe over the French under Montcalm. It resulted in the fall of Quebec, and ultimately in the loss of Canada by the French.

Querétaro, Mexico (cap. Querétaro), was the scene of many patriotic episodes in Mexican history. The movement for independence began here, and here also the Emperor Maximilian was shot in 1867. Cotton and woollen goods are manufactured and opals are found in the vicinity.

Quezaltenango, Guatemala, Central America, has manufactories of cotton, linen, and woollen fabrics. In the vicinity are numerous interesting antiquities.

Quincy, Illinois (c. h. Adams Co.), is a trade center in a productive agricultural region, with extensive commercial and manufacturing interests. It has large machine-shops, stove factories, wire fence and brass casting works, lumber mills, canning factories, engine and plow works, flour-mills, etc. Among the educational institutions are a Roman Catholic college, opened in 1860, a Roman Catholic institute, with nearly 1,000 students, and a Methodist Episcopal school for boys. A soldiers' and sailors' home and a home for the aged and infirm are located here. It was settled in 1822.

Quincy, Massachusetts (Norfolk Co.), is a residential suburb of Boston, with many places of historic interest and some buildings of Revolutionary days. It has extensive quarrying industries, a large ship-building plant, and numerous educational institutions. It was settled in 1625 and came into great prominence in the last quarter of the 19th century, on account of an educational movement under the leadership of Francis Wayland Parker. It was the birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams, and John Hancock.

Quito, cap. Ecuador, has manufactories of coarse cotton and woollen goods, blankets, carpets, leather, lace, etc. The most important buildings are the churches; others are the government house, the archbishop's palace, the municipal buildings, the astronomical observatory, the university, and the institute of sciences.

Racine, Wisconsin (c. h. Racine Co.), is a commercial and industrial center in a productive agricultural region, with a good harbor on Lake Michigan. It has extensive manufactories of agricultural implements, carriages, wagons, automobiles, bicycles, copper goods, iron specialties, boots and shoes, etc. A Protestant Episcopal college, founded in 1852, and other educational institutions are located here. It was settled in 1834.

Radcliffe, England (Lancashire), has manufactories of cottons, chemicals, iron, and machinery, as well as coal-mines.

Radom, Russia (Poland), is the center of the Polish leather industry, and has sawmills, breweries, and tanneries, and a trade in cattle.

Ragusa, Italy (Syracuse), trades in oil, wine and cheese, and manufactures cotton and woollen goods. In the neighborhood are rock caverns and grottoes.

Raleigh, cap. North Carolina (c. h. Wake Co.), has, in addition to the various departments of the state government, state institutions for the insane, the blind, the deaf and dumb, also a state penitentiary. A national cemetery and a federal cemetery are located here. Among the educational institutions are a state college of agricultural and mechanical arts, with 600 students, a Baptist university, a Presbyterian institute, etc. Cotton and tobacco products are the leading articles of commerce. The largest manufacturing establishments are flour-mills, phosphate works, cotton-mills, and cottonseed-oil mills. The site of the present city was selected in 1792 by the legislature for the location of the state capital, and, in the same year, the city was founded and named in honor of Sir Walter Raleigh. In 1794 the legislature held its first session here. The city was occupied by Gen. Sherman during a part of 1865.

Rampur, India (United Provinces), is the capital of a native state of the same name, and has manufactories of damask, pottery, and jewelry.

Ramsgate, England (Kent), is a popular seaside resort with very bracing air, and has a handsome esplanade and a marine drive. Queen Victoria, before her accession to the throne, often resided here. It contains a Jewish theological college (1867), which has a valuable collection of Hebrew manuscripts.

Randers, Denmark (Jutland), has manufactories of iron, machinery, gloves, and watches. It possesses an interesting church dating from the 14th century.

Rangoon, India (cap. Lower Burma), is the chief port and coaling station of Burma, situated on a branch of the Irawadi River, 21 miles from the sea. It exports teak, petroleum, rice, and spices. Rangoon came into British possession in 1852, and since then it has been transformed into a prosperous modern mercantile city.

Ratibor, Germany (Prussia), has railway shops and manufactories of glass, iron, and steel.

Ratisbon, Germany (Bavaria), is exceptionally rich in mediæval remains and works of art. The cathedral of St. Peter was commenced in 1275. It has manufactories of tobacco, machinery, pencils, and soap. Six miles below the town, above the Danube, stands the Walhalla, or hall of fame for distinguished Germans. The town was founded by Tiberius, and was known to the Romans as Castra Regina. It was the capital of the Eastern Franks in the 9th century. Near the cathedral is the hall in which the German Diets held their meetings from 1645 to 1806. Numerous ecclesiastical councils have been held here.

Ravenna, Italy (cap. Ravenna), has numerous churches and monasteries, notably the cathedral or Basilica Ursiana, San Giovanni in Fonte, San Francesco (with Dante's tomb, 1482), Santo Spirito, and San Vitale. There is an Academy of Fine Arts and a famous library. It is the seat of an archbishop. The principal trade is in wine, silks, musical instruments, glass, soap, and starch. It was in old times a seaport and Augustus made it the headquarters of his Adriatic fleet. Under the succeeding emperors it became one of the chief cities of Italy. It was because of its strength as a fortress (owing to the marshes) that in 404 A. D. the emperor Honorius took up his abode there. From that time until about 750 Ravenna was considered the capital of Italy.

Rawalpindi, India (Punjab), has a military cantonment and an arsenal. It was the scene of the surrender of the Sikhs after the battle of Gujarat (1849).

Bawtenshall, England (Lancashire), has cotton, woollen, slipper, and carpet-felt factories, coal-mines, and stone-quarries.

Reading, England (cap. Berkshire), has considerable trade, and manufactures of biscuits, iron, etc. It contains ruins of a Benedictine abbey, founded in 1121. It was the headquarters of the Danes in their inroad on Wessex in 871, and the scene of one of their defeats; was burned by the Danes in 1006; and was taken by the Parliamentarians under the Earl of Essex in 1643.

Reading, Pennsylvania (c. h. Berks Co.), is a trade and manufacturing center in an agricultural region, in which there is great mineral wealth. The chief industries are connected with iron and steel productions, but the coal-mines and limestone quarries contribute much to the industrial wealth of the city. It has large railroad shops, machine-shops, foundries, potteries, paper and wood pulp mills, carriage works, and iron and steel works. It was first settled by the Germans, but later a number of English colonies settled here and named the place after Reading, England. It was laid out in 1748.

Recklinghausen, Germany (Prussia), has manufactures of damask, tobacco, cabinet wares, etc. Coal is mined here.

Reggio, Italy (cap. Reggio di Calabria), is the seat of an archbishop, and has a fine cathedral. It manufactures perfumes, silks, and terra-cotta. Reggio, the ancient Rhegium, was founded by Calceidians about 720 B. C. It was partially destroyed by an earthquake (91 B. C.). Having become a Roman municipium (88 B. C.), it was made the headquarters of the Roman fleet and army by Octavius in the war with Sextus Pompeius. It was annexed to the kingdom of Naples early in the 16th century. Enormous damage was done by earthquakes in 1783, 1894, and 1908.

Reggio nell' Emilia, Italy (cap. Reggio nell' Emilia), is the seat of a bishop. Among the numerous churches the most picturesque is that of the Madonna della Ghiara, constructed in 1597. Reggio is the birthplace of the poet Ariosto and of the astronomer Secchi.

Regina, cap. Saskatchewan, Canada, is a railroad and trade center in the midst of a rich agricultural district. It has considerable wholesale trade in agricultural implements and merchandise. It is the seat of a collegiate institute and a normal school. A Dominion land-office is located here.

Reichenberg, Austria (Bohemia), is a center of cloth industry, and woollens, carpets, machinery, and leather are manufactured. The industrial Museum for Northern Bohemia is located here.

Remscheid, Germany (Prussia), is the center of the German cutlery trade, and does an enormous export business.

Rennes, France (cap. Ille-et-Vilaine), is an important railway center, and has manufactures of sail-cloth, table linen, leather, and agricultural implements. The ancient capital of Brittany, it was almost destroyed by fire in 1720. The principal edifice is the stately law-courts (1618), the parliament house of the states of Brittany. Rennes is the seat of an archbishop. The town hall contains an exceptionally fine picture-gallery. It is the birthplace of General Boulanger (1837-91), and here, in 1899, Dreyfus was tried for the second time.

Reno, Nevada (c. h. Washoe Co.), is a railroad and trade center in an agricultural region, largely under irrigation. It has large reduction works and manufactures of machinery, brick, etc. It is the seat of the state university.

Rensselaer, New York (Rensselaer Co.), is a residential and manufacturing suburb of Albany, and has felt factories, tannery, aniline works, etc.

Resht, Persia, has a trade in raw silk and cocoons, and exports rice, fruit, tobacco, textiles, cotton dyes, and wood.

Reus, Spain (Tarragona), has silk, calico, soap, and leather manufactures, and iron-smelting works.

Reval, Russia (cap. Esthonia), is a port and coaling station on the Gulf of Finland. It has a 13th century Danish castle, now the governor's residence, and other noteworthy buildings. The chief manufactures are cotton, paper, leather, hosiery, liquors, and ices. The chief exports are cheese, flax, oats, rye, linseed, joiners' materials, skins, pigs' bristles, game, hides, leather, and spirit of wine. Reval was founded in 1219-28 as a Danish town, and from 1238 it was a Hanseatic trade center. In 1346 it was sold by Denmark to the Teutonic Knights; in 1561 it became Swedish; in 1710 it was captured by Peter the Great, and definitely became Russian in 1721.

Revere, Massachusetts (Suffolk Co.), is a residential suburb of Boston and a summer resort. It has a state bath-house built and maintained by the state. It was settled in 1627.

Rheims, France (Marne), is a strongly fortified town, and an important railway center. It lies in a sheep-feeding district; hence its large manufacture of woollens, especially merino, and mixed silk and wool fabrics. It is also the headquarters for the production of champagne. Rheims is the seat of an archbishop, is renowned for its historic associations, and, above all, for its cathedral, begun in 1212, one of the finest specimens of Gothic architecture in Europe. Other notable structures are the archbishop's palace; the Romanesque church of St. Rémy or Remigius (1160-80), which contains the saint's tomb; and the Porta Martis, one of the old Roman gates of the city. Christianity became established here in the 4th century, and under Rémy, who was its bishop (459-533), Rheims first asserted its claim to be the coronation place of the kings of France—a privilege abolished in 1830. It is the birthplace of Colbert, the famous finance minister of Louis XIV.

Rheydt, Germany (Prussia), has manufactures of silks and velvets, cotton goods, machinery, and colored paper.

Rhondda, Wales (Glamorgan), is a center of coal-mining and iron industry.

Richmond, England (Surrey), is a suburb of London, and was for centuries a favorite royal residence; here died Edward III. and Queen Elizabeth. The Old Park on the north includes Kew Gardens; on the south is the New Park. White Lodge, in the park, was long the residence of the Duke and Duchess of Teck, and here was born Prince Edward of Wales (1894).

Richmond, Indiana (c. h. Wayne Co.), is the commercial and industrial center of a productive agricultural region. The chief manufactures are agricultural implements, carriages, milling machinery, threshing-machines, clothing, flour, and dairy products. A Friends' college and a Roman Catholic academy are located here; as well as a state insane hospital. It was settled in 1816 by Friends from North Carolina.

Richmond, cap. Virginia (c. h. Henrico Co.), is the largest city of the state, and a thriving commercial and industrial center, situated at the head of navigation on the James River. The chief industries of the city are connected with the preparation of tobacco, there being over fifty establishments for this purpose. It also has large foundries and machine-shops, locomotive works, extensive fertilizer works, carriage works, lumber mills, railroad car shops, etc. It has an extensive wholesale trade with all parts of the South. The James River furnishes water-power, which is used largely for manufacturing, also for propelling the street cars and lighting the city. It was settled in 1737 on the site of the home of the famous Indian chief, Powhatan, and had still only a few hundred inhabitants when made capital of the state in 1779. In 1861, it became the seat of government for the seceding states, and the capture of Richmond became ultimately the chief objective point of the Union troops. It was defended with great stubbornness by the Confederates, who threw up strong lines of earthworks all around it. On April 2, 1865, the city was evacuated, and a large part of it was destroyed. All traces of this devastation have been removed, and the city is now in thriving condition.

Riga, Russia (cap. Livonia), is a port and coaling station on the Duna, 5 miles from the Gulf of Riga, and an important industrial center. The chief exports are flax, timber, eggs, grain, hides and skins, oil-cake, and linseed. The harbor is ice-free from April to November. Riga has machine works, breweries, distilleries, and sawmills. The cathedral (with one of the largest organs in the world) and the castle are notable. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop and of a Roman Catholic bishop.

Rimini, Italy (Forli), has iron-works and silk-mills, and a trade in silks and sulphur. The church of St. Francesco, now the cathedral, built in the 14th century, assumed its present form in 1450. The municipal buildings contain a famous collection of paintings. Among the noteworthy monuments is a bronze statue of Pope Paul V., and a memorial, dating from the 15th century, of the crossing of the Rubicon by Caesar. The library was founded in 1617. Among the Roman antiquities is the Porta Romana, a triumphal arch. The Palazzo Ruffo was the scene of the murder (1285) of Francesca da Rimini, immortalized by Dante. Rimini, the ancient Ariminum, was made a bishopric in 260, and the celebrated council of Arians and Athanasians was held here in 359. The Malatesta family occupied the town in the 13th century, until it was ceded to Venice (1503).

Rio de Janeiro, cap. Brazil (Rio de Janeiro), is the largest city of Brazil, its chief commercial center, and a port and coaling station. It has under construction one of the finest systems of docks in South America. The Cattete palace is the residence of the president; the Palacete Itamaraty, official residence of the minister of foreign affairs, has been the scene of many historical events; and the government printing-office is one of the finest edifices in the city. The botanical garden, cathedral, university, national museum, and the observatory on Morro do Castello should be mentioned. There are also a conservatory of music, and military and naval academies. The climate is unhealthy, yellow fever and tuberculosis being very prevalent. Coffee forms two-thirds of the total exports, though gold, manganese, and hides are also exported. In 1762 it was made the capital of the state of Brazil, to which Maranhao (northern Brazil) was attached in 1774. It was the residence of the Portuguese court 1808-21, and became the capital of the empire of Brazil in 1823. Until 1834 it was also the capital of the province of Rio de Janeiro. The revolution of 1889 occurred here, and in 1893 the city was bombarded during the naval rebellion.

Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil (Rio Grande do Sul), has a good port and a large trade in hides, tobacco, and dried meats. It contains breweries and tanneries. The city is the location of a Protestant Episcopal missionary bishopric and has a theological seminary.

Riverside, California (c. h. Riverside Co.), is a rich residential city and winter resort in the heart of the orange growing region. Sherman Institute, a famous Indian school, is located here.

Rixdorf, Germany (Prussia), is a suburb of Berlin and has manufactories of linoleum, woollen and leather goods.

Roanne, France (Loire), is at the head of navigation of the Loire, and has a large transit trade, handling the manufactures of Lyons, the iron and coal of St. Etienne, and Levant wares. It has cotton manufactures, and is an entrepôt for agricultural produce.

Roanoke, Virginia (Roanoke Co.), is the trade center of a rich agricultural and mining section. It has extensive iron manufacturing interests, rolling-mills, locomotive and car shops, iron furnaces, bridge works, etc. The Virginia College for young ladies is located here.

Rochdale, England (Lancashire), manufactures woollens, cottons, velvet and plush; there are also large iron-works. The church of St. Chad (12th century) retains portions of ancient architecture. The town hall is a handsome modern structure, and a bronze statue commemorates John Bright, long closely associated with the town.

Rochefort, France (Charente-Inférieure), is a fortified port and naval arsenal. There are ship-building, cannon foundries, and similar military industries. The naval hospital is one of the best in Europe. Rochefort's commerce consists in salt, timber, oysters, salt fish, and colonial wares. It was here that Napoleon surrendered to Captain Maitland of the Bellerophon, July, 1815.

Rochester, England (Kent), has agricultural implement and cement works. The bishopric was founded early in the 7th century. The cathedral dates chiefly from the 11th and 12th centuries. The church of St. Margaret, rebuilt 1829, dates from the 11th century. A museum is installed in Eastgate House, 16th century. Other buildings are the 17th century Guildhall and Watt's Charity House (1579).

Rochester, New York (c. h. Monroe Co.), is the third city of the state, and one of the most important commercial and industrial centers of the country. The Genesee River, which runs through the center of the city, has here, in the upper and lower falls, a descent of 176 ft. Among the chief industrial interests are the manufactures of clothing, and of boots and shoes. Rochester is the home of the camera, and practically all of the film cameras that are made in the world are manufactured here, as well as a majority of all the plate cameras; the city leads in other photographic apparatus, also in the making of optical instruments. It has extensive fruit canning works. The nursery interests in and around the city are very extensive, and several large seed houses are located here. The University of Rochester, founded in 1850, has a faculty of 23 instructors, with upwards of 300 students. The Rochester Athenaeum and Mechanics' Institute gives instruction in practical arts and sciences to about 4,000 students and ranks high among the technical trade schools of the country; there are numerous other educational institutions. A state hospital for the insane is located here. The city was settled in 1812. On March 17, 1865, a great flood damaged property to the extent of over $1,000,000 and on February 26, 1904, a fire devastated a large portion of the dry goods district, causing a loss of over $3,000,000.

Rockford, Illinois (c. h. Winnebago Co.), is one of the most important industrial centers of northern Illinois. The chief manufactures are agricultural implements, furniture, silver-plated ware, watches, flour, and grape sugar. It is the seat of Rockford College for women. It was settled in 1834.

Rock Island, Illinois (c. h. Rock Island Co.), is the seat of a government arsenal and armory located on an island in the Mississippi River. It has extensive manufactories of agricultural implements, lumber mills, and a number of smaller industries. A Lutheran college and several other educational institutions are located here. It was settled in 1726.

Rome, cap. Italy (cap. Rome), is the capital of the ancient world, the center of the Roman Catholic Church, and the most famous of all cities. The city is distinguished by its vast ruins, its many historic gates, and its monuments, ancient and modern. Modern Rome is enclosed by a circle of forts, 30 miles in extent. Among the existing remains of the ancient city, the Forum, Colosseum, Forum of Trajan, Cloaca Maxima, catacombs, Pantheon, column of Aurelius, theater of Marcellus, pyramid of Cestius, arches of Constantine, Titus, and Septimius Severus, baths of Titus and Caracalla, ruins on the Palatine, basilica of Constantine, temples of Concord, Fortune, Saturn, and Neptune, palace of Caligula, mausoleum of Hadrian, and column of Trajan are notable. Rome contains about 300 churches, many of them interesting from their historical associations or from the archaeological or artistic treasures preserved in them. At present St. Peter's is the largest church in the world, occupying 18,000 sq. yds.; the extreme height is 435 ft. Under the high altar is the tomb of the apostle. North of St. Peter's is the Vatican Palace, the largest in the world, covering 1½ acres, with over a thousand halls, chapels, and rooms. Originally built by Symmachus, it has been enlarged and embellished by successive popes, especially by Nicholas V. The famous Sistine Chapel, with frescoes by Michael Angelo, dates from Sixtus IV. (1481). The state apartments and loggie were adorned by Raphael with frescoes by order of Julius II. and Leo X. A picture gallery, founded by Pius VII. with the pictures restored by France in 1815, a collection of marble and bronze statuary, and a marvellous library containing 34,000 MSS., founded by Nicholas V., make the Vatican an unrivalled shrine of art and literature. A law of 1871 recognized the Vatican, with the Lateran and the Castello Gandolfo, as being outside civic jurisdiction. Another large palace is the Quirinal, the residence of the King of Italy. Rome contains many picture galleries and museums, filled with priceless art treasures, and several libraries with valuable collections of books and manuscripts. Many of the palaces and villas of the old Roman nobility have also collections of pictures and sculptures. Chief among them are the Borghese Palace, the Colonna, Doria, Farnese, Corsini, and Barberini palaces; and the Villa Borghese, Albani, Ludovisi, Medici, etc. The history of Rome was for centuries the history of the civilized world; and even after it ceased to be the capital of the empire, it was the center of civilization, and the most interesting and influential city of Christendom. Rome was the capital of a kingdom which gradually grew till the foundation of the republic in 509 B. C. The republic steadily extended, and after wars with Æquians, Volscians, Latins, Samnites, Sabines, Tarentines, etc., Rome became mistress of Italy by the middle of the 3rd century B. C. Then came the wars with Carthaginians and Macedonians, with Jugurtha and Mithridates, and Rome made herself the mistress of southern Europe, northern Africa and western Asia. First Gaul, and then southern Britain were conquered by Julius Cæsar (51 B. C.). The republic was overthrown, and Augustus, the first emperor, was at peace with all the world soon after the birth of Christ. The empire was extended to Germany and Dacia, in Parthia and Asia; but in the 3rd century A. D. the northern nations—especially the Goths and kindred tribes—began to do more than hold their own, and the empire contracted on the north. The seat of the empire was removed from Rome to Byzantium, or Constantinople, by Constantine in 330 A. D., and in 364 the empire was divided into an eastern and a western empire, Rome remaining capital of the western half. Ere long Rome was taken and retaken by the barbarians (410, 476), and, retaken again (553) by Belisarius, was made dependent on Constantinople. But as capital of the popes, new glories were in store for her; Charlemagne and Otto of Germany were crowned emperors of the West at Rome, and the city became the independent capital of the increasing papal dominions, or States of the Church, the Romagna, Bologna, and Perugia being conquered by Pope Julius II. in 1503. Rome remained the mother city of Christendom, and continued to flourish in spite of the temporary sojourn of the popes at Avignon and the short-lived republic of Rienzi (1347). Again in 1798 the French proclaimed Rome a republic, and in 1808 the city became part of the French kingdom of Italy. It was restored to the popes in 1814, who, save during the troubles of 1848-9, retained it as capital of the States of the Church, under French protection; but in 1860 the papal states revolted to Sardinia, and in 1870 Rome became part of the Italian kingdom and the national capital.

Rome, New York (Oneida Co.), is a trade and manufacturing city in a section devoted to farming and dairying. Its chief industrial establishments are brass and copper mills, locomotive works, knitting mills, and canneries. A state asylum for incurable insane is located here. It was settled in 1760.

Rosario, Argentina (Santa Fe), is a port and coaling station on the Parana River 240 miles from its mouth, the second city of Argentina, and an important railway center. It exports wheat, linseed-oil, wool, hides, etc. It is the seat of a national college.

Rostock, Germany (Mecklenburg-Schwerin), manufactures machinery, ships, chocolate, chemicals, furniture, and beer. The university, founded in 1419, is attended by some 540 students.

Rostof, Russia (Yaroslavl), is an iron-manufacturing center, and makes candles, wax, tallow, linen, vinegar, soap, leather, white lead, treacle, and sweetmeats; has also tanneries, breweries, distilleries, and brick works. The church of the Assumption was founded in 1230, and has a famous belfry built about 1590; the Spasso-Yakovlevskii monastery has a renowned treasury. It is a center of pilgrimage, and the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop.

Rotherham, England (York), has steel and iron-works, glass manufactures, and coal-mines.

Rotterdam, Netherlands (South Holland), is the chief port and coaling station of Netherlands and its second city in size. About 50 per cent. of the total imports by sea into the Netherlands, and almost as large a proportion of the sea-borne exports, pass through Rotterdam, and in addition, 80 per cent. of the Rhine traffic. Grain, timber, dyewoods, metals, hardware, petroleum, drugs and chemicals, rice, coffee, tobacco, and palm kernels are the principal exports. The chief industrial establishments are machine and engineering shops, sugar, tobacco, and metal factories, and distilleries. There is also ship-building. It is one of the chief emigration ports of the continent. The principal church (15th century) possesses a famous organ. Rotterdam has a well-known picture gallery, the Museum Boymans (1864-7), with works by Rembrandt, Cuyp, Bol, Eeckhout Hobbema, and others. There are also a national museum, a marine museum, an academy of the fine arts, and a music school. Erasmus, the poet Tollens, the statesman Van Hogendorp, Grinling Gibbons, and James, Duke of Monmouth, were natives of the town. Rotterdam was burned in 1563, and was taken by the Spaniards in 1572. It developed rapidly in the 19th century.

Roubaix, France (Nord), is the first woollen manufacturing town of France, and possesses a famous "conditioning house" for testing wool and woolsens.

Rouen, France (cap. Seine-Inférieure), is a port on the Seine, an important railroad center, and the chief cotton manufacturing city of France. It also has dye-works and manufactures of linen, wool, silks, hosiery, chemicals, confectionery, and paper, and engineering and ship-building works. Rouen is the seat of an archbishop, and has some of the grandest churches in France. Chief of these are the cathedral dating from the 13th century onwards, which once possessed the heart of Cœur de Lion (now transferred to the museum of antiquities); St. Maclou (15th century), in the florid style; St. Ouen (14th to 15th century), one of the most delicate and graceful of all Gothic churches; and St. Gervais, one of the oldest churches in France. Other interesting structures are the law-courts (15th century); the gate-house (1517); the famous Hôtel de Bourghéroule (1506); the belfry (1389) where the curfew still rings daily at 9 P. M.; the public library (140,000 vols.); and the museum of antiquities, which contains the finest painted glass in Europe. It is the birthplace of La Salle, the first explorer of the Mississippi River.

Roulers, Belgium (West Flanders), has manufactures of linen and cotton goods, lace, and silk ribbons.

Rowley Regis, England (Stafford), has iron-works, collieries, potteries, and manufactures of anchors, chains, rivets, nails, and gun-barrels.

Rugby, England (Warwick), is the seat of a famous public school, founded in 1567, which has had many renowned principals. The town has large engineering works, and important cattle markets.

Rustchuk, Bulgaria, is a port on the Danube, and has manufactures of tobacco, cigars, pottery, and soap. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop and of an Armenian bishop.

Rutland, Vermont (c. h. Rutland Co.), is well known for its marble quarries, and the industries connected with the shipment of marble; the quarries are now in the suburban towns, but the marble works, which have been of considerable importance since 1830, continue here as formerly. Iron ore, fire-clay, and slate are found in the vicinity. The city also has extensive manufactories of machinery for quarrying and channeling marble, engine and boiler works, a scale factory, lumber mills, brick-yards, etc. It was settled in 1770.

rebuilt 1770) is one of the most striking in Russia. There are breweries, distilleries, and manufactories of candles, malt, cotton stuffs, and machinery.

Sacramento, cap. California (c. h. Sacramento Co.), is a port of entry and an important commercial, railway, and industrial center. Its industries include flour-mills, lumber-mills, railroad car shops, and manufactories for saddlery, harness, furniture, etc. The State Capitol building, completed in 1869, cost $2,500,000, and houses the state library of over 150,000 volumes. The Crocker Art Gallery contains pictures and California minerals, and has a school of art. In Fort Sutter Park is a reproduction of the fort established here in 1840, the first white settlement having been in 1839 by Capt. John A. Sutter. On November 3, 1852, a conflagration destroyed property exceeding $5,000,000 in value.

Saga, Japan (cap. Saga), is a port and commercial center, with trade in coal, tobacco, etc.

Sagar, India (Central Provinces), exports salt, sugar, and cloth. It has a fort and an arsenal.

Saginaw, Michigan (c. h. Saginaw Co.), is an important manufacturing, jobbing, and railroad center on the Saginaw River, 16 miles from Saginaw Bay. It manufactures a great variety of lumber products, furniture, pianos, iron and steel products, glass, salt, beet sugar, flour, etc. Bituminous coal is found in the vicinity. The Michigan Employment Institution for the Blind, a manual training school, and a German Lutheran theological seminary are located here. It was settled in 1815.

Saharanpur, India (United Provinces), is a trade center. It has an old Rohilla fort, a handsome mosque, and botanical gardens.

Saigon, cap. French Indo-China, is a port and coaling station on the Donoi River, 42 miles from the sea. It has a government palace, law-courts, cathedral, hospitals, botanical and zoological gardens, rice-mills, saw-mills, varnish, and soap factories.

Saint Catharines, Ontario, Canada, is a railroad and trade center in an agricultural and fruit growing section, with paper mills, flour mills, canneries, etc. It is the seat of Bishop Ridley College.

Saint Denis, France (Seine), is a suburb of Paris, and has a trade in corn, wine, wood, wool, and manufactures of machinery, rolling-stock, small steamers, chemicals, and soap. The abbey church of St. Denis, the patron saint of France, has been the burying-place of most of its kings since the time of Dagobert (638). Dagobert's church was rebuilt (1137-44) by Abbot Suger, and the building endured the caprices of many restorers down to the time of Napoleon III. Amongst the finest of the memorials are the tomb of Louis XII. (1498-1515); the cenotaph of Francis I. (1515-47); the tomb of Henry II. (1547-59); the monument to Francis II., and, in the 11th century crypt, the coffins of the last Bourbon sovereigns. In 1793 the contents of fifty-one tombs were flung into a heap and buried in a trench.

Saint Denis, cap. Reunion Island, is a port, with an exposed roadstead, and is the residence of the French governor of the island. It has a cathedral, and a botanical garden.

Saint Etienne, France (cap. Loire), is built on a coal-field and on an iron field, and can draw supplies of raw silk from the Rhone valley. The total annual value of ribbons made here and in the vicinity is about $20,000,000. The National Arms Factory turns out most of the small arms for the French army; and the general iron and steel manufactures include iron-mongery of all kinds, iron and steel plates, machinery castings, gun armor, and iron masts. Glass bottles are made.

Saint Gallen, Switzerland (cap. St. Gallen), is the center of the muslin, embroidery, and cotton trade. It grew up round the abbey founded in the 7th century by the Irish monk Gallus, and later became one of the principal literary centers of Europe. It was secularized in 1798, but still has a cathedral; the MSS. in its library are considered to form one of the most precious collections in Europe.

Saint Gilles, Belgium (Brabant), is a suburb of Brussels. Its industries include chemicals, perfumery, lace, flax-spinning, marble-dressing, and market-gardening.

Saint Helens, England (Lancashire), has manufactures of glass and chemicals, and coal and fire-clay are worked.

Saint Henri, Quebec, Canada, is a suburb of Montreal.

Saint Hyacinthe, Quebec, Canada, is a trade center in a prosperous agricultural region. Its industries include boots and shoes, spinning wheels, organs, threshing machines, etc. It is the seat of a Dominican college and convent.

Saint John, New Brunswick, Canada, is a port and coaling station on the Bay of Fundy, and the commercial metropolis of the province. It exports lumber, grain, and meat. It has large sawmills, extensive fisheries, and manufactories of iron castings, engines, machinery, tools, cotton goods, woolen goods, boots and shoes, pulp, etc. It was settled chiefly by American loyalists at the close of the Revolution; was chartered as a city in 1785, and was partly destroyed by fire in 1877.

Saint Johns, cap. Newfoundland, is a port and coaling station. Its harbor is one of the best on the Atlantic coast, and was formerly strongly fortified, but the fortifications have been allowed to fall into ruins. It has two cathedrals, the Roman Catholic being spared by the fire of 1892, which consumed more than half the city. The trade consists chiefly of supplies for the fisheries, and during the spring season the harbor is thronged with vessels. Settlement was made here by Sir Humphrey Gilbert in 1582.

Saint Joseph, Missouri (c. h. Buchanan Co.), is the third city of Missouri, and an important railroad, commercial, and industrial center on the Missouri River. It has many large wholesale establishments engaged in all branches of trade, while its stock-yards, slaughtering and packing industries are very extensive. It is also a great horse and mule market. It is located in one of the finest and wealthiest agricultural sections of the United States. A trading post was established here in 1826, which grew into a town, incorporated in 1845, and then into a city, incorporated in 1851. Its growth has been steady and, in recent years, very rapid.

Saint Louis, Missouri (c. h. Saint Louis City Co.), is the largest city of Missouri, and the principal commercial and banking center of the southwest. It is located on the west bank of the Mississippi River, 20 miles below the mouth of the Missouri River, and is a port of entry, and one of the most important railroad centers of the country, with a large river trade. Its position in the center of the great Mississippi Valley gives it an immense trade, among the staples of which are breadstuffs, packed meats, tobacco, live stock, timber, grain, wool, furs, etc. In manufactures, Saint Louis ranks fourth among the American cities, and high among the cities of the world in tobacco-making. It produces immense quantities of beer, flour, boots and shoes, hardware, stoves, railway cars, woodenwares, chemicals, drugs, etc. It has a horse and mule market which is one of the largest in the world. Washington University, noted for the breadth of its charter, includes an ordinary undergraduate department, schools of engineering, fine arts, law, medicine, dentistry, and botany, a manual training school, and schools for boys and girls. It is attended by about 2,000 university students and by about 1,000 others. Its group of buildings in the Tudor-Gothic style, is built of red Missouri granite. The School and Museum of Fine Arts is housed in the building originally erected as the Fine Arts Building of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition and contains a large collection of casts, sculptures, paintings, etc. A Roman Catholic university, founded in 1829, a College of Christian Brothers, and a state normal school are among the other educational institutions. The public library has over 200,000 volumes. The Missouri Botanical Garden contains 75 acres and is excellently equipped. The parks of Saint Louis have an area of over 2,300 acres, the largest of which is the Forest Park containing 1,370 acres. Jefferson Barracks, a United States military post, is 12 miles south of the city. Saint Louis was founded by the French in 1764 and still bears traces of its French origin in the names of some of its streets and leading families. In 1770, the Spanish authority was established here; in 1803, when the population of the city was still below 1,000, with the rest of the territory then known as Louisiana, it became a portion of the United States. It was incorporated as a city in 1822. On May 27th, 1895, Saint Louis was visited by a terrific tornado, which destroyed 300 lives and property to the value of $10,000,000. The floods of 1903 raised the river 38 ft. and did great damage in its suburb, East Saint Louis. In 1904, Saint Louis was the scene of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, held to commemorate the centenary of the purchase of Louisiana from France.

Saint Louis, a seaport and the capital of the French colony of Senegal, Africa, is built on a small low island near the mouth of the Senegal River. Bridges connect it with the N'dar Toute, a summer watering place on the right bank, and with the suburb of Bouetville, the terminus of the railway, on the left bank. The mouth of the river is rendered dangerous by a shifting bar of sand. Saint Louis is the terminus of the caravan routes from the Sahara. It is one of the finest towns in West Africa, and has a cathedral, a governor's palace, and a normal training college.

Saint Malo, France (Ille-et-Vilaine), a fortified seaport of Brittany, 51 m. N. N. W. of Rennes, by rail, on the estuary of the Rance. The town is built on a rocky islet that is surrounded with walls and connected with the mainland by a single narrow causeway. The harbor is safe but difficult of approach; the tides sometimes rise 50 ft. and storms dash over the top of the battlements. The people are principally engaged in shipping pursuits.

Saint Nazaire, France (Loire-Inférieure), a seaport situated on the north side of the estuary of the Loire, forty miles northwest of Nantes. The harbor has extensive docks to accommodate the shipping which increases rapidly. The town carries on a brisk trade and exports brandy, wine, coal, wheat and flour (these four in transit), sardines, butter, bone-dust, vegetables, dyes, glass, and toys. The main industry is iron ship-building.

Saint Nicolas, Belgium (East Flanders), is twelve miles by rail southwest of Antwerp. The town stands in the midst of the district of Waes, a densely-peopled and productive agricultural region. It has a large flax market, and manufactures cotton and woollen stuffs, lace, needles, bricks, and pottery. A flourishing trade is carried on in linens, flax, and corn.

Saint Omer, France (Pas-de-Calais), a town twenty-six m. southeast of Calais, standing on a marshy site, on the Aa River. The town is fortified. Its chief objects of interest are the Gothic cathedral (13th-15th century), with remarkable sculptures, the ruined tower and arches of the Benedictine abbey church of St. Bertin, an arsenal, a museum, and a library. A college for the education of English and Irish Catholics, opened in 1592, still exists as a seminary. The leading manufactures are tobacco pipes, tulle, cambric, cloth, and muslin.

Saint Ouen, France (Seine), is a delightful residential suburb of Paris.

Saint Paul, cap. Minnesota (c. h. Ramsey Co.), is situated at the head of navigation on the Mississippi River and ranks with its twin city of Minneapolis as the leading commercial, banking, and industrial center of the Northwest. It is a great railway center, and has a large wholesale trade by rail and river. The State Capitol, erected in 1898-1906, at a cost of $4,500,000, is a large and handsome edifice of granite and Georgia marble, and one of the most impressive and successful state capitol buildings in the United States. It has mural paintings by prominent American artists, and contains a state law library of 25,000 volumes and a state historical library of over 75,000 volumes. The Agricultural School of the University of Minnesota is located here. Another notable public building is the Auditorium, with a hall for meetings, conventions, etc., having a seating capacity of 10,000. The wholesale traffic of the city has grown to remarkable dimensions, extending over the entire western portion of the continent. It has a large trade in tea, furs, provisions, and general merchandise. It has extensive manufactures of furniture, stoves, lumber products, etc. Fort Snelling, a United States military post, lies on the west bank of the Mississippi, 6 miles southwest of the city. The first white settler, a Canadian voyager, built a house here in 1838, and in 1841 the place received its name from a chapel dedicated to Saint Paul by a French priest. In 1854, when it received a city charter, it contained 3,000 inhabitants, and since then its growth has been very rapid.

Saint Paul de Loanda (Loanda), Angola, chief town of the Portuguese possessions on the West coast of Africa. It lies on a small bay, some 210 m. S. of the mouth of the Congo River. It has broad, tree-shaded but untidy streets, several churches, forts, and the residences of the governor and bishop.

Saint Peter Port, the only town on the island of Guernsey in the English Channel. It has a good harbor, open at all tides; there is a large public school, founded 1563, and named after Queen Elizabeth; a fine church, dating from the 13th century; and a number of institutions, including libraries, a museum, and a ladies' college.

Saint Quentin, France (Aisne), has manufactures of cotton, woollens, silk, sugar, and machinery. Of great architectural interest are the City Hall (1331-1509), and a church (12th to 15th century), in the purest Gothic style. The town is a center of the cotton industries, which give employment to thousands in the making of calicoes, tulle, cretonnes, jacquets, muslin, merino, cambric, gauze, and so forth. Other manufactures are machinery, hats, paper, sugar, soap, and beer. Near Saint Quentin were fought two great battles—the first in 1557, when the French were utterly defeated by a Spanish army; the second in 1871, when the Germans destroyed a French army which was attempting to relieve Paris.

Saint Servan, France (Ille-et-Vilaine), a seaport on the estuary of the Rance.

Saint Thomas, Ontario, Canada, is a railroad and trade center, 15 m. south of London and 112 m. east of Detroit, and 9 m. north of Port Stanley on Lake Erie. The town has car shops, planing-mills, flour-mills, and foundries.

Sakai, Japan (Osaka), a town situated on the southwest of the island of Nippon, 7 m. south of Osaka. Before the rise of Osaka, Sakai was the chief commercial port of Japan.

Salamanca, Spain, a city 112 m. northwest of Madrid. The university which was founded in the 13th century was, until the close of the 17th century one of the most famous schools in Europe. In the 16th century there were here enrolled from 6000 to 8000 students; at the present time there are not more than 500. The city is still surrounded with walls, pierced by ten gates and preserves much of its mediæval appearance. The river is crossed by a bridge of twenty-seven arches, in part of Roman construction. The city possesses two cathedrals, dating from the 12th and 16th centuries, respectively, and many other interesting buildings. In the middle ages Salamanca was famous for its leather-work; at the present time its manufactures are very limited.

Salem, India (Madras), has industries of weaving, carpet manufactures and cutlery.

Salem, Massachusetts (c. h. Essex Co.), is known as the mother city of Massachusetts. It has a good harbor and considerable manufacturing interests, also a large cotton-mill, tanneries, a lead factory, chemical works, cordage works, and shoe factories. Essex Institute, containing an interesting collection of historical paintings, portraits, and relics; a library of nearly 400,000 volumes, and the Peabody Academy of Sciences, containing the East India Marine Museum, with important Japanese and other ethnological, maritime and natural history collections, are of note. Naumkeag, on the site of Salem, was first visited by Roger Conant, one of the Cape Ann immigrants, in 1626, and a permanent settlement was made here by Gov. Endicott two years later. Gov. Winthrop landed here in 1630, and for a time Salem was the capital of Massachusetts. In 1692 Salem was the scene of the extraordinary witchcraft delusion. The legislature of Massachusetts met at Salem in 1774, the last time under the English Crown, and issued a call for a Continental Congress. Privateersmen from Salem were very active during the war. After the war, Salem engaged in the East India trade, and many of its citizens attained great wealth and influence. Indeed, it is said that about 1810 a Salem merchant was the largest ship-owner in the world. Among the famous natives of Salem are Nathaniel Hawthorne, who was Surveyor of the Port here from 1846 to 1850; W. H. Prescott, the historian; Maria S. Cummins, author of "The Lamplighter"; Pierce, the mathematician; and W. W. Story, the sculptor.

Salem, cap. Oregon (c. h. Marion Co.), is the center of the most important hop-growing region in the world. It has flour-mills, woollen mills, etc. The capitol is an imposing building, and state institutions for deaf and dumb, blind, and insane, and a penitentiary are located here. It is the seat of a Methodist Episcopal university.

Salerno, Italy (cap. Salerno), is the seat of an archbishop, and has a cathedral dating from the 11th century. It was famous in the middle ages for its medical school.

Salford, England (Lancashire), is a suburb of Manchester, with extensive manufacturing interests.

Salisbury, England (Wiltshire), has a famous cathedral, founded in 1220, which is a beautiful example of early English architecture. The cloisters, built in the 13th century, are the most perfect in England, and form a quadrangle 181 ft. square. The spire, 404 ft., was added in the 14th century, and is the loftiest in England. Within the close are the chapter-house, the library, the episcopal palace, and the deanery. Salisbury contains three other ancient churches, and several mediæval buildings.

Saloniki, Greece (cap. Saloniki), is a port and coaling station at the head of the Gulf of Saloniki, and the second city in size and commercial importance in the country. Of particular interest are the antiquities, notably its ancient churches and a Roman triumphal arch. The city is overlooked by an ancient citadel. Its industries include cotton-mills, soap-works, and silk manufactories. It exports chiefly corn, tobacco, opium, cotton, cocoons, wool, and hides. Founded 315 B. C., it became the capital of Macedonia. Under the name of Thessalonica it was visited by St. Paul. In 904 the Saracens sold 22,000 of the inhabitants as slaves. It was wrested from Venice by the Turks in 1430.

Saltillo, Mexico (cap. Coahuila), contains a cathedral, has cotton-mills, and is noted for its woollen shawls.

Salt Lake City, cap. Utah (c. h. Salt Lake Co.), is the metropolis of the state, an important railroad and mining center, and the center of trade for the vast "intermountain" region. Great smelters for the reduction of ores are located in and near the city, and it has large beet-sugar factories and manufactories of iron products, machinery, etc. Fort Douglas, a United States military post, is situated on a plateau 500 ft. above and about 3 miles from the heart of the city. It is the headquarters of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormons), and the home of the president and many of the high officers of the church. The Temple, Tabernacle, and Assembly Hall occupy a square in the central portion of the city. The Tabernacle, built in 1864-7, is a huge and extraordinary structure, in the shape of an oval or ellipse, 250 ft. long, 150 ft. wide, and 70 ft. high. It is surmounted by a wooden roof with iron shingles, resembling the shell of a turtle or the inverted hull of a ship, supported by 44 sandstone pillars. The Temple is a large and handsome building of granite, erected in 1853-93 at a cost of over $4,000,000. It is 186 ft. long from east to west and 99 ft. wide. At each end are 3 pointed towers, the loftiest of which, in the center of the eastern or principal facade, is 210 ft. high and is surmounted by a colossal gilded figure of the Angel Moroni. The Assembly Hall, to the south of the Tabernacle, is a granite building with accommodation for 3,000 people, intended for divine service. Salt Lake City was founded in 1847 by the Mormons, under Brigham Young, who had been driven from Nauvoo the previous year and had made a long and perilous journey across the Indian-haunted plains. The district was then a barren and unpromising desert, but the industrious Mormons set to work at once to plough and plant, and began that system of irrigation, which has drawn out the latent capabilities of the soil and made the Utah valleys among the most productive regions in the country.

Salzburg, Austria (cap. Salzburg), is a town noted for its picturesque situation, and one of the principal touring resorts of Austria. It is also an important railway center. It is the birthplace of Mozart, and of Hans Makart, the painter.

Samara, Russia (cap. Samara), is a port on the Volga, and an important railway center with large trade in grain. Its industries include tanneries, flour-mills, breweries, brick-works, iron and bell metal foundries. It is the seat of an Orthodox bishop, and has two old cathedrals, built in 1685 and 1730-5, and one completed in 1894; also a museum of natural history and archaeology.

Samarang, Java, is a fortified town, and one of the most important commercial centers of the island. Has no port, but vessels a mile out at sea take away sugar, coffee, tobacco, and indigo.

Samarkand, Russia (Russian Turkestan), has an active commerce and manufactures of cotton, silk, etc. Among the objects of interest are the grave of Timur, the citadel, three colleges, and neighboring ruins. The ancient city was destroyed by Alexander the Great. In the middle ages Samarkand was a large and flourishing city, renowned as a seat of learning. It was taken and destroyed by Jenghiz Khan in 1219; became the capital of Timur in 1369; and was annexed to Russia in 1868.

San Angelo, Texas (c. h. Tom Green Co.), is an important trade center in an agricultural region, largely devoted to dry farming.

San Antonio, Texas (c. h. Bexar Co.), is one of the largest cities of Texas, and an important railroad and trade center. It has large flouring-mills, cotton-presses, cement works, oil-mills, broom works, etc., and is a prominent cotton, wool, horse, mule, and cattle market, as well as the financial center of a very extensive stock-raising section. It is surrounded by an agricultural region supplied with water from artesian wells. In and near the city are numerous medicinal springs. Fort Sam Houston, an important military post and headquarters of the department of Texas, is located here. There is also a United States arsenal for storage of ordnance supplies and the manufacturing and repairing of equipment. It is frequented as a winter resort, and is noted for its old Spanish mansions near the city, having been settled by the Spaniards about 1690. The Church of the Mission del Alamo, which seems to have derived its name from having been built in a grove of alamo or cottonwood trees, is a low and strong structure of adobe, with very thick walls, built in 1744, and preserved as a national monument. The most salient event in San Antonio's history is the "Fall of the Alamo" in 1836. Texas had determined to resist certain obnoxious laws imposed by Mexico, and the latter sent an army under Santa Ana to reduce the rebels. The advance-guard of 4,000 men reached San Antonio on Feb. 22nd, and found the fortified Church of the Alamo garrisoned by a body of 145 Americans (afterwards joined by 25 or 30 more), under Travis, Bowie, and Davy Crockett, who refused to surrender. After a siege of 12 days, the church was finally carried by assault (March 6th) and all the survivors of the gallant little band of defenders were put to the sword.

San Diego, California (c. h. San Diego Co.), is a port of entry and an important health resort and trading center on San Diego Bay, with one of the best harbors on the California coast. It is noted for its climate, which is mild and equable. It is the commercial center of a region in which are produced large quantities of nuts, fruit, and honey, and has flour and planing-mills, machine-shops, wagon works, etc. It is a naval coaling station, and has a United States garrison. Coronado Beach, on a small peninsula opposite the city, is a favorite resort. The Mission of San Diego, 6½ miles from the city, was the first settlement made by white men in California. The bay was discovered in 1542.

Sandusky, Ohio (c. h. Erie Co.), is a port of entry on Sandusky Bay, and has one of the best landlocked harbors on Lake Erie. It is a trade and manufacturing center in a fertile agricultural region, of which the chief productions are grapes, peaches, apples, and grain. Fishing is an important industry of the city, and a large amount of wine is shipped. The chief industrial establishments are factories, in which are made baskets and crates for the shipment of grapes and peaches; cooperages, in which are made casks for the shipment of wine; machine-shops; engine, boiler, threshing-machine, and cement works; flour-mills; and furniture factories. There are large coal and lumber yards. Considerable coal is brought here for manufacture and reshipment, and the ship-building industry is also important. The United States hatchery at Put-in-Bay encourages the fish industry. A state sailors' and soldiers' home, with accommodations for 1,600 persons, is located here.

San Francisco, California (c. h. San Francisco Co.), is the largest city in California, also the largest on the western coast of America or in the United States west of the Mississippi River. It is a port of entry situated on a peninsula between the Bay of San Francisco and the Pacific Ocean, with a sheltered harbor about 90 miles long and from 5 to 15 miles wide, having excellent anchorage ground and an abundance of deep water. It is extensively engaged in the manufacture of mining machinery, the canning of fruits and vegetables, ship-building, etc., and the principal industrial establishments are sugar and molasses refineries, slaughtering and meat-packing houses, leather manufactories, foundries, machine-shops, smelting works, etc. It is an important railroad terminus and has a large wholesale trade in merchandise of every description. Its foreign commerce is very extensive, and among the chief exports are gold and silver, wine, fruit, wool, oil, lumber, flour, and breadstuffs. The principal imports are tea from China and Japan. A United States branch mint, ranking second in the country, is located here. A large part of the city was destroyed by earthquake and fire in 1906, but the business district has been rebuilt in an improved manner, and is now noted for its modern commercial buildings, magnificent hotels, etc.: One of the most interesting historical relics of San Francisco is the old Mission Dolores, dating from about 1778; the old church is built of adobe and is adjoined by a tangled and neglected little churchyard. Among the educational institutions of the city may be mentioned the Cooper Medical College, the Medical Department of the University of California, the Cogswell Polytechnic School, and the California School of Mechanical Arts. The Presidia, or government military reservation, has an area of 1,500 acres and stretches along the Golden Gate for about 4 miles. Golden Gate Park, having an area of 1,013 acres, contains a museum, Japanese teagarden, etc. The city was founded in 1835. In 1848, the year of the discovery of gold in California, its population was about 500; in 1850 it was about 25,000, and, in each decade, it has seen an extraordinary increase.

San José, California (c. h. Santa Clara Co.), is situated in a fertile agricultural region, the beautiful Santa Clara Valley, famed for the variety and amount of its fruit. It has large canneries, packing-houses, and shipping industries connected with the fruit industry, also flour-mills, lumber mills, grain elevators, woollen factories, basket and box factories, machine-shops, etc. It has a considerable wholesale trade. Among the educational institutions are a state normal school, a Methodist Episcopal university, a Roman Catholic college, etc. On account of its equable climate, it is much frequented by tourists, and is a delightful residential city. The first settlement was made here about 1770 and the pueblo of San José was established in 1782. It was the state capital under the first constitution of California.

San José, cap. Costa Rica, is a well-built city, which contains a cathedral, a university, a national museum, and one of the finest opera-houses in Central America. The city was founded about 1738, and has been the capital, except for short intervals, since 1824.

San Juan, Porto Rico (cap. San Juan), is a fortified port and the largest city of Porto Rico. The harbor is excellent, affording anchorage for the largest ships,—the only good harbor in Porto Rico and one of the best in the West Indies. The entrance, however, is very narrow, and difficult in stormy weather. The chief exports are tobacco, sugar, and coffee. It contains a number of notable public buildings, including the bishop's palace, a large cathedral, the old government building, the city hall, the Casa Blanca, the custom-house, a military hospital, and an arsenal. A new capitol is being built. San Juan was founded in 1511 and was the seat of the Spanish provincial government. It was bombarded by the U. S. fleet under Admiral Sampson in May, 1898.

San Juan del Norte, Nicaragua, Central America, is the chief port of Nicaragua on the Caribbean Sea. Exports mahogany, rubber, bananas, hides, and indigo. Steamers run from here up the San Juan River into Lake Nicaragua.

San Luis Potosí, Mexico (cap. San Luis Potosí), is an important railroad center, with a large trade in cattle, hides, and wool. The famous silver mines worked in the neighborhood since the end of the 16th century are now almost abandoned. It has handsome public buildings including a cathedral, a university, and a city hall.

San Miguel, Salvador, Central America, is the center of a fertile agricultural region, and has a trade in indigo.

San Salvador, cap. Salvador, Central America, has more than once been destroyed by earthquakes. It contains a university, a cathedral, a national museum and library, and an observatory. It has an active trade in agricultural products, particularly indigo.

San Sebastian, Spain (cap. Guipuscoa), is the most fashionable seaside resort of Spain and one of the most picturesque places in Europe, with a magnificent beach and splendid parks. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop. It has flour- and saw-mills, iron foundries, and manufactures of cloth and hats, and exports lead, copper, iron, and cement.

Santa Ana, Salvador, Central America, is the center of a sugar-growing district, which has also rich deposits of iron, copper, silver, and zinc.

Santa Barbara, California (c. h. Santa Barbara Co.), is one of the most attractive winter resorts of California, noted for the beauty of its surroundings, the luxuriance of its roses and other flowers, and its excellent bathing beach. The old mission, founded by Padre Junipero Serra in 1786, is one of its attractions.

Santa Cruz, Canary Island (cap. Tenerife), is a port and coaling station. Exports wine, almonds, cochineal, sugar, and agricultural products.

Santa Fé, Argentina (cap. Santa Fé), is a port on the Paraná River and an important railway center, with large exports of cattle, wool, and lumber. It has a cathedral, a normal school, and a seminary for priests.

Santander, Spain (cap. Santander), is a port on the Bay of Biscay with a large foreign trade, chiefly in iron ore. Fishing is carried on and tobacco is manufactured. It is the seat of an archbishop.

Santiago, cap. Chile (cap. Santiago), contains a Congress house which is one of the handsomest buildings of the kind in South America; the government house, used as a mint under Spanish rule, is an imposing edifice. Other important buildings are the cathedral, university, archiepiscopal palace, the municipal offices, the national museum, and observatory. The city was damaged by earthquake on Aug. 16, 1906, but has been largely rebuilt.

Santiago, Spain (Coruna), is the seat of an archbishop, and is famous for its superb Romanesque cathedral, the shrine of St. James (Sant' Iago) the Great, patron saint of Spain. It was formerly a great place of pilgrimage. A decaying university still exists.

Santiago de Cuba, Cuba (cap. Oriente), is a port and coaling station, with a magnificent landlocked harbor, and is the second city of the island in size and importance. It is situated in the center of a rich mineral district, and exports iron ore, manganese, and copper, as well as sugar, tobacco, and coffee. In the Spanish-American War of 1898, the Spanish fleet under Cervera was blockaded inside the harbor by an American fleet under Sampson, and when the Spanish fleet attempted to escape, it was destroyed outside the harbor entrance, July 3, 1898.

Santo Domingo, cap. Santo Domingo, West Indies, is a port, and perhaps the most perfect specimen of the 16th century Spanish city in America. In the old cathedral are buried many of the notable characters of early American history, including the family of Columbus. Another landmark is the castle of Columbus. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic archbishop, and of a university, founded in 1730. It exports sugar and coffee.

Santos, Brazil (São Paulo), is a port and coaling station, whose chief export is coffee. It claims to be the greatest coffee shipping port in the world. The church of Our Lady of Montserrat, on a hill overlooking the town, is one of the oldest shrines in Brazil.

Sao Paulo, Brazil (cap. São Paulo), is the second city of Brazil, the center of its coffee-growing region, and an important railroad and industrial point. It is a modern, handsome city, and among its fine buildings are the cathedral, the treasury, the government building, and the Ypiranga Palace, a magnificent structure erected to commemorate the Declaration of Independence. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop. Sao Paulo was founded by Jesuits in 1554 as a mission station.

Sapporo, Japan (Hokkaido), is the seat of an agricultural college, and has a museum and a botanical garden.

Saragossa, Spain (cap. Saragossa), has manufactures of silk and woollen goods. Among its noteworthy features are the cathedral, university (1474), leaning clock tower (Torre Nueva), and the seven-arched bridge (1437) over the Ebro. After being captured from the Moors, Saragossa became the capital of Aragon in 1118. The French attacked it in 1808 and 1809; Agustina, the "Maid of Saragossa," aided in the defense.

Sarajevo, Austria (Bosnia), has manufactures of tobacco, brass, copper, iron goods, pottery, and silk. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop and has a cathedral.

Saratof, Russia (cap. Saratof), is a trading center for east Russia, and has flour-mills, oil-presses, tobacco factories, distilleries, and iron-works. A society of naturalists maintains a biological station.

Saratoga Springs, New York (Saratoga Co.), is a noted watering-place famous for its saline mineral springs. The waters are cathartic, tonic, alterative, and diuretic. On account of its spacious hotels, which can accommodate about 20,000 visitors, and convention halls, one of the latter seating 5,000, it is a favorite place for political conventions. The first hotel was erected here in 1774, and thousands visit this village to use the waters, making it one of the most popular summer resorts.

Sarnia, Ontario, Canada, is a port at the mouth of St. Clair River. It has lumber mills, engine works, salt works, etc.

Sasebo, Japan (Nagasaki), is a naval port.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, is an important trade center and the seat of the projected Provincial University. It has wood working plants, brick works, etc.

Sassari, Italy (cap. Sassari), is the seat of an archbishop and has a university, founded in 1677.

Sault Sainte Marie, Michigan (c. h. Chippewa Co.), is a port of entry near the outlet of Lake Superior on the Sault Sainte Marie ship-canal, which connects Lakes Superior and Huron, and is an important railway center. The international railroad bridge, across Saint Mary's River, connects the city with the village of the same name in Canada. The principal industrial establishments are lumber mills, machine-shops, foundries, planing-mills, flour-mills, brick works, and shingle-mills. Enormous water-power has been developed from the rapids of the Saint Mary's River. Fort Brady, a United States military post, is near by. The place was settled in 1662 by Père Marquette, and constitutes the first permanent settlement within the present limits of Michigan. It was incorporated as a city in 1887.

Sault Sainte Marie, Ontario, Canada, has extensive steel rail works, iron works, pulp and paper mills, a blast furnace, etc.

Savannah, Georgia (c. h. Chatham Co.), is the second city of Georgia, a port of entry on the Savannah River, 18 miles from its mouth, and one of the most important commercial and shipping cities of the Southern States.

It has an extensive coastwise and export trade, the chief articles being cotton, lumber, rice, and naval stores. Its industries include fertilizing plants, cotton-seed-oil mills, iron foundries, sawmills, planing-mills, rice and flour-mills, cotton-mills, machine-shops, ice factories, etc. The Telfair Academy of Arts and Sciences is located here; it contains a collection of casts, paintings, and various objects of art and historical interest. Savannah was settled in 1733 by Gen. James Oglethorpe, the founder of the youngest of the thirteen original states. In 1778, this city was captured by the British, who repulsed a Franco-American attempt to take it the following year. The port of Savannah was closed to commerce by the Federal fleet from 1861 to 1865, and Sherman occupied the city in December, 1864, at the end of his triumphant "March through Georgia." Since the war its progress has been rapid.

Savona, Italy (Genoa), is a fortified port, with manufactures of cloth, silk, paper, glass, and soap, which is supposed to have been invented here. It is the seat of a bishop, and has a cathedral dating from the 17th century.

Schaerbeek, Belgium (Brabant), is a suburb of Brussels.

Schenectady, New York (c. h. Schenectady Co.), is an important industrial center in a fertile agricultural region, having extensive manufactures of locomotives, electrical construction works, foundries and machine-shops, broom and brush factories, etc. It was settled in 1662.

Schiedam, Netherlands (South Holland), is noted for its production of gin and other liquors.

Schoneberg, Germany (Prussia), is a suburb of Berlin.

Schweidnitz, Germany (Silesia), manufactures woollen goods, leather, needles, gloves, agricultural implements, and machinery. Its beer has been famous since the 16th century.

Schwerin, Germany (cap. Mecklenburg-Schwerin), has manufactures of carriages, colors, varnish, soap, musical instruments, furniture, and bricks. It contains two palaces, a 14th-15th century cathedral, museums, and picture-galleries.

Scranton, Pennsylvania (c. h. Lackawanna Co.), is the third city of Pennsylvania, and an important railroad and industrial center in the chief anthracite coal district of the United States. There are many collieries within its limits. It has extensive iron industries, manufactures of silk and silk goods, mining machinery, etc. A famous correspondence school is located here, and the city has numerous other educational institutions. It was settled in 1788.

Seattle, Washington (c. h. King Co.), is the largest city of Washington, and an important port on Puget Sound. It has an extensive coastwise and export trade, with regular steamers to Alaskan and Asiatic ports. It is the chief entrepôt of the Alaskan gold-fields, and a large amount of gold-dust is brought to the United States Assay Office here. It is the principal commercial and industrial center of a large region containing extensive natural resources, the most important of which are lumber, fish, mines, and agricultural products. The chief exports are coal, timber, hops, and fish. The most important industrial establishments are shipyards, lumber and shingle mills, flour-mills, iron-works, rolling-mills, foundries, and wood-working establishments. The power used in a great number of the mills and factories is electricity, generated by the falls in the rivers flowing down from the Cascade Mountains. The United States Navy Yard of Puget Sound is located near by at Bremerton, on Port Orchard Bay, across Puget Sound. At Magnolia Bluff is a United States Army Post. The State University, with 1,500 students, is located here; its grounds furnished the site of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition of 1909. Among the other educational institutions are Seattle Seminary and a Roman Catholic college. The public library contains over 70,000 volumes. The city was founded in 1852 and named after an Indian chief. Almost all of the business quarter was destroyed by fire in 1889, but it has been rebuilt in a more substantial manner.

Sedalia, Missouri (c. h. Pettis Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural and coal-mining region. In the vicinity are deposits of zinc, iron, lead, and fire-clay, also beds of emery and large deposits of limestone. The chief industrial establishments are railroad shops, car shops, foundries, machine-shops, agricultural implement works, woollen mills, etc.

Selma, Alabama (c. h. Dallas Co.), is an industrial and trade center in a rich cotton-growing section. It has cotton-gins, cottonseed-oil mills, lumber mills, fertilizer works, yarn mills, etc.

Semipalatinsk, Russia in Asia (cap. Semipalatinsk), has tanneries and distilleries, and manufactures flour, soap, and candles.

Sendai, Japan (cap. Miyagi), has a trade in sh and salt.

Seoul, cap. Korea, has a Roman Catholic cathedral, a bell-tower (1468), and a marble pagoda. Since 1904 the city has been under the control of the Japanese.

Seraing, Belgium (Liège), has large engineering and machinery works.

Seres, Greece (Saloniki), is the center of the Macedonian cotton industry and exports cotton, tobacco, hides, and cocoons. It is the see of an archbishop of the Greek Church.

Sergievsk, Russia (Moscow), has a convent with fabulous treasures, which attracts hosts of pilgrims.

Serpukhof, Russia (Moscow), has a cathedral dating from 1710 and a variety of manufactures.

Sevastopol, Russia (Taurida), is the chief Russian naval port of the Black Sea, and a summer resort. It has extensive dockyards and naval arsenals, two navigation schools, a naval hospital, and a biological station. On Oct. 5, 1854, the English and allied armies invested Sevastopol, and, after one of the most famous sieges of modern history, gained possession on Sept. 8, 1855. In 1890 the commercial port was transferred to Theodosia.

Seville, Spain (cap. Seville), was the seat of a Roman colony (Hispalis), and was a Moorish kingdom from 712 until its conquest by Ferdinand III. in 1248. Its exquisite Hispano-Gothic cathedral, commenced in 1403 and finished in 1519, is one of the finest churches in the world; its Mudejar tower (Giralda) especially merits attention. This was begun in 1000 by the Moors, but its upper portion has been to some extent Christianized. It stands 350 ft. high. The Moorish palace, or Alcazar, and the Charity Hospital, with pictures by Murillo, a native of the city, deserve attention. There are also an art museum (with works by Murillo), a university, and an academy of fine arts. Seville is an archiepiscopal see. The city, once the center of the commerce with America, is still a busy and prosperous port, shipping wine, oil, fruit, lead, and cork, and having manufactures of ceramics, leather, tobacco, and machinery.

Shahjahanpur, India (United Provinces), manufactures sugar.

Shamokin, Pennsylvania (Northumberland Co.), is an industrial and commercial center in the anthracite coal region. The chief industrial establishments are foundries, machine-shops, and knitting, planing, and flour-mills; a large number of the inhabitants are employed in the mines in the vicinity. It was settled in 1835.

Shanghai, China (Kiang Su), is a treaty port and coaling station. Its facilities for distribution and the lack of deep water at the treaty ports in the north, have made it the entrepôt of all foreign trade north of Fuchau, and the greatest foreign market of the empire. Miles of wharves and five large dockyards hardly suffice for the traffic. It exports principally silk, cotton, tea, rice, hides, wool, and cereals. Cotton-spinning, silk-winding, ship-building, and the manufacture of matches, rice, paper, ice, and furniture are the chief industries. Shanghai was taken by the British in 1842, and was opened to foreign trade in the same year.

Shashi, China (Hupeh), is a treaty port on the Yangtze River. It is an important mart for cotton stuffs.

Sheboygan, Wisconsin (c. h. Sheboygan Co.), is a commercial and industrial center in a large agricultural region, and a port on Lake Michigan at the mouth of the Sheboygan River. It has large chair, furniture, boot and shoe factories, a shipyard, lime-kilns, boiler works, etc., and a large trade in cheese.

Sheffield, England (York), is the chief seat of English cutlery manufacture. Among the articles manufactured are knives, scissors, razors, tools of all kinds, rails, armor-plates, castings, surgical instruments, machinery, silver-plate, axles, etc. Its cutlery has been celebrated from early times. Mary Queen of Scots was confined in the castle between 1570 and 1584.

Shenandoah, Pennsylvania (Schuylkill Co.), is a commercial and industrial center in a region rich in anthracite coal. Several of the largest collieries in the country are located here. The chief industries of the place are connected with the mining and shipping of coal. There are machine-shops, mining-tool works, foundries, etc. It was settled in about 1850.

Sherbrooke, Ontario, Canada, has manufactures of paper, and of woollen and worsted goods.

Sheridan, Wyoming (c. h. Sheridan Co.), is the largest city of northern Wyoming, and has considerable trade in wool and lumber. Coal is mined near by.

Sherman, Texas (c. h. Grayson Co.), is a trade center in the Red River Valley, with an extensive trade in cotton and grain products. It has a cotton-gin, several large cottonseed-oil mills, flour-mills, lumber mills, furniture factories, etc. Large coal-mines are situated near by in Oklahoma. A Methodist Episcopal college and several other educational institutions are located here.

Shidzuoka, Japan (cap. Shidzuoka), has manufactures of lacquer-ware and baskets.

Shimonoseki, Japan (Yamaguchi), is a fortified seaport on the Inland Sea, near its west entrance, and has been open to foreign trade since 1890. In 1864 it was bombarded by a combined fleet of British, American, Dutch, and French vessels as a protest against the Japanese firing on foreign vessels; the Japanese paid an indemnity in 1875. The treaty signed at Shimonoseki in April, 1895, put an end to the Japanese-Chinese war.

Shiraz, Persia, exports tobacco and inlaid woodwork, and is famous for its wine.

Sholapur, India (Bombay), has manufactures of silk and cotton.

Shreveport, Louisiana (c. h. Caddo Parish), is the commercial and industrial center of the northwestern part of Louisiana, and has an extensive wholesale trade. It is situated in a rich agricultural region in which cotton is the chief product. There are several cotton-presses, cottonseed-oil mills, railroad shops, lumber- and stock-yards, etc. Its railroad facilities and opportunities for river transportation give it especial advantage as a shipping point and a jobbing place. It was incorporated as a city in 1839. During the Civil War, from the time Baton Rouge was captured by the Federal forces until the close of the war, Shreveport was the capital of the state.

Shusha, Russia (Elizavetpol), has cotton, wool, and silk mills, tanneries, dye-works, and soap factories.

Sialkot, India (Punjab), manufactures paper and cloth.

Siangtan, China (Hunan), is a great trading center. Sibonga, Philippine Islands (Cebu), is a trade center with extensive fisheries.

Siena, Italy (cap. Siena), has several very interesting public buildings, and is exceptionally rich in works of art. It is the seat of a bishop, and its cathedral, built in the 13th and 14th centuries, is a splendid example of Gothic architecture. The university was founded in 1203. The Piazza del Campo, celebrated by Dante in his Purgatorio, contains the Loggia di San Paolo, the seat of a commercial tribunal in the middle ages. Siena was the center of an art school, whose chief representatives were Buoninsegni, Sodoma, and Peruzzi.

Simbirsk, Russia (Simbirsk), is a river port, and has breweries, tanneries, distilleries, brick works, flour-mills, iron and copper foundries, and manufactures of candles, soap, malt, and potash, as well as fisheries. It is the seat of an Orthodox bishop and contains two cathedrals.

Smiferopol, Russia (cap. Taurida), is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop, and has a fine cathedral, in the Venetian style, and a museum of antiquities and natural history. There are vineyards, nursery-gardens, extensive orchards and manufactures of soap, candles, and tobacco.

Singan, China (cap. Shensi), is an important trade center.

Singapore, Straits Settlements, is a port and coaling station on the direct route between India and China, and has become the chief commercial emporium of south-eastern Asia, being at the same time a free port. The chief exports are tin, gambier, sago, tapioca, sugar, pepper, tortoise-shell, mother-of-pearl, gutta-percha, india-rubber, nutmegs and mace, camphor, gum elastic, coffee, tobacco, rice, hides, sapan-wood, stick-lac, and rattans, the trade being mostly transport trade. Singapore manufactures tapioca, sago, gambier, white pepper, tools, implements, vehicles, and furniture, and has ship-building, machine-shops, and engineering works.

Sioux City, Iowa (c. h. Woodbury Co.), is the commercial and industrial center of northwestern Iowa, northeastern Nebraska, and the southeastern part of South Dakota. It has extensive meat-packing houses, flour-mills, broom and furniture factories, stove and engine works, agricultural implement works, carriage and wagon works, tile works, creameries, etc. There are also large grain elevators, stock- and lumber-yards, and a number of wholesale houses. It was settled in 1849 by traders, and, for several years, was the place where gold seekers, going to the Black Hills, were fitted with all necessary material for gold-hunting and camp life.

Sioux Falls, South Dakota (c. h. Minnehaha Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural and stock-raising region. In the vicinity are extensive quarries of marble, Jasper, and other stones. It is situated on the Sioux River, which here has a fall of 100 ft. in a half mile, forming a series of cascades that furnish abundant water-power. It has large breweries, a basket factory, stone-quarries, flour-mills, marble-works, etc. Its trade in agricultural implements is quite large. A state penitentiary and a state children's home are located here. It was settled in 1856.

Slut, Egypt, is noted for its pipe bowls. A dam across the Nile is located here.

Sivas, Turkey in Asia, has manufactures of coarse woollen goods. Silver, lead, copper, iron, coal, and salt are abundant in the vicinity.

Skutari, Albania, has wool weaving manufactories, ship-building, and exports wool, corn, sumach, and hides.

Silvno, Bulgaria (Eastern Roumelia), has distilleries, printing works, etc.

Smethwick, England (Stafford), has iron, glass, and chemical works.

Smichow, Austria (Bohemia), is a suburb of Prague.

Smolensk, Russia (cap. Smolensk), has tanneries, brick-fields, oil works, breweries, distilleries, flour-mills, potteries, limekilns, and manufactures of soap, tallow, linen, and leather. Smolensk is one of the oldest East Slav cities; it existed before the Rurik immigration of 862, and was the capital of the Krivichi. It was an appanage of the Kiev grand princes from 882 to 1054; from 1054 to 1395 it was governed by its own princes. From 1610 to 1654 it was held by Poland, and was acquired by Russia in 1686. Here took place some of the fiercest fighting in the Napoleonic invasion of 1812.

Smyrna, Turkey in Asia, is the principal port of Asia Minor and a coaling station. Its principal industry is the manufacture of carpets, other branches being connected with machine-shops, iron-foundries, silks, cottons, woollens, and pottery. The exports consist chiefly of carpets, figs, tobacco, valonia, raisins, and silk. It is the seat of archbishops of the Greek Orthodox, Roman Catholic, and Armenian Churches. Smyrna is a very ancient city, and it claimed to be the birthplace of Homer. It was one of the seven cities addressed by John in the Revelation. It was destroyed by an earthquake in 178

A. D., and was restored by Marcus Aurelius; was occupied by the Knights of St. John in the 14th century; and was sacked by Timur in 1402. From 1424 it has been under Turkish rule.

Sofia, cap. Bulgaria, exports hides, corn, linen, cloth, and silk. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop, and of a university. It has hot mineral springs. A famous church council was held here in 343 A. D. It fell into the hands of the Turks in 1382, and the Russians occupied it in 1878.

Solingen, Germany (Prussia), is the center of an important steel manufacturing district, turning out cutlery especially.

Somerville, Massachusetts (Middlesex Co.), is a residential suburb of Boston, and, in its industrial life, is identified with Boston in many ways. It was settled in 1629 and was a part of Charlestown until 1842, when it was set off as an independent town. In 1872 it was incorporated as a city.

Southampton, England (Hampshire), is a port, a coaling station, the chief British military transport port, and the regular port of call for several important mail steamship lines. Exports cotton manufactures, apparel, leather, etc., and has yacht-building and marine engineering works. Among the most important old buildings are St. Mary's (rebuilt 1884), St. Michael's (in part Norman), Holy Rood (ancient tower and spire), the 12th century chapel of God's House, now used for French Protestant service and King John's palace (12th century). A considerable portion of the old town walls, erected by Richard II., still exist, including parts of towers and three gateways. One, Bargate, a massive structure in two stages, has a large chamber used as the Guildhall, and contains ancient paintings of the local legendary hero, Sir Bevis of Hampton, and of the giant Aescupart. During the middle ages the port had great trade with Venice; its modern prosperity dates from the opening of the new docks (1842).

South Bend, Indiana (c. h. Saint Joseph Co.), is the industrial center for a large portion of northern Indiana, and has extensive manufactures of automobiles, wagons, agricultural implements, woollen goods, paper, sewing-machine parts, furniture, boilers, electrical appliances, cutlery, harness, steel castings, indurated fiber goods, lumber, rubber stamps, etc. It is situated in a fertile agricultural region in which stock-raising receives considerable attention. Just outside the limits of the city, in the village of Notre Dame, are the large Roman Catholic schools,—the University of Notre Dame for men, and Saint Mary's College for women.

South Bethlehem, Pennsylvania (Northampton Co.), is a commercial and industrial center in a section rich in iron ore deposits and coal. The chief industrial establishments are iron and steel works, machine-shops and foundries, zinc and brass works, wood-working factories, knitting mills, silk-mills, and furniture works. A large quantity of armor-plates, shafts for marine engines, and heavy ordnance is manufactured here. It is the seat of Lehigh University (700 students), which ranks high for its work in engineering, physics, biology, and metallurgy. It was settled in 1741.

Southbridge, Massachusetts (Worcester Co.), is an industrial and commercial center, with optical works, shuttle works, woollen and cotton-mills, knife mills, etc. It was settled about 1730.

South Omaha, Nebraska (Douglas Co.), is the third city of Nebraska, and an industrial suburb of Omaha, with large stock-yards and stock markets. It is one of the largest slaughtering and meat-packing centers in the United States.

Southport, England (Lancashire), is a watering-place, with a handsome esplanade and marine drive. A marine park with lake (44 acres) fronts the shore. There are botanical gardens, a winter garden, and a zoological park. The public buildings include town hall, Cambridge Hall, Atkinson Art Gallery and Free Library, and market hall, and there are several hydro-pathic establishments.

South Shields, England (Durham), is a port on the Tyne, with manufactures of glass and chemicals, shipbuilding, iron, rope, paint and varnish works, and a great trade in coal. The parish church of St. Hilda, rebuilt about 1811, preserves its ancient tower; the town hall dates from 1768.

Spandau, Germany (Prussia), is a fortified town, 8 miles northwest of Berlin. Here is the Julius tower, containing, since 1874, the sum of $30,000,000 in coin for immediate use in case of war, the money being part of the war indemnity paid by France after the Franco-German war.

Spartanburg, South Carolina (c. h. Spartanburg Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural region, in which cotton is the principal product. It has cotton-mills, and nearby are large limestone quarries and iron-mines. It is the seat of Wofford College, founded in 1853.

Spezia, Italy (Genoa), is a strongly fortified port on the Gulf of Genoa, and the chief naval station and arsenal of Italy, with large ship-building yards and docks. It is a favorite summer resort, and in the bay Shelley lost his life.

Spokane, Washington (c. h. Spokane Co.), is an important railroad, jobbing, and manufacturing center, and the metropolis of the so-called "Inland Empire." It has extensive lumber mills and manufactories of lumber products, sewer and water-pipe works, flour-mills, flour mill machinery works, brick and terra-cotta works, foundries and machine-shops, iron works, furniture factories, etc. It is in the center of an important mining district. Spokane River, which here has a fall of 132 ft., furnishes abundant water-power, made available largely by the generation of electricity. Spokane is the commercial center of the interior Columbia River basin, which is rich in mines, lumber, and agricultural products, and an extensive distributing trade in merchandise throughout eastern Washington, Idaho, Montana, and British Columbia. Gonzaga College and several other institutions of prominence are located here. The first settlement was made in 1873, and the rapid growth of the city began with the entrance of the Northern Pacific R.R. in 1881, which has continued to this day. On August 4, 1889, the business section of the city was almost wholly destroyed by fire; this was quickly rebuilt, and the city is now one of the most progressive and solidly built among the larger interior cities of the country.

Springfield, cap. Illinois (c. h. Sangamon Co.), is an important trade and manufacturing center in the great corn belt, and has extensive coal-mining, farming, horse and cattle breeding, and large manufacturing interests. Among the more important industries are watch factories, textile works, woollen mills, wood-working mills, machine-shops, boiler and car works, flour-mills, etc. The Illinois State Fair is permanently located here. Among the institutions of learning are an Ursuline Convent, a Lutheran College, etc. Springfield was first settled in 1819. It was the home of Abraham Lincoln, who is buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery.

Springfield, Massachusetts (c. h. Hampden Co.), is an important banking, manufacturing, and residential city in the center of one of the most populous and prosperous sections of New England. It has extensive manufactories of firearms, automobiles, railroad cars and supplies, envelopes, stationery, cotton goods, skates, printed books, and electrical supplies. The United States armory and arsenal are located here, and about 1,500 men are employed in making arms for the government. The French-American College, opened in 1885, and the International Y. M. C. A. Training School are located here. The public library contains over 150,000 volumes. The art and science museums, which are departments of the city library, are, perhaps, unrivaled in any city of similar size in the country. Springfield was first settled in 1636.

Springfield, Missouri (c. h. Greene Co.), is a trade center in a region known for its valuable deposits of zinc and lead. The chief industrial establishments are railroad shops, iron-works, machine-shops, wagon and carriage factories, furniture factories, etc. It has an extensive trade in manufactures, also in lead and zinc, and is the jobbing center of a large part of the southern counties of Missouri. A state normal school, a Roman Catholic academy, and a Congregational college are located here.

Springfield, Ohio (c. h. Clark Co.), is a railroad and manufacturing center in a rich agricultural region. It has extensive manufactories of agricultural implements, gas- and steam-engines, piano plates, machinery in vast variety, tools, iron, steel, and brass goods, etc. In the vicinity are the state fraternal homes of the Free Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the Knights of Pythias. The Wittenberg College, founded in 1845 by the Lutheran church, is located here.

Srinagar, India (cap. Kashmir), was formerly a shawl-weaving center, but is now engaged chiefly in silver-working, carpet-weaving, and the manufacture of paper and leather.

Stamford, Connecticut (Fairfield Co.), is a manufacturing and residential suburb of New York. It has extensive manufactories of locks, typewriters, woollen goods, lumber, hats, shoes, machine-shop products, pottery, chemicals, etc. Several private schools of prominence are located here. It was settled in 1641.

Stanislau, Austria (Galicia), has railway workshops, tanneries, flour-mills, dye-works, and tile works.

Stargard, Germany (Prussia), has a cathedral dating from the 14th century. It manufactures machinery, and woollen and cotton goods.

Stavanger, Norway (cap. Stavanger), is a seaport with large fishing establishments. It has a cathedral in the Norman style, built in the 13th century and restored in 1866.

Stavropol, Russia (Stavropol), has flour-mills and gardening. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop.

Steelton, Pennsylvania (Dauphin Co.), is a manufacturing suburb of Harrisburg. The chief industrial establishments are steel bridge and construction works, blast-furnaces, rail and blooming-mills.

Stettin, Germany (Prussia), is a port and coaling station on the Oder, 36 miles from its mouth. It manufactures cement, clothing, machinery, sugar, chemicals, porcelain, and paper, and is one of the most important ship-building centers in Germany. It has churches of the 12th and 14th centuries, and a royal palace (1575).

Steubenville, Ohio (c. h. Jefferson Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural, coal, and natural gas region. Natural gas is near by, and is brought to the city by pipes and pumping. Coal surrounds the city and is mined extensively. Valuable clay deposits are in the vicinity and petroleum wells are within a few miles. Large quarries, which contain excellent building-stone, contribute largely to the prosperity of the city. Among the manufacturing establishments are iron and steel works, tin plate and clay works, potteries, glass factories, blast-furnaces, tube works, and nail factories. The city was settled in 1797.

Stillwater, Minnesota (c. h. Washington Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural region, and is extensively engaged in manufacturing, the chief industrial establishments being flour and feed mills, grain elevators, lumber mills, foundries, machine-shops, and furniture factories. The city has a large trade in logs, lumber and lumber products, wheat, flour, and live stock. It was settled in 1840.

Stockholm, Sweden (cap. Stockholm), is a port and coaling station at the outlet of Lake Malar, the chief naval station of the country, and the principal emporium for the commerce of central and northern Sweden. It is noted for its location and environs, and is remarkable for its numerous beautiful promenades and delightful views, especially on the Djurgard, with its outdoor museum illustrative of the national life, and the Scandinavian northern museum. The principal buildings are the Riddarholms Church, a large mediæval structure mostly in the Renaissance style, which is the Westminster Abbey of Sweden, being the burial-place of the kings and distinguished men of the country; the Royal Palace, a vast square in the Italian Style, built 1697-1753; the National Museum; the Northern Museum; and the Royal Library. Stockholm is the seat of the Swedish academy, the academy of sciences, the academy of belles-lettres, history and antiquities, and of a university. The industries include sugar-refineries, tobacco, silk, stearin, and tallow factories, linen and cotton weaving and spinning, also iron-foundries. Stockholm has a small export trade in iron, timber, and tar, but a large import trade. The harbor is closed by ice from three to five months every year. In the environs are several very beautiful royal châteaux in picturesque parks.

Stockport, England (Cheshire), has cotton manufacture, hat-making, iron-founding, machinery, and brewing.

Stockton, California (c. h. San Joaquin Co.), is the metropolis and chief distributing center of the San Joaquin Valley, and is located at the head of the all-year navigation of the San Joaquin River system, being connected with the river by a navigable channel 2½ miles in length. Stockton has a large trade in fruits, grain, hay, and other agricultural products. Among the important industrial establishments are flour-mills, agricultural implement factories, window-glass factories, woollen mills, coal briquette factory, machine works, and canneries. A state hospital for the insane is located here. The growth of the city dates from the discovery of gold in 1848.

Stockton-on-Tees, England (Durham), is a port on the Tees River, 5 miles from its estuary. It has blast-furnaces and rolling-mills, and its extensive industries include the construction of marine engines, bridge-building, ship-building, and railway material, and glass-bottle works. A castle was built here soon after the conquest; it was taken by the parliamentarians in 1644.

Stoke-upon-Trent, England (Stafford), is famous as the chief center of the porcelain and earthenware manufacture, with which the names of Wedgwood, Minton, and Copeland are associated. The Minton memorial building contains a free library and museum, and schools of science and art, and in the church is a monument to Wedgwood (died 1793).

Stolp, Germany (Prussia), has manufactures of amber goods, linen, and alcohol.

Stralsund, Germany (Prussia), has manufactures of playing-cards, machinery, electric lamps, sugar, and starch. It has a town hall dating from the 14th century, a high school from 1560, and an arsenal. It is notable for its successful resistance to the siege commanded by Wallenstein, in 1628.

Strassburg, Germany (cap. Alsace-Lorraine), is a fortified town and has many handsome public buildings erected mostly since 1875, namely, the university, imperial palace, library, and the provincial government building. It is the seat of a bishop, and its famous minster was founded before 1015, and completed in 1439. The principal manufactures are cigars, leather, surgical instruments, and machinery. Here the Emperor Julian defeated the Alemanni in 357. The town was seized by Louis XIV. in 1681, and capitulated to the Germans in 1870.

Stratford, England (Essex), is a suburb of London, and has chemical works, distilleries, and various manufactures.

Stratford, Ontario, Canada, is a trade center in a rich agricultural district and has locomotive repair shops, a fence factory, agricultural implement works, bridge and iron works, etc.

Stratford-on-Avon, England (Warwick), is famous as the birthplace of Shakespeare. The house in which the poet was born is preserved, as are also the site of New Place, where the poet spent his later years, and the cottage of Anne Hathaway, the poet's wife. The Shakespeare Memorial is a handsome building, erected in 1879 on the bank of the Avon, and contains a theatre, a library with a rare collection of Shakespereana, and a picture gallery. The parish church of Holy Trinity, dating from the 13th century, contains the tomb of Shakespeare. Another interesting building is Harvard House (16th century), the birthplace of the mother of John Harvard, the founder of Harvard University.

Streator, Illinois (Lasalle Co.), is a trade center in a fertile agricultural region in which there is considerable coal, fire-clay, and building stone. The manufacturing establishments include brick and tile works, glass facories, flour-mills, machine-shops, and foundries. The trade is chiefly in manufactures, coal, grain, live-stock, and dairy products.

Stretford, England (Lancashire), is an active center of the cotton industry.

Stryj, Austria (Galicia), has tanneries and manufactories of matches.

Stuttgart, Germany (cap. Württemberg), is one of the chief publishing centers in Germany, and manufactures furniture, pianos, chemicals, colors, chocolate, carriages, and leather. The old castle, now used as government offices, was built in 1553-70; the other notable buildings include the royal palace (1746-1807), polytechnic, conservatory of music, library, national industrial museum, and picture gallery. It is the birthplace of Hegel, Hauff, and Schwab. The counts of Württemberg took up their residence here in 1316.

Suchau, China (Kiang Su), is situated in the heart of the silk district, and is one of the wealthiest cities in China. It was almost destroyed in the Taiping rebellion, but has since largely recovered. It was opened to foreign trade in 1896.

Sucre, cap. Bolivia (Chuquisaca), is the residence of the archbishop of Bolivia, and contains a university. It was founded in 1539 by a companion of Pizarro, and was called Chuquisaca till the declaration of independence. It exports chiefly goods in transit.

Suez, Egypt, is a port and coaling station at the southern end of the Suez Canal. Once a flourishing emporium for Oriental trade, it fell into decay and until the opening of the Suez Canal, was a wretched village. The modern town is built on a desert peninsula. It exports chiefly goods in transit.

Sumy, Russia (Kharkof), has breweries, distilleries, tanneries, brick-fields, tallow foundries, and candle manufactories.

Sunderland, England (Durham), is a port and coaling station at the mouth of the Wear River, and one of the foremost steel ship-building centers in the United Kingdom. It has besides engineering, anchor, rope and chain cable works, glass-works, forges, and other industries. The parish church of St. Peter was founded in the 7th century by Biscop, in connection with the monastery where Bede became a student; St. Michael's (originally 10th century), contains some 13th century work. The town hall is a handsome modern structure.

Superior, Wisconsin (c. h. Douglas Co.), is a railroad and trade center, sharing with Duluth the commercial advantage of being the extreme western port of the Great Lakes system of the United States. It has three connecting harbors well sheltered and deep, making a combined length of 13 miles, with an extreme width of 3 miles. The principal manufacturing establishments are flour and lumber mills, iron- and steel-works, bag factories, cooperage, chair factory, wagon and carriage works, while lath, shingles, and other lumber products are manufactured quite extensively. It also has shipyards, coal docks of great capacity, large grain elevators, a large dry dock, and a number of wholesale merchandise establishments. The Finnish University and a state normal school are located here.

Surabaya, Java, is a port with the best harbor in Java, and is the naval and military headquarters of the Dutch East Indies. It has an arsenal, ship-building yards, and exports rice, cotton, coffee, and sugar.

Surakarta, Java, has an active trade.

Surat, India (Bombay), has manufactories of cotton and silk.

Swansea, Wales (Glamorgan), is a port and coaling station, the chief seat of the tin-plate manufacture, and one of the most important copper smelting and refining towns in the world. Extensive coal mines are near by. It is the seat of an Anglican bishop.

Swatow, China (Kwangtung), is a treaty port at the mouth of the Kan River, opened to foreign trade in 1869. It has large exports of sugar, tea, paper, tobacco, beans, and bean-cake.

Swindon, England (Wiltshire), has limestone quarries, and large locomotive and railway car works.

Sydney, cap. New South Wales, Australia, is a port and coaling station on Port Jackson, 4 miles from the Pacific Ocean. Exports wool, silver ore, gold, wheat, meat, etc. The industries include coach factories, foundries, engineering works, and cloth mills. Sydney has large and beautiful parks, and among its public buildings are St. Andrew's Cathedral, a fine Gothic edifice; St. Mary's Cathedral (Roman Catholic); the town hall, of vast size and possessing a very fine organ; the university, a fine edifice in the Gothic style; the Government House, in the Tudor style; and the Museum.

Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada, is a seaport, coaling station, and mining town on Cape Breton Island. It has large steel works, iron furnaces, coal mining interests, chemical works, etc.

Syracuse, Italy (cap. Syracuse), was in antiquity a famous city of Sicily, founded by Corinthian settlers about 733 B. C. The colonists seem to have occupied the little island of Ortygia, stretching southeast from the shore; but later the city extended to the mainland. The seat successively of "tyranny" and democracy, Syracuse was involved in a great struggle with Athens (415-414 B. C.) and the celebrated siege in which it came off victorious. Dionysius' fierce war with Carthage (397 B. C.) raised the renown of Syracuse still higher. In 212 B. C. the city was conquered by the Romans after a two years' siege, it having sided with the Carthaginians. Under the Romans Syracuse slowly declined, though with its handsome public buildings and its artistic and intellectual culture, it always continued to be the first city of Sicily. It was captured and burned by the Saracens in 878 A. D., and after that sank into complete decay. The modern city (Siracusa) is confined to the original limits, Ortygia, which, however, is no longer an island, but a peninsula. It has a cathedral (the ancient temple of Minerva), a museum of antiquities, a public library, the fountain of Arethusa (its waters mingled with sea-water since the earthquake of 1170), and remains of temples, aqueducts, the citadel Euryalus, a Greek theatre, a Roman amphitheatre, and quarries, besides ancient Christian catacombs. It carries on a brisk trade in fruits, oil, and wine.

Syracuse, New York (c. h. Onondaga Co.), is, in point of population, the fourth city of the state, and the commercial metropolis of central New York. It is an important railroad and manufacturing center, and has a large wholesale trade in merchandise. It has extensive manufactures of typewriters, automobiles, iron and steel products, etc. The salt industry, formerly important here, is now a relatively small item in the business of the city, but the water from the salt springs in the marshes bordering on Onondaga Lake, has become both indispensable and profitable, through combination with limestone in a chemical process, for the production of sodium nitrate and its by-products. Syracuse University, comprising the departments of liberal arts, fine arts, law, medicine, and applied science, with an attendance of over 3,200 students, a faculty of nearly 220, and a library of 90,000 volumes, was chartered in 1870 under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal church; it is among the largest educational institutions of the United States and maintains a high standard of scholarship. The annual State Fair is permanently located here.

Syzran, Russia (Simbirsk), is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop, and has a cathedral dating from the 18th century. There are tanneries, iron and steel foundries, distilleries, breweries, dye-works, brick works, and manufactures of agricultural machinery.

Szegedin, Hungary, has manufactures of soap and cloth, ship-building yards, and is the trade center of a large and fertile agricultural region. It suffered terribly from floods in 1879, when about 2,000 people lost their lives.

Szekerestfejarvar, Hungary, manufactures knives and soap and has an extensive trade in wine.

Szentcs, Hungary, has a large trade in agricultural produce.

Tabriz, Persia, is the most important commercial center of northwestern Persia, and exports dry fruit, raisins, cotton, and carpets. The principal features of the town are the blue mosque and a famous tower built by Greeks.

Tacoma, Washington (c. h. Pierce Co.), is an important port and railroad terminus at the head of navigation on Puget Sound. It has a harbor, with warehouses, elevators, and extensive railroad trackage, extending for many miles along its deep water front, affording excellent facilities for its enormous distributing trade in wheat, lumber, coal, and merchandise. This city is tributary to one of the richest farming sections of the Northwest. It has extensive manufactures of lumber and lumber products, car shops, rolling-mills, shipyards, packing-houses, furniture factories, smelting works, flour-mills, and iron-foundries. Puget Sound University (Methodist), Pacific University (Lutheran), Whitworth College (Presbyterian), and numerous other educational institutions are located here. Tacoma was laid out in 1868 and was incorporated as a city in 1883.

Taganrog, Russia (Don Cossacks), is a port on the Gulf of Taganrog, with large exports of grain. There are tanneries, macaroni and tobacco manufactures, tallow foundries, and fisheries. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop.

Talca, Chile (cap. Talca), is an important trade center.

Tambof, Russia (cap. Tambof), has manufactures of tallow, soap, candles, woollens, sail-cloth, tobacco, oil, and tiles, also iron-foundries, distilleries, breweries and alum works. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop.

Tammerfors, Russia (Finland), has paper, cotton, linen, and woollen mills.

Tampa, Florida (c. h. Hillsboro Co.), is an important railroad terminus and port of entry on Tampa Bay, 29 miles from the Gulf of Mexico. It has the best harbor on the western coast of Florida, and regular steamer connections with all of the large Gulf ports, also with several of the Atlantic ports. In the vicinity are large mines of phosphate. Lumber and naval stores are largely produced and shipped. The chief manufacturing industry is connected with the tobacco product, the supplies coming largely from Cuba; the imports of this product largely exceed those of any other United States port except New York. It is a famous winter resort, and has several large hotels. Tampa is the historical landing-place of Narvaez and De Soto, leading ill-fated early Spanish expeditions. Its first settlement began with the establishment of the United States military post of Fort Brooke during the war with the Seminole Indians.

Tampico, Mexico (Tamaulipas), has an excellent harbor and is a modern, progressive shipping and manufacturing city. It exports precious metals, coffee, goatskins and fiber.

Tamsul, Japan (Formosa), is a treaty port.

Tananarivo, cap. Madagascar, Africa, is the chief town of Madagascar, and was for over a century the capital of the Hova chiefs.

Tangier, Morocco, is a fortified seaport and health resort on the Strait of Gibraltar. It is the chief commercial city of Morocco, and the diplomatic headquarters. Here are a great mosque, a castle, the sultan's palace, and the governor's residence. The chief exports are cattle, eggs, slippers, goatskins, and woollens. It was ceded to England in 1662 as part of the dowry of Catherine of Braganza, wife of Charles II.; but in 1684 it was given up to Morocco.

Tanjore, India (Madras), has a Hindu temple, a dismantled fort, and a palace, and is noted for its silks, carpets, jewels, and inlaid metal-work.

Tanta, Egypt, is noted for its fairs.

Taranto, Italy (Lecce), is a fortified seaport, and has a naval arsenal and two harbors. Oyster and mussel fisheries are the chief industries, with manufacture of barrels, soap, oil, velvets, and cottons. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop, and the cathedral and the episcopal palace are among the principal buildings. The city was famous in antiquity and known as Tarentum.

Tarbes, France (cap. Hautes-Pyrénées), has manufactures of coarse woollen goods, machinery, cannon, and paper. It has a cathedral dating from the 12th century.

Tarnopol, Austria (Galicia), has brewing, distilling, and corn-milling industries.

Tarnow, Austria (Galicia), has manufactures of agricultural implements and glass.

Tarragona, Spain (cap. Tarragona), is an ancient Græco-Roman city, once the capital of Roman Eastern Spain (Tarraco). It has important ruins—cyclopean walls, palace of Augustus, and a fine aqueduct. It is one of the best ports on the Mediterranean, with large exports of wine and fruit, and a busy weaving industry.

Tashkend, Russia (cap. Russian Turkestan), has an astronomical observatory. Silk, leather, and metal goods are manufactured.

Taunton, Massachusetts (c. h. Bristol Co.), is an important cotton manufacturing and trade center. It has manufactures of cutlery, tools, nails, jewelry, machinery, silverware, stoves, etc. A state insane hospital, with over 1,000 patients, is located here. It was settled in 1638.

Tegucigalpa, cap. Honduras, Central America, has a cathedral and a university. In the vicinity are gold, silver, and copper mines.

Teheran, cap. Persia, is the center of some caravan trade, but has little commercial importance. About 12 miles from it is the royal mosque of Shah-Abdul-Azim, where Nasr-ed-Din Shah was assassinated in 1896.

Temesvar, Hungary, is a fortified town, and has manufactures of tobacco, cloth, paper, leather, and oil. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic and of a Greek Orthodox bishop. Its castle was founded by Hunyady in 1442, and its Roman Catholic cathedral by Maria Theresa in 1736-57. Held by the Turks from 1552 to 1716, Temesvar was retaken by Prince Eugene.

Teplitz, Austria (Bohemia), is a watering-place, with alkaline-saline mineral springs (73.5° to 98.5° F.) which were known to the ancient Germans. In the vicinity are lignite mines. It has manufactures of pottery, chemicals, cotton, lace, machinery, and furniture.

Teramo, Italy (cap. Teramo), has silk-spinning and manufactures of pottery and leather. Its cathedral dates from the 14th century.

Terre Haute, Indiana (c. h. Vigo Co.), is a railroad and trade center in a rich agricultural region, with extensive coal-fields near by. It has a large distributing trade in coal, and the manufacturing industries embrace rolling-mills, foundries, flour-mills, car works, railroad shops, glass factories, etc. In the vicinity are large deposits of shale and clay, and a number of clay plants are in operation near by. A state normal school and several other educational institutions are located here. It is one of the oldest settlements in the state, and was laid out as a city in 1816.

Theodosia, Russia (Taurida), is a port on the Black Sea. It has a college, and a museum rich in local antiquities. As "Kafra of the Genoese," it was the most famous medieval port on the Black Sea, but it had a long and prosperous existence as a Milesian colony in pre-Christian times.

Thorn, Germany (Prussia), is a fortified town, and has manufactures of machinery, soap, and tobacco, and iron-foundries. It was founded by the Teutonic Knights, in the 13th century, and was a member of the Hanseatic League. It was ceded by the Knights to Poland in 1466, and remained in that country's possession until 1793. It is the birthplace of the astronomer Copernicus.

Three Rivers, Quebec, Canada, is a port of entry on the St. Lawrence River. It has a Roman Catholic cathedral, convents and a college. Its industries include several lumber mills, foundries, cotton mills, etc.

Tientsin, China (Chili), is a treaty port on the Huen River, 80 miles from its mouth. It is the port of supply for the whole of China north of the Yangtze River. Skins, wool, tea, wood, coal, and gold are the chief exports. The treaty of 1858; the occupation by the allies in the winter of 1860-1; the massacre of Roman Catholics and other foreigners, June 21, 1870; the bombardment of foreign settlements, June 17 to July 14, 1900; the capture of the city by the allied forces, July 15, 1900; and the administration of Tientsin by foreign provisional government until Aug. 15, 1902, are the most notable events of recent years.

Tiffin, Ohio (c. h. Seneca Co.), is a commercial and industrial center in an agricultural region. In the vicinity are deposits of clay and glass sand. The manufacturing establishments are glass-works, potteries, woolen mills, iron-works, and furniture factories. Heidelberg University, opened in 1850 and having an attendance of over 400 students, and Ursuline College are located here. It was settled in 1817.

Tlemcen, Algeria, has manufactures of arms, morocco leather, and carpets.

Tobolsk, Siberia (cap. Tobolsk), has a kremlin, cathedral, monument to Yermak, also residences of the governor, and of the archbishop of Tobolsk and Siberia. Tobolsk was founded in 1587.

Tokat, Turkey in Asia, has manufactures of copper ware and leather. It was the scene of an Armenian massacre in November, 1895.

Tokushima, Japan (cap. Tokushima), is a trade center.

Tokyo, cap. Japan (Tokyo), contains the Mikado's palace, the government offices, the imperial university, and diplomatic residences. Large vessels lie 5 or 6 miles from the city, and the trade is conducted at Yokohama, 18 miles distant by railway. Its importance dates from 1590, when it fell into the hands of Iyeyasu, who, in 1603, became Shogun and made it his capital.

Toledo, Ohio (c. h. Lucas Co.), is an important railroad and commercial center on the Maumee River, 6 miles from Lake Erie, with a large transshipment trade in coal, grain, iron ore, timber, etc. The location of Toledo at the western end of Lake Erie makes it a most convenient shipping point for a large portion of the "winter wheat belt," and it is one of the most important primary grain markets of the United States, after Chicago. It has many large grain elevators. Toledo is also the leading clover-seed market of the world, and its quotations govern the prices of clover-seed for the United States. It is also one of the largest shipping ports in the world for soft coal, which comes by rail from the mines of West Virginia, southern and eastern Ohio, and Pennsylvania, and is transported by water to all ports on the upper lakes. Among its leading manufacturing establishments are steel-mills, blast-furnaces, glass-works, iron-works, malleable iron works, automobile works, flour-mills, spice-mills, scale works, distilleries, petroleum refineries, etc. It was settled in 1817.

Toledo, Spain (cap. Toledo), is a romantic Moorish walled city situated on the Tagus. It was the capital of Gothic Spain, and of an independent kingdom under the Moors. It was captured by Alfonso VI., who made it the capital of Castile in 1085. Its superb Gothic cathedral is only rivalled in Spain by that of Burgos, and its Moorish and Mudejar remains are of the highest interest. Its swords were once famous throughout the world, and a large trade in steel cutlery is still carried on, as well as some cloth weaving.

Toluca, Mexico (cap. Mexico), has cotton-mills and breweries.

Tomsk, Siberia (cap. Tomsk), has a university, opened in 1888, and other educational institutions. It has considerable trade.

Tonopah, Nevada (c. h. Nye Co.), is an important gold-mining center. It has considerable trade in merchandise with outlying mining camps.

Topeka, cap. Kansas (c. h. Shawnee Co.), is an important railroad and commercial center with coal-mines and stone-quarries in the vicinity. It has large railroad shops, several flour-mills, foundries, machine-shops, lumber mills, boiler factories, etc. The city is an important center of wholesale trade. The State Capitol is a handsome stone edifice, and there are also located here the state asylum for the insane, a state reform school, etc. It is the seat of Washburn College, Kansas Medical College, and several other educational institutions. It was settled in 1854.

Toronto, cap. Ontario, Canada, is a port on Lake Ontario, and, in size, is the second city of Canada. It has many public buildings of architectural merit. It is the seat of the University of Toronto, Trinity College, and several other educational institutions of note. Toronto is the see of an Anglican bishop and of a Roman Catholic archbishop. It has a public library, as well as the university and the legislative libraries. There are foundries, agricultural implement works, machine-shops, breweries, a very large distillery, tanneries, soap-works, and canning and packing establishments. The city was founded (as York) in 1794 by Governor Simcoe, and it has been the capital of the province since 1797.

Torquay, England (Devon), is a seaside resort. Some remains exist of Tor Abbey, and about a mile from the center of the town is Kent's Hole, a noted bone cavern.

Torre del Greco, Italy (Naples), is a seaport, a fishing town, and seaside resort at the base of Mt. Vesuvius. It has frequently suffered from the eruptions of Vesuvius. Coral working is the leading industry.

Torreón, Mexico (Coahuila), is an industrial and commercial center in a cotton growing section.

Tortosa, Spain (Tarragona), has a magnificent Gothic cathedral dating from the 14th century.

Totonicapam, Guatemala, Central America, has manufactures of textiles, pottery, and woodenware.

Tottenham, England (Middlesex), is a suburb of London.

Toulon, France (Var), is the chief naval port of France on the Mediterranean. It is strongly fortified, and has a government arsenal, nautical museum, etc. There is a dock area of 740 acres, with 80 acres of deep water floating docks, which will hold the largest ships. Toulon was the Greek Telonion and the Roman Telo Martius. In the 17th century its arsenal and dockyards were begun by Vauban. Both were destroyed by the British in 1793.

Toulouse, France (cap. Haute-Garonne), has manufactures of silks, woollens, leather, copper, and cannon. Among its interesting buildings are the Romanesque church of St. Sernin (Saturnin), consecrated 1096, and the cathedral of St. Etienne (13th century). The museum contains the ivory horn of the renowned paladin Roland. Toulouse is the seat of a Catholic archbishop, and has a university. Between 920 and 1271, it was the capital of the county of Toulouse, and became a center of Provencal troubadours. It was reunited to France under Philip the Bold (1271), and was the scene of Huguenot massacres in 1562 and 1572, as well as of Albigensian persecutions. Here, in 1814, Wellington defeated Soult.

Tourcoing, France (Nord), has important manufactures of woollens, also of cottons, velvets, and carpets.

Tournay, Belgium (Hainaut), has manufactures of hosiery, carpets, and woollen and cotton goods. It possesses a magnificent cathedral, which contains pictures by Rubens.

Tours, France (cap. Indre-et-Loire), has manufactures of steel and iron goods, glass and earthenware, and chemicals. Its 12th century cathedral contains a beautiful monument to the children of Charles VIII.

The ruins of the castle Plessis-les-Tours are in the vicinity. In 732, Charles Martel defeated the Saracens near Tours.

Toyama, Japan (cap. Toyama), is an important commercial center.

Trapani, Italy (cap. Trapani), is a seaport with exports of olive-oil, salt, salted fish, wine, and building stone, and manufactures of coral, alabaster, and mother-of-pearl goods.

Traverse City, Michigan (c. h. Grand Traverse Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural and fruit growing region. It has an excellent harbor, and is especially noted for the manufacture of oval wood dishes and corn-starch. It also manufactures fruit baskets, farming implements, flour, leather, foundry and machine-shop products, etc. The Northern Michigan Insane Asylum is located here. It was settled in 1852.

Trebizond, Turkey in Asia, is a fortified port on the Black Sea, with exports of cattle, hazel-nuts, tobacco, etc. Originally a Greek colony (c. 600 B. C.) from Sinope, Trebizond in 1204 became the capital of the empire of Trebizond under Alexius Comnenus; in 1461 it was captured by Mohammed II. of Turkey. In October, 1895, the town was the scene of Armenian massacres.

Trenton, cap. New Jersey (c. h. Mercer Co.), is located at the head of tide-water navigation of the Delaware River, and is an important industrial and railroad center. The State Capitol is a handsome edifice overlooking the river. A state insane asylum and a penitentiary are also located here. It has extensive iron-works, wire-works, machine-shops, potteries, rubber works, furniture works, watch works, oilcloth factories, etc. Trenton has a number of noted educational institutions, among which are the Model schools, the state school for deaf mutes, an industrial school for girls, a Roman Catholic College, etc. On Dec. 26, 1776, Washington crossed the Delaware here, and surprised and routed the Hessians under Colonel Rahl, following up this success by the battle of Jan. 2, 1777, in which he maintained his ground against Lord Cornwallis.

Trèves, Germany (Prussia), has manufactures of woollens, cottons, linen, and leather, but is especially noted for Roman remains. These include the basilica, or palace of Constantine, now used as a Protestant church; the Porta Nigra, a fortified gate dating from the 4th century; an amphitheatre, capable of accommodating 30,000 spectators; the imperial palace; baths, in capital preservation; and the piers of the river bridge. In the cathedral, built on the site of a 4th century basilica, are preserved a nail reputed to be from the cross, and the "Holy Coat," brought to Trèves by the Empress Helena, and exhibited as lately as 1891 to 2,000,000 pilgrims. Other buildings are the Provincial Museum, the church of Our Lady, and the Municipal Library, containing very valuable manuscripts. Originally the capital of the Treviri, Trèves became a Roman colony, and during the 3rd and 4th centuries was a favorite residence of the Roman emperors. From the beginning of the 9th century till 1786, when the electorate was transferred to Coblenz, Trèves was an archbishopric of very great importance.

Treviso, Italy (cap. Treviso), has manufactures of iron goods, pottery, silks, and woollens. It is the seat of a bishop, and among its famous buildings are its 15th century cathedral (containing Titian's "Annunciation") and the Gothic church of S. Niccolo.

Trichinopoli, India (Madras), has manufactures of cigars, hardware, and gold and silver jewelry. It is a mission center for both Roman Catholics and Protestants, and has two colleges affiliated to the University of Madras.

Trient, Austria (Tyrol), is a fortified town, and has silk weaving, and manufactures of pottery and salami (sausage). In the neighborhood are vineyards, and quarries of gypsum and marble. It is the seat of a bishop. Here met between 1545 and 1563 the famous Council of Trent.

Trieste, Austria (cap. Coastland), is the chief port of Austria and a coaling station. It is the naval arsenal and storehouse for the Austrian navy. Ship-building is carried on, and marine steam-engines, anchors, ropes, soap, leather, and furniture are manufactured. Its trade in grain, wine, and oil is considerable, more than half being with the Levant and the Far East.

Trikhala, Greece (cap. Trikhala), is situated in a fruit-growing district, and has a trade in grain and tobacco, as well as manufactures of cotton and woollen goods and leather. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop. It was once famous for its temple of Æsculapius.

Trondhjem, Norway (cap. Sondre Trondhjem), is a port on Trondhjem Fjord. The Anglo-Norman cathedral of St. Olaf, the most interesting ecclesiastical edifice of Norway, dates from the 13th century, but all that remains of the original building, since the fire of 1530, is the richly adorned Late Gothic choir. The work of restoration was begun in 1861. The chief exports are wood and woodenware, copper, herrings, blubber, timber, and cellulose. Trondhjem is the seat of a bishop, and has an Academy of Sciences. The city, originally called Nidaros, was founded in 997 by Olaf Tryggvason, and was formerly the capital of Norway. It was in the middle ages a pilgrim resort (shrine of St. Olaf), and is now the crowning-place of the kings of Norway. King Haakon VII. and his queen were crowned here in 1906.

Troy, New York (c. h. Rensselaer Co.), is located at the head of tide-water navigation on the Hudson River, and is an important railroad and manufacturing center. The chief manufactures are collars and cuffs, laundry machinery, stoves and other iron products, electrical machinery, Bessemer steel, mechanical and mining engineering machinery, bells, paints, brushes, horse-shoes, etc. The Emma Willard Seminary, the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, a celebrated school, and other educational institutions are located here.

Troyes, France (cap. Aube), has manufactures of hosiery. It is said to have given the name to troy weight. The cathedral has a particularly fine Flamboyant western front, and the old abbey of St. Lupus contains the town library. Here was signed in 1420 a peace between Henry V. of England and Charles VI. of France.

Tsaritsyn, Russia (Saratof), is an important river port on the Volga. It has tanneries, breweries, brick works, manufactures of hydromel, mustard, conserves, and machinery; but fisheries and market-gardening are the chief industries.

Tsu, Japan (cap. Miye), is a port on Owari Bay. It has several fine temples.

Tucson, Arizona (c. h. Pima Co.), is the largest city in Arizona. It has extensive mining and cattle interests, railroad shops, and considerable wholesale trade. The University of Arizona is located here.

Tucuman, Argentina (cap. Tucuman), has a national college, normal school, and other schools. It has an extensive trade in oxen and mules, and is the center of the sugar plantation region. There are large groves of oranges and lemons in the vicinity and the city is considered one of the most picturesque points in the republic. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop. The Argentine declaration of independence was signed here on July 9, 1816.

Tula, Russia (cap. Tula), is the seat of a bishop, and has a kremlin of the 16th century containing two cathedrals. There are iron-foundries, tanneries, breweries, distilleries, sugar-refineries, and manufactures of arms, machinery, samovars, as well as of tiles, bricks, tobacco, confectionery, candles, and brushes.

Tunbridge Wells, England (Kent), is a watering-place. The springs (chalybeate) were discovered in the reign of James I. and were much frequented in the 18th century.

Tunis, cap. Tunis, Africa, is a port and coaling station. Several of the mosques are magnificently decorated, as is the bey's palace. The citadel contains a fine collection of antiquities.

Turin, Italy (cap. Turin), is an important railway and commercial center, the Mount Cenis and the Simplon tunnels favoring its transit trade. Electricity is used in most of the factories. Silk, woollen goods, paper, cotton, linen, hats, jewelry, liqueurs, and leather are manufactured. Wine and silk are exported. Among the older buildings are the Palazzo Madama; the Palazzo Carignano (now a natural history museum); the cathedral, built in the 7th century and rebuilt in the 15th century in the Renaissance style; the royal palace; the modern buildings include the Mole Antonelliana (containing the Risorgimento Italiano Museum). Picture galleries and museums are numerous and valuable—Royal Albertine Academy, Royal Pinacotecs, Museum of Antiquities, the Civic Museum. The university, founded in 1804, has over 2,600 students; and there are a school of engineering, a school of veterinary medicine, a seminary for priests, and a musical academy. Turin came under the rule of the dukes of Savoy in the 11th century. During the 16th and 17th centuries it was alternately under France and Savoy. It was the capital of the kingdom of Sardinia till 1860, when it became the capital of Italy, remaining so till 1865.

Tver, Russia (cap. Tver), is the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop, and has a kremlin; a cathedral (1682), containing tombs of princes of Tver; the church of the Trinity (1684); and an imperial palace, erected by Catherine II., with museum of ethnology and archaeology. It manufactures cotton, sail-cloth and other cloths, candles, linen, cordage, hats, bells, oils, and earthenware; has iron-foundries, breweries, distilleries, and dye-works, and is a prominent river port. In 1246 it became the capital of an independent principality.

Tynemouth, England (cap. Northumberland), is a port at the mouth of the Tyne River. It has ship-building and industries connected with shipping.

Udaipur, India (Rajputana), is the capital of a native state of the same name, and has considerable trade.

Udine, Italy (cap. Udine), has manufactures of silks, velvets, cottons, and leather. The castle, once the residence of the patriarchs of Aquileia, is now used as barracks. Among its other buildings are its Romanesque cathedral, the archiepiscopal palace, and the municipal buildings.

Ufa, Russia (cap. Ufa), is a river port, and has tanneries, tallow foundries, breweries, distilleries, brick works, sawmills, manufactures of soap, candles, gingerbread, and pottery. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop and has a cathedral.

Ujpest, Hungary, is a suburb of Budapest.

Ulm, Germany (Württemberg), is a fortified town and river port on the Danube. Tobacco, cement, machinery, and linen and cotton goods are manufactured. Ornamental pipe bowls and Ulm bread are characteristic products. The Late Gothic cathedral (1377) is second in Germany to that of Cologne, and its tower, completed in 1890, is 528 ft. high. Ulm was an important trade center in the late middle ages. Here, in 1805, the Austrian general Mack capitulated with about 30,000 men to the French.

Uman, Russia (Kief), has an agricultural college, and manufactures of tobacco, malt, candles, bricks, vinegar, also flour-mills and iron-foundries.

Union, New Jersey (Union Co.), is a residential suburb of Hoboken.

Upsala, Sweden (cap. Upsala), is the seat of an archbishop, and has a cathedral (built 1230-1435 and restored 1885-93), with the monuments of many kings and famous men. The university, founded in 1477, has the largest library in Sweden (300,000 vols. and 12,000 MSS.), and is attended by 1,500 students. Upsala has chemical factories, breweries, and brick works.

Uralsk, Siberia (cap. Uralsk), has manufactures of candles, soap, glue, and sheepskin coats, as well as fisheries, tanneries, distilleries, breweries, and brick-works. It has two cathedrals; one Orthodox, founded in 1837; the other, belonging to the Old Believers, founded at the beginning of the 18th century.

Urmia, Persia, is noted as a center of missionary activity, and is the seat of a seminary for priests, and a college. It is a summer resort of the Persian nobility. It exports raisins and molasses.

Uskup, Servia, is an important trade center which has leather, dyeing, and weaving industries.

Utica, New York (c. h. Oneida Co.), is an important railroad and commercial center in a prosperous agricultural and industrial region. The chief manufactures are hot-air furnaces, hosiery and print goods, men's clothing, machine-shop products, steam fitting and heating apparatus, tobacco products, lumber products, etc. It is a distributing center for an extensive region, and is an important cheese market; large quantities of flowers, especially roses, are shipped to the larger cities. A state hospital, the Masonic Home of New York State, and other important institutions are located here.

Utrecht, Netherlands (cap. Utrecht), has been since 1723 the headquarters of the Jansenists and the seat of their archbishop. Its university, founded in 1636, has 850 students. Textiles, machinery, chemicals, tobacco, bricks, and beer are the chief manufacturing products. Here was formed in 1579 the union of the seven Protestant provinces—the union out of which grew the nation of the Netherlands; and here in 1713 was signed the treaty of peace which ended the war of the Spanish Succession. Pope Adrian VI. was born at Utrecht in 1459.

Utsunomiya, Japan (cap. Tochigi), is an important trade center.

Valence, France (cap. Drôme), has manufactures of glass, silk, hosiery, and the printing of handkerchiefs. Its Romanesque cathedral was consecrated by Pope Urban II. in 1095.

Valencia, Spain (cap. Valencia), is the third city of Spain. Its cathedral, though much spoiled by restoration, has fine paintings of the Valencian school; and many pictures by Ribalta are in other churches and public buildings. Its university is one of the most famous, as the art school is one of the most important in Spain. Tobacco, silk, fans, and gloves are manufactured.

Valencia, Venezuela, is an important trading center situated in a rich agricultural region, and has an extensive trade in coffee, sugar, rum, cattle, and hides. It contains a cathedral built in 1813, a university, and a national college.

Valenciennes, France (Nord), has manufactures of coarse lace, hosiery, cambric, glass, and iron goods. The manufacture of Valenciennes lace has been discontinued for 50 years. The artist Watteau was born here.

Valetta, cap. Malta, is one of the most important British naval and coaling stations in the Mediterranean. The town with its two harbors and four dry docks, is defended by forts, partly constructed in 1530 by the Knights of St. John. Among the many fine buildings are the cathedral, the palace of the grandmasters of the Knights of St. John, and the university.

Valladolid, Spain (cap. Valladolid), was the capital of Spain before Madrid. It contains the royal palace of Philip III. and the palace of Cardinal Mendoza, now a museum. Columbus died and Cervantes lived here.

Valparaiso, Chile (cap. Valparaiso), is the largest town on the Pacific coast of South America and the chief port and coaling station of Chile. It has a dangerous open harbor which is being improved, and there are two floating docks, and a government mole with hydraulic machinery. It is fortified and has a naval school. It has locomotive and ship-building works, and exports copper, hides, wheat, and wool. The earthquake of August 16, 1906, destroyed many important buildings, but the city has been rebuilt.

Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, is a port and coaling station on an arm of the Strait of Georgia and the largest city of British Columbia. It is an important railway terminus and port of departure for Alaskan, Asiatic, and Australian steamers. Exports fish, lumber, gold, etc., and has railroad shops, ship-building yards, sugar-refineries, canneries, breweries, distilleries, cooperages, and manufactories of machinery, furniture, glass, etc. Vancouver College, affiliated with McGill University, is located here.

Varna, Bulgaria, is a fortified port on the Black Sea, and exports cattle, butter, hides, and grain. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox bishop. Here, on Nov. 10, 1444, Ladislaus, king of Hungary and Poland, was defeated and slain by the Turks.

Vellore, India (Madras), is a military station, and has an interesting old fort.

Venice, Italy (cap. Venice), is a fortified port and coaling station on the Gulf of Venice, ranking next to Genoa in importance. Exports textiles, grain, hemp, and glass and enamel ware. The foundations of the city rest on piles driven into the mud. Glass is one of its most famous manufactures; and beads, all sorts of Venetian ware, mirrors, mosaics, electric lamps, candelabra, tapestry, brocades, lace, velvets, silks, machinery and chemicals are also manufactured. Ship-building and the making of torpedoes are carried on. Among the many fine churches, the basilica of St. Mark is marked out as one of the three finest in Italy; others are the churches of SS. Giovanni Paolo (the burial-place of the doges), Santa Maria Gloriosa dei Frari, Santa Maria della Salute, San Giorgio degli Schiavoni, San Salvatore, and San Pietro di Castello. Other places and objects of great interest are the Academy of Fine Arts (containing Venetian canvases from the earliest times), the municipal museum, the quay Riva degli Schiavoni, the Rialto, the Bridge of Sighs, and the granite column, surmounted by the Winged Lion of St. Mark. The famous Campanile collapsed on July 14, 1902; it is now in process of reconstruction. After the fall of Napoleon, Venice was ceded to Austria; but the government was so oppressive that she revolted, and under the leadership (1848-9) of Daniele Manin she drove out the Austrians and joined in the struggle for Italian independence. Even after the failure of Charles Albert's expeditions into Lombardy, she refused to yield, and was only reduced, after a year's siege, by famine and cholera. When Lombardy was freed in 1859, Venice remained under the Austrian yoke, and it was not until 1866 that she was united to the Italian kingdom.

Vera Cruz, Mexico (Vera Cruz), is the chief port of Mexico, with exceptional facilities for a large and growing trade. Its exports consist principally of ores, coffee, tobacco, hides, dyewoods, and drugs. It was founded at the close of the 16th century, and was taken by General Scott in 1847.

Vercelli, Italy (Novara), is an important railroad center and has manufactories of cotton and woollen goods, silks, and machinery. The church of St. Andrea dates from the 13th century, and there is a museum of Roman antiquities.

Verona, Italy (cap. Verona), is a fortified city, and has manufactures of nails, pianos, organs, cotton and silk goods, paper, and flour, and trade in fruit, wines, and marble. The Gothic cathedral dates from the 12th century, and contains a fine Assumption by Titian; the very fine Romanesque church of San Zeno Maggiore stands in the west corner of the city. Verona was originally a Celtic foundation, but became a Roman colony with the title of Augusta. In the later empire it was often a residence of the court. It possesses a Roman amphitheater, also a few remains of a theater, and of an ancient gate, and wall of Gallienus, erected in 265 A. D.

Verviers, Belgium (Liège), has long been noted for woollens, and has large manufactures of woollen yarn.

Viborg, Russia (Finland), is a fortified town and naval station, with manufactures of machinery and soap, and an export trade in timber, iron, paper, tar, tallow, fish, and butter. It is the seat of a Greek Orthodox archbishop, and has a fine cathedral. It has a naval school, and Russian, Swedish, and Finnish colleges.

Vicenza, Italy (Vicenza), has manufactures of silk, woollen and cotton goods, and pottery. Its Gothic cathedral dates from the 13th century.

Vicksburg, Mississippi (c. h. Warren Co.), is the largest city of the state, and a trade center in an agricultural region, of which cotton is the principal product. It is situated on the Mississippi River and has excellent railroad facilities. The chief manufacturing establishments are cottonseed-oil mills, planing mills, railroad shops, foundries, and machine-shops. A Roman Catholic college for boys and a colored college are located here. The National Cemetery above the city contains over 16,000 graves. The name of Vicksburg is well known from its prominence in the Civil War, when, as the key of the Mississippi, it was strongly fortified and garrisoned by the Confederates. After baffling Farragut and Sherman in 1862, it was finally captured by Grant in 1863, in a campaign which cost him 9,000 men.

Victoria, Brazil (cap. Espirito Santo), exports coffee, sugar and rice.

Victoria, cap. British Columbia, Canada, is a port and coaling station on Juan de Fuca Strait, and a tourist resort. It has one of the best harbors on the Pacific coast, and is a port of call for transpacific steamships running to Vancouver, Seattle, and Tacoma. It has extensive sawmills, ship-building and iron-working plants, fish canneries, and chemical and other factories. It exports lumber, fish, and agricultural produce. Its leading architectural features are the Parliament buildings, government house, the Canadian Pacific hotel, post-office, and churches. The climate is mild, the rainfall small, and it is noted for its natural beauty. There is a Canadian garrison in the city.

Vienna, Austria (cap. Lower Austria), is the chief commercial and industrial city of the country, and an important railway and waterway center. It has extensive manufactures of iron and steel goods, silk, cotton, furniture, fancy goods, leather, and bronze, as well as breweries and distilleries; and has a large trade in grain, cattle, wood, and manufactured articles. Vienna is one of the handsomest of European cities, and although an ancient place, is of modern aspect, having been almost completely rebuilt in the last 50 years. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic archbishop and possesses the famous cathedral of St. Stephen (1300-1510). Among the principal buildings are the Hofburg, or Imperial Palace, containing many historic relics, such as the coronation regalia of Charlemagne, the famous diamond of Charles the Bold of Burgundy, etc.; the magnificent Parliament House; the City Hall; the Opera House; the Museum of Natural History; and the magnificent Picture Gallery, rich in canvases by Dürer, Rubens, and the Venetian masters. It is the seat of a famous university, founded in 1365; of an Academy of Sciences; of a great number of technical and special schools; and of two rich libraries. Vienna became the capital of the Hapsburg dominions in 1276; was occupied by the French in 1805 and in 1809; and was the scene of a revolutionary outbreak in 1848.

Villa Rica, Paraguay, is the center of an agricultural region, producing tobacco, cotton, and oranges.

Warrington, England (Lancashire), has iron manufactures.

Warsaw, Russia (cap. Poland), was formerly the capital of the kingdom of Poland. The palaces are now put to municipal use; the Casimir Palace is occupied by the university, which is attended by over 1,500 students. Iron and steel goods, machinery, carriages, plated goods, and boots and shoes are manufactured. Trade is carried on in grain, leather, sugar, and coal; the wool and hop fairs are important. Warsaw was the residence of the dukes of Mazovia till 1526. In 1609 it superseded Krakow as the capital of Poland. It was taken by the Swedes in 1655 and 1656, and was captured by the Russians in 1764 and 1794. In 1807 it was made capital of the duchy of Warsaw, and in 1813 came entirely under Russian rule.

Washington, District of Columbia, is the capital of the United States, lies on the left bank of the Potomac, 156 miles from the Chesapeake Bay, and is, in many respects, one of the most beautiful cities of the United States. The present site of the national capital was selected in 1790, mainly through the agency of George Washington; and the Federal District of Columbia, 100 square miles in area, was set apart for this purpose, on territory ceded by Maryland and Virginia. The Virginia portion of the district was, however, retroceded in 1846, and the present area of the District of Columbia is 69 square miles. The commerce and manufactures of Washington are relatively unimportant, and its prosperity depends on its position as the seat of Congress and the Government Offices. There are upwards of 50,000 army and navy officers and civil servants in Washington, and these, with their families, make up a large proportion of the population. It is emphatically the scientific center of the country and its many scientific societies have thousands of members. The sobriquet of "City of Magnificent Distances," applied to Washington when its framework seemed unnecessarily large for its growth, is still deserved, perhaps, for the width of its streets and the spaciousness of its parks and squares. The Capitol dominates the entire city with its soaring dome and ranks among the most beautiful buildings in the world. It is 751 ft. in length, from 121 to 324 ft. wide, and consists of a main edifice of sandstone, painted white, and of two wings of white marble. It covers an area of 3½ acres. The main building with its original low-crowned dome, was completed in 1827; the wings of the new iron dome were added in 1851-65. It contains the Hall of Representatives, Senate Chamber, and the Supreme Court Room. It stands in a park of about 50 acres in extent and near by are the Senate and House of Representatives buildings, two white marble edifices in classic style, completed in 1908, containing offices for the senators and representatives. The Library of Congress, an enormous structure of the Italian Renaissance style, 470 ft. long and 340 ft. wide, erected in 1838-97, at a cost of over $6,000,000, is rich in sculptural adornments and its interior is sumptuously decorated with paintings by 50 American artists. The library contains upwards of 2,000,000 volumes, over 100,000 manuscripts, and more than 100,000 maps, etc.

The Treasury Department, the oldest of the governmental buildings, is constructed of freestone and granite in the Ionic style. The city Post-Office and Post-Office Department building, constructed entirely of granite, occupies an entire block, and is one of the handsomest structures of the modern styles of architecture. The State, War, and Navy Departments occupy a large structure built in the Renaissance style and cover more than 4½ acres. The building commonly known as the Patent Office, but which is really the office of the Secretary of the Interior Department, is a large structure of white marble in the pure Doric style. The old building of the Post-Office Department, a structure built of marble in the Corinthian style, covering one block, is now occupied by the General Land-Office and Indian Bureau. The Pension Bureau is housed in a brick building in which are held many of the great functions known as Inaugural Balls. The home of the President is an artistically plain building of freestone painted white, from which it derives the name, "White House." The offices of the White House are contained in a low white building at the western extremity of a long colonnade extending from the White House. Directly south of the White House is the Washington Monument, a marble shaft 555 ft. in height, to the building of which almost every country on the face of the earth contributed a stone. The Washington Public Library, a beautiful building, the gift of Andrew Carnegie, was opened in 1902. The Smithsonian Institution, a building of brownstone in the ancient Gothic style of architecture, was built by money bequeathed by James Smithson, an Englishman. The policy of the institution is to encourage research, and it has been the chief promoter of scientific investigation of the climate, products, and antiquities of the United States. It possesses a library of 250,000 volumes and issues publications of great scientific value. The National Museum, which is under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution, contains valuable and excellently arranged collections of natural history, anthropology and geology, derived mainly through the scientific investigations of the United States government, and is housed in a large and dignified building of white granite, which has been designed to harmonize with the older public buildings of Washington built on classic lines. The Army Medical Museum contains a pathological collection, a collection of army and navy supplies, and a library of over 200,000 volumes. The Department of Agriculture occupies a new white marble and brick building, of which the wings were completed in 1908, and includes a herbarium and conservatories of economic plants; the grounds in front of it are devoted to an arboretum arranged by families. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where all of the paper money, stamps, and bonds are made, is near by. The Governmental Printing Office, the largest and most complete printing establishment in the world, is housed in a huge brick structure. Other large buildings are the Naval Observatory, the Naval Museum of Hygiene, and the Coast Survey. The Union Railway Station, completed in 1908 at a cost of $4,000,000, is undoubtedly one of the most successful buildings of the kind in the country. It is constructed of white marble, and is 630 ft. long and 210 ft. wide. The Corcoran Gallery of Art occupies a handsome white marble structure erected in 1894-7 and contains a large and valuable collection of casts, sculptures, paintings, and other objects of art. It has a school of art with over 300 pupils. Washington is the seat of many universities, colleges, etc. The Catholic University of America, founded in 1885, is situated in one of the northern suburbs and is one of the foremost institutions in the country for the study of advanced philosophy. Georgetown University, founded in 1789, and conducted by the Jesuit order of the Roman Catholic church, has all the departments of a modern university. Howard University, established in 1867, and supported almost entirely by the government, furnishes the negro with opportunities for an education. The George Washington University is another well-equipped university, having legal, medical, dental, collegiate, and scientific departments; it also has a school of diplomacy and jurisprudence in connection with its law school and a modern, well-equipped hospital in connection with its medical department. Trinity College, a Roman Catholic institution, designed for the higher education of women, is conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur. The Columbia Institution for the deaf and dumb, known also as Gallaudet College, founded in 1857, is one of the foremost institutions of the kind in the country. The American University, organized by the Methodist church, has a great future. There is a fine zoological garden in the environs of Washington.

Waterbury, Connecticut (c. h. New Haven Co.), is a commercial and industrial center, with extensive manufactures of brass ware products, brass castings, buttons, men's clothing, stamped ware, watches, etc. It has many educational institutions, and a public library containing upwards of 100,000 volumes. It was settled in 1677.

Waterford, Ireland (cap. Waterford), has Protestant and Roman Catholic cathedrals. Fragments of the city walls remain, including an 11th century tower. The harbor is formed chiefly by the estuary of the Suir and Barrow. Butter and bacon are the principal exports.

Waterloo, Belgium (Brabant), is a village, 11 miles south of Brussels, which gave its name to the decisive battle fought near it on June 18, 1815, between Napoleon and the allied armies under Wellington and Blücher, when the former was defeated. The result was the final overthrow of Napoleon, and his exile to St. Helena.

Waterloo, Iowa (c. h. Blackhawk Co.), is a trade center in an agricultural and stock-raising region. The chief manufacturing establishments are foundries, machine-shops, gas-engine works, automobile works, etc. It was settled in 1845.

CITIES AND TOWNS OF THE UNITED STATES

1910 CENSUS

In this compilation the official population figures, as determined by the Thirteenth (1910) Census of the United States, are given for all cities, villages and boroughs separately enumerated by the government officials; of the places not separately enumerated by the Census Bureau, and for which there are no government figures obtainable, recent estimates, supplied by local officials and by other reliable authorities, are given. Several states made enumerations in 1915 and, where obtainable, these new figures are given, notation being made following name of individual state. Capitals of states are printed in capital letters, and places having one hundred or more inhabitants are named. The index references enclosed in parentheses, indicate location of city or village on the accompanying maps.

Some comparatively unimportant places have been omitted from the maps to avoid crowding and consequent indistinctness in the engraving; such omitted towns will be found in the list, and their situation on the map, in each case, may readily be determined by means of the index-reference letters and numbers,
